PEACE!

The nation was startled through its length and breadth on Thursday by the announcement to accept the Austrian propositions for peace. One of the telegraphic despatches stated that she had unconditionally agreed to accept them; and that she had done so in the name of the Empress. "We have reason to believe," says the Daily News of yesterday, "that the despatch from Vienna is not a very rapidly worded, but approaches more nearly than those from Vienna and Dresden to the terms of the message received by the English Government. It is not, however, to be understood, has only accepted the Austrian proposals as the basis of negotiation. In like manner, Russia accepted last night the Austrian propositions. We do not mean to imply that the cases are exactly parallel. If we are to have conferences in 1856 as we had in 1855, we are to be hoped that the Allies will not be left upon their being held in Paris or London instead of Vienna; or in Brussels, if it is deemed necessary that they be held in neutral soil. But even if the Allies could not allow them to be held in Vienna, England will be much more efficiently represented there than was last year."

The Times of yesterday, referring to the same most point, asks, "What does Russia mean by an unconditional acceptance? We have held an acceptance of her terms in the name of the Empress how coolly she can disown it. Other despatches from Vienna speak of the terms as having been accepted by the Empress and the Emperor. Logically, there is no distinction between the two, for the foundation on which the negotiation rests must be accepted unconditionally, or it is no foundation at all. We must be somewhere, and that with which we begin must be unconditional; but we have had some experience how Russia understands those things which are meant to be unconditional. She has undertaken to do away with her preponderance in the Black Sea, and could be brought to assent to a treaty of carrying out the Convention which did not tend directly to defeat it. We don't believe that any of these difficulties will really be allowed to interfere with that peace which will be the result of St. Petersburg. We do not deem it necessary to its interests, but merely wish to cool the ardour of those over-zealous spirits who are in the habit of being already done, and that nothing remains in England and France but to ring their bells, light their bonfires, and pay the bill."

The excitement which has taken place when this intelligence became known was intense. The British Funds rose more than three per cent, and had been in the habit of rising in business the operations were enormous, a little dashed occasionally by the various readings which were given as to the sense in which the phrase "last night" was to be understood. But when it was positively known that Count Nesselrode had informed the Austrian envoy that the propositions were accepted purely and simply as the foundation of the preliminary peace, the minds of the dubious were reassured, and the value of the securities increased. The stock market, which had been in a very ready an immense impetus has been given to the general trade of the country, the result of this almost unhopful for state of things, respecting which nothing better than guesses could previously be offered, even by the best informed. The value, too, of many articles, which had been in the habit of falling since the war, has already suffered considerable depreciation, and the next few weeks and even months will doubtless exhibit the same feverish excitement in business. A time of transition like the present is one in which fortunes are made, and which may add to the general uncertainty about the future to keep alive anxiety and even fear.

If the tone of the leading organs of opinion in Europe be any criterion, the public mind, these peace proposals have not excited great enthusiasm, and nothing can show more clearly how strongly the main anxiety has seized upon the question of this country than the almost regretful way in which the consummation is in most instances referred to. It is feared, no doubt, that the peace proposals that most of the preparations for the next campaign are now completed—that the expense has been incurred, and that with the enormous pressure of war has been upon every public department, not only by us but by our ally, we should have made a demonstration of our power the close of the year, and that we should have humbled and prostrated Russia far more effectually than she has yet been a man whose blood is up, and anxious to fight it out, and so on. It is not, however, to be feared that she feels anxious when he is told that his opposition has had enough and is vanquished. As with our virtual ally, the Emperor, the Emperor, it is difficult at times to rouse, is not easily rallied, and even the disasters which we have experienced have stimulated a burning desire to restore the peace. It is not, however, to be feared that there can be no doubt that any sacrifices which the war might have demanded in men and money would have been cheerfully met and paid. The only condition exacted being that the conflict should be vigorously pursued. But all this is passion, not reason. It is not the result of the cool deductions of wisdom and philosophy. For ourselves, we have felt that if the assent of Russia could be had to the Austrian proposals, it would be foolish and unwise to prolong hostilities. Russia has certainly grown weary of the game much sooner than we anticipated. It is not, however, to be feared that she will be more than ready to accept the terms which we were led to expect; but there is this great advantage in arriving at a peace on terms which, after all, are not excessively humiliating to her vanity—namely, that she will have the less desire to rush into war again when she has recruited her strength. This is the first great advantage of the peace which will be launched the first week in August, and made her first voyage from Liverpool to New York.

