The bidding:
East South West North
1NT Pass 2♦ Pass
Pass 2♥ Dble.

Opening lead — ten of diamonds.

It is generally better to enter the bidding early rather than late. Less risk is attached to competing at the lowest possible level than to competing at a later stage when the level is necessarily higher.

Here is a hand that was played in a national team championship where the player with the South cards elected to take no action over East's notrump bid. (East-West were playing notrumps of the 13 to 15 point barity).

When the bidding died at two diamonds, South assumed he would find partner with some values, and decided to compete by bidding two hearts. West doubled, everybody passed, and South went down 800.

Had South doubled the notrump bid immediately, as he should have, nothing catastrophic would have occurred. Probably West would have said two diamonds, and that would have been the end of that.

An 800-point loss in a team game — in a hand where the best the opponents could do was wrap up a part score in diamonds — is quite a blow, even if the only thing involved is glory.

But peculiarly enough, the hand did not turn out so badly after all for the North-South pair. When the same hand was played at the other table the bidding went like this:

East South West North
Dble. 2♦ 4♦ 4♦

East's diamond bid was normal and so was South's double. West tried to shut North out of the bidding by jumping to four diamonds, but he didn't succeed.

North, a player unaccustomed to being silenced by the opposition, saw fit to bid four spades. East doubted that this contract could be made, and doubled. East was right — 1,100 points worth.

It is hard to believe such shenanigans sometimes take place in expert company. Bad as the first South's bidding tactics were, they were excelled in reverse by North when the hand was played at the second table. North out Heroded Herod.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints, each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

N X J Z P M, N W M D E L P J Z P Y; N W M J Z P V C U W G U W J G Z X J J Z P V Q W — F S C P.
