All of these people serve you in useful ways through their jobs. But, like people in all walks of life, they may also be helping you in certain important unseen ways. Take your postman, for instance. He may have helped to build your home through his ownership of life insurance. It's possible—because the money of thousands of life insurance policyholders is invested for them in building throughout the nation. In the same way your milkman, lawyer or nurse may have helped build new highways, waterworks, schools, power plants or other essential public works in your community. For there are millions of people in these and many other occupations whose invested life insurance money works these ways for everyone's benefit. And—who knows—perhaps your job too was created by these life insurance policyholders' dollars, invested to develop new businesses and industries. Even your health may benefit because so many people own life insurance. Several medical research projects, supported wholly or in part by life insurance companies, are now seeking ways of checking diseases and prolonging life for all. So anyone who owns life insurance—including probably you—does more than provide financial security for his family. He also serves his fellow-citizens in all these useful ways!