Lord Panmure, Secretary of State for War, has been suffering, for some days past, from an attack of gout. He has, however, recovered, and has accepted his right hand.

The monster steamship now building on the Thames, and which is to be named the Great Britain, will be launched the first week in August, and make her first voyage from Liverpool to New York.

From the Illustrated London News.

A telegraphic announcement in the second edition of the Times under date of Vienna, Wednesday, ten p.m., states "that Russia had unconditionally accepted the proposition of the Allies for peace on the basis of the Convention." The Funds rose in consequence; but, as in well-informed quarters little credence was attached to the statement, the Mercury, Port, at a later hour, announced, on the authority of a telegraphic despatch from Sir Hamilton Seymour, that Russia merely accepted the proposition of the Allies on the basis of the Convention, the public securities again declined. In fact, the Russian answer amounts to little or nothing. It is a mere "yes" which the Emperor has accepted in the same manner the famous "Four Points" as the basis of a pacification, without, ever intending to make peace. The Emperor's answer is, however, purely grovel. What faith can be put in Russia at the present time? What is there in the character of Russia which would induce her to accept the larger basis, with a sincere object that she did the smaller one? Between an unconditional acceptance without parity, and the acceptance of the Convention, there is a wide difference. Of course the Allies will not, and ought not to, raise any difficulties in the way of a peace, but it is not for the diplomatist to talk the war must proceed. We hope that peace will result, but we are certainly not sanguine.

THE COUNCIL OF WAR.

Paris, Jan. 11.—The Monitor of this day has the following:—The Council of War met this morning at the Tuilleries, the Emperor presiding. The following were present:—The Emperor, the Emperor, Prince Jerome Napoleon, Duke of Cambridge, Prince Napoleon, Lord Cowley, Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, Admiral Dundas, Major-General Sir Richard Airey, Major-General Sir Harry Jones, General Count Della Marmora, Marshal Vaillant, Count Wlaskowsky, General Canrobert, General Canrobert, General Canrobert, Admiral Martineau, Admiral Henault, Admiral Jurier de la Grasse, and Admiral Renaud.

The Council is to deliberate upon the political considerations which might cause any one plan to take precedence of any other. Its object is to determine the best course to be pursued in the different military combinations which can be adopted, to foresee all possible eventualities, and to prepare measures to be taken in the event of their occurring. The Council is composed of experienced generals, nearly all of whom have taken a glorious part in the operations accomplished in the Crimea. It can be said, therefore, that the most eminent utility, as regards the best method of employing the military and naval force which the Western Powers are now preparing.

THE "PERSEA"—CONRAD STEAMSHIP.

The R. M. Steamship Persea, the new Conard, of the firm of Messrs. Behr & Co., of Liverpool, a distance of one hundred and seventy miles, in ten hours forty three minutes! This is at the rate of sixty miles per hour. After this it will be no wonder if the noble ship, as it will be passing strange if the noble ship does not accomplish the distance between Liverpool and New York in so many days. The Persea will leave Liverpool Saturday, Jan. 26th and great things may be expected from this her first trip across the Atlantic.

INTERVIEW TO LADIES.—The announcement of the Empress of the French is expected to take place between the 15th and 25th of March. Her Majesty is expected to be in London, and the Empress has determined to nurse the child to whom she is about to give birth.

OMAR PASHA'S DISASTROUS RETREAT.

