Inopportune Deaths. Julius Caesar was assassinated when he had almost completed the task of consolidating the administration and dominion of the Roman empire, and his death opened the way to that despotism and corruption which ultimately undid his work. Henry of Navarre was killed when he had almost healed the differences between Catholic and Protestant, which subsequently rent not only France, but Europe, and William the Silent also fell when he was on the point of uniting the Netherland provinces into a compact barrier against the encroachments of Spain. In English history Lord Clive died at the moment when he was the one man who could have saved the American colonies and kept the Anglo-Saxon race united, but there is the case of Mirabeau. He was literally the one man in France who could have averted the horrors of the revolution, saved and reformed the monarchy and so spared Europe the murderous career of Napoleon and all the devastation it brought. If he had lived ten or even five years longer, the history not only of France, but of Europe and the world, would have been different. It is in fact sufficient to say that he would have made both Robespierre and Napoleon impossible. - Strand Magazine.

Pelican and Duck in a Duel. In Kew gardens, in the presence of a considerable number of spectators, an affair of honor was settled between a pelican and a duck. The birds had had words together, so to speak, and the pelican determined that the next best thing to making the duck eat his words was to eat the duck. So, after a little thrust and parry on the water, he made for the smaller bird and snapped it into his pouch. Then a battle royal began inside the pouch of the pelican. The duck struggled, kicked, quacked and occasionally managed to get a leg or a wing outside.

Who does not envy a baby its soft velvety skin? How many suffer from distressing skin diseases - Do you suffer? Have you tetter - salt rheum - scald head - ring worm - eczema - ulcers - blotches on the skin - chronic erysipelas - liver spots and what not else of these distasteful and aggravating disorders which disfigure and discourage? Dr. Agnew's Ointment allays the distressing itching, burning, stinging sensations which are part and parcel of such troubles, and in a thousand cases where internal treatments have failed to heal and eradicate them it has worked wonderful and permanent cures - and no skin disease, no matter of how long standing, has baffled its curative qualities. In cases of chronic eczema it has proved its great worth, and cases are on record where this dread affection has been the birthright of its patient and constant companion until past middle life, and Dr. Agnew's Ointment has cured speedily and permanently. It is a boon to mothers because it is a boon to babyland - scald head and its irritations, which are accompaniments to the teething period, are quickly driven off and restlessness passes away - and where torture reigned with baby this balm brought rest and a cure - it affords instant relief from the itching distress. . . . Do you suffer from piles - itching, blind, bleeding or ulcerated? - No remedy has brought so quick relief, spared painful surgical operations as Dr. Agnew's Ointment - it has proved itself an absolute cure for piles in all forms and at all stages - one application will relieve the itching, irritating sensations in an instant - and long standing cases disappear after from three to five nights' treatment - the pain and soreness quit you and the disease vanishes.

while his captor threw his beak high in the air, then dipped it into the water, and kept it there, as if trying to suffocate or drown its enemy. From the look of the agitated pouch it seemed as if the contest was by no means one sided but that the pelican was having rather a rough time. At last the duck got his head and one wing out, and then, with a magnificent effort, managed to get entirely free. Once again on the water, the duck declined further combat and fled, while the pelican remained, looking as if honor were thoroughly satisfied. - London Telegraph.

The Minnow Trap. The minnow trap used for catching minnows for bait is of glass, shaped like a jar or a bottle without a neck and of a capacity of six or eight quarts. The bottom of the trap rises in a cone, like the bottom of a champagne bottle, but instead of being solid the top of the cone is cut off, making an opening in the trap. The top of the trap has over it a metal cap on a hinge. The cap is perforated with a number of holes to permit of the circulation of water through the trap. The minnow trap is slung horizontally in a wire holder, which has a handle on top, to which a rope is made fast. Suitable bait to attract minnows is placed in the trap, which is then lowered into the water. The cone with the opening at the inner end in the bottom is in effect like the opening into an eel or fish trap. It is easy for the minnows to get through it into the trap in search of the bait, but hard for them to get out. When the trap has been raised, the captured minnows are got out by opening the cap at the other end of the trap. - New York Sun.

Vegetarian Crocodiles. A report by George Hoare, one of the officials of the British Central Africa protectorate, summarized in the local gazette, contains some curious details of the crocodiles of Lake Chiuta. They would seem to be strict vegetarians, for not only have they never been known to attack the men fishing in the lake, but their tracks were shown by the natives to the writer at a distance of several miles from its shores, whence they are said to travel overland in search of roots. This is contrary to the habits of all known species of crocodiles, which are, in the first place, purely carnivorous, and, in the second, so helpless on land from their inability to turn, except in a large circle, that they never leave the immediate vicinity of their watery or muddy home. Efforts will accordingly be made to obtain a specimen of this abnormal type of the formidable amphibian. - London Tablet.

Knew a Good Thing. About Ben Jenkins, may his tribe increase, Nodded one night over his pipe of peace And saw within his cozy little den An angel writing with a fountain pen. Blotting and squinting with a jab and a jerk, The vision tried to make the old thing work Exceeding laughter made Ben Jenkins choke But to the angry angel soft he spoke, "What writest thou?" The vision tipped a wink, Swore at the pen, refilled it with fresh ink, Gave it a shake, then said between his sighs, "I write the names of men exceeding wise." "And am I in it?" queried Jenkins. "Nope," The angel growled. "Then Abon lost all hope, But said, 'Pray, write at least that I forbore To teach the president to run the war.' The angel wrote and skipped. But the next night He came again and showed in letters bright The names of those who were by wisdom blest and, lo, Ben Jenkins' name led all the rest! - Town Topics.

A funny scene occurred many years ago in congress. A present of Arabian horses, a sword, etc., arrived from the imam of Maskat for President Adams. A western member with some heat moved that the gift should be sent back, with a letter from congress, informing the ruler of Maskat that the president of the United States was no king, but the servant of the people, and was not permitted to give or receive presents. Another member rose. "Such a letter, Mr. Speaker," he said, "can easily be written. But where is it to be sent? Where is Maskat?" There was no response. Apparently not a member of the house was prepared to answer, nor could Maskat then be found in any atlas published in this country. It was found at last on a German map. A civil answer was returned, and the geographers made haste to insert Maskat in the next edition of their maps. - Exchange.

The Other Way Around. The loyalty of the Scottish highlander to his kilt is a picturesque thing. He will never admit that it makes him cold, and highlanders who were suffering from cold in the ordinary dress of civilization have been known to substitute the kilt for it in order to get warm, though this would be much like removing one's coat and waistcoat and rolling up one's shirt sleeves for the same purpose. It is said that a stranger, seeing a soldier in full highlander uniform shivering in a cold wind, asked him: "Sandy, are you cold with the kilt?" "Na, na, mon," the soldier answered indignantly, "but I'm nigh kilt with the cauld!" - Exchange.
