Verdict Expected Today In Trial Of Orwell Man

The verdict in the case of the Queen versus Roger Clarence MacLean, charged with murdering 52-year-old Walter Ross of Orwell on July 1, is expected to be known sometime late this afternoon. Evidence for the prosecution was completed shortly before six o'clock last night. The case has drawn considerable outside attention and both morning and afternoon sessions during the two opening days have been witnessed by a crowded courtroom.

Mrs. Walter Ross, wife of the deceased and mother of the accused, appeared in the witness box yesterday afternoon. Under cross-examination by J. O. C. Campbell, Q.C., Mrs. Ross told the court that there was some resentment by her second husband towards the children of her first marriage and she was worried at times when he came home in a belligerent mood after drinking. She added that although the two (Roger and Walter) got along quite well when he was sober, Walter Ross could become quite moody when he was drinking.

STORY OF EVENTS
Mrs. Ross' story of events that occurred during the night related the fact that Roger had come into the house at about 1.30 a.m. on Sunday, a half hour ahead of Walter. When Walter arrived he went upstairs and drank but he had been drinking quite heavily

THANKSGIVING WEEK

The Thanksgiving festival, an institution of American origin and dating back to Pilgrim days, brought to our provinces a touch of winter with snow flurries being the order of the day.

To the Pilgrims a bountiful harvest was really cause for thanksgiving, there were no stores to supply food and England was far over the water. A crop failure could mean starvation and even death for the pioneers and so with their barns and storages full the Pilgrims had real cause for rejoicing.

However, times have changed and a bountiful harvest may now mean increased surpluses and in turn mean headaches for both farmer and Government. Nevertheless no real farmer ever failed to take satisfaction in a good crop regardless of economic consequences. Conversely no farmer ever planted a crop hoping that it was going to be a poor one even though the price might be better.

FARM FORUM
For years, farm people across the country have asked that more of their own local problems be aired on Farm Forum Nights.

This year, there are no fewer than three occasions when just this will be done. Once this fall and twice during the winter months. Monday night will be set aside for a regional topic. They'll range all the way from Newfoundland to the problem of Suitable Crop Insurance on the Prairies. For the first regional topic on November 10 the Orderly Marketing of Maritime Products. The study material for the forums is being prepared by the Agricultural Officer of the Atlantic Province Economic Council.

FARM FORUM
The ultimate in modern packaging has now been achieved in the offering to the public of table turnips becomingly garbed and individually packed through the modern miracle of synthetic fibres.