ZIEWIE, Dec. 13.—It is with a feeling of no little regret that, after the lapse of a fortnight, I am compelled to date this letter from the same place as my last. The gleam of sunshine which then induced a hope of finer weather proved treacherous, and we lay until within the last day, being deluged with rain. Rather than relinquish without an effort the object which he had hoped to attain when he undertook the campaign, Omar Pasha determined to attempt to force his way over a flooded country, and across several mountain passes, to Kutais. On the morning of the 2d, the army received orders to march in the middle of a tremendous storm, and succeeded upon the following day in crossing the Elkoura, over which river Skender Pasha had constructed a footbridge with considerable ingenuity, but which was nevertheless almost immediately afterwards carried away. We then pushed on over roads knee-deep in mud, frequently delayed by rivulets which had swollen into deep rivers and swept down the precipitous banks which had been put up to supply the place of those destroyed by the Russians, and ultimately camped upon plains watered by the Skeusek. These were partially flooded, and the water was so high that the spots were found upon which to pitch the tents where the water was not more than two inches deep. Here the troops remained lying in mud and water for four days, with nothing to live upon but a short supply of biscuit and a few small articles. The most considerable tributaries of the Rhion, which always runs a volume of water, was about 200 yards broad, and its impetuous and turbid current was whirling down tree trunks as if they had been walking-sticks, undermining great portions of the bank, and there overflowing the adjacent country, and altogether presenting an aspect which put any hope of finding a ford within three or four days out of the question. The rivers in the rear, day after day continued to rise, and the line of communication was temporarily intercepted. The position of the army under these circumstances was becoming in the last degree critical. Some of the regiments had altogether run out of provisions, and the Turkish soldiers, who have not received pay for nearly a year, were buying biscuit from their more unfortunate comrades at 10 paras a piece. The fact, that the troops in some of the brigades were not supplied with provisions as they were in others, led to a want of proper arrangement on the part of the generals commanding. The state of the weather, however, would have rendered a retreat necessary, even if such arrangements had been made. The hardships and exposure which the men had been undergoing began seriously to affect their health, and it became apparent to Omar Pasha, that to linger longer in so unsuitable a locality would seriously imperil his whole army. He therefore issued orders to retire three days ago, and with heavy hearts we turned our backs upon the Russians. The Princess Dadian had here wisely determined to remain in her country, and she shot at the present the upshot of the campaign; it is now only to be said that she will not at present enter into negotiations with any Power hostile to Russia.

WINTER QUARTERS—SKIRMISHES WITH PRINCE GREGORY—BRAVERY OF TURKISH VILLAGERS.

REDOUT-KALEH, Dec. 20.—The terrific storms of the last week have obliged all the garrisons to get away, and seek at the moment to settle where they can find shelter here does not afford. The army has gone into winter quarters at Choloni, four miles to the rear of Ziewie, where the formation of the country offers great natural advantages. The Turkish garrisons have engaged himself here for the present, and is engaged in completing his winter commissariat arrangements. Meanwhile the enemy has not been idle. Finding that it was useless attempting to harass the main body of the army, he directed his attention to the Princess Dadian, at the head of about 600 Georgian and Iberian militia, surrounded Suggidi and forcing the unfortunate inhabitants of the neighboring villages to take up arms, under threat of burning down their houses. In case of refusal, he led an armed mob into the square before the gate of the night, and surprised an unfortunate garrison of 180 Turkish soldiers, who had been left there inviolated. Three or four of these were killed, and 32 taken prisoner, while the remainder of the garrison assembled hastily in the square before the Princess's palace, and not only offered a stout resistance, but charged their numerous enemy, who crowded the narrow streets, with such violence, that they killed 60 of them, among whom were eight boys, and utterly routed the whole force; after which, they barricaded themselves in the palace, from which place a messenger was despatched to Omar Pasha, asking for relief, at the same time assuring him that they were provisioned and prepared for a long resistance. Gregory, finding it was hopeless to attempt to dislodge these brave men, turned his arms against a Mingrelian Bey, who had taken up arms with the Turks, and obliged him to surrender. The Mingrelian Bey, in his romantic fortress, which crowns a hill-top, in regular feudal style. He, too, has applied for assistance, and Skender Pasha was sent to the relief of the Bey, with a detachment of troops, getting information of the capture of the enemy within a few miles of the camp, went out to meet them with a regiment of cavalry and a battalion of rifles under Colonel Ballard; placing the rifles in ambush, he waited until the enemy had advanced, and then precipitately took to their heels Skender Pasha then proceeded to Suggidi.
