

A COUNTRY GARDEN

SUNSET FOR WINTER
 In the magic store-house of the heart.
 As many coins; some old, some new; some memories no grief can tear from me; some no fickle seasons can steal.
 Summer is there: Her rose, her blue sky.
 Autumn's rich legacy of golden leaves.
 Spring: when a bird or petal drifts by.
 Restless past May; but now, the snow is so beautiful in this present — Winter snow Spring's flakes through frozen shadows of hushed birds, wavering and Above white roof-tops, while in the
 snow Memory's new coins for Man in
 snow Deep in his brimming heart for ever more.

Harvard might give us memories so that we could have roses in December.
 As when some dear joy loses it's beautiful summer glow, think of the roots of roses are kept alive in the snow. Today a phone call from a friend asking how to cover her tender hybrid roses brought memories of the pleasure we get from our roses and other flowers in the garden.
 Perhaps at this season of the year when we have a little more leisure we can really enjoy them every bit as much in memory as when we are very busy in the summer time. All that is requisite is that we should pause in living to enjoy life, and should lift up our hearts to things that are pure good in themselves so that to have found and loved them, whatever else may be, may remain a happiness none can sully.

In Freedom of Spirit, the prophet writes: "You shall be free indeed when your days are not within a care nor your nights without a want or grief, but rather when these things girdle your life, and yet you rise above them naked and unbound."
WINTER READING Books help us to achieve the proper perspective of life and the winter months give us time for reading good books, within those silent chambers treasurer lies preserved from age to age, more precious far than that accumulated store of gold and orient gems, which for a day of need the Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs.
 These hoards of truth you can unlock at will. One reader of books says it is a great comfort to know that his books are near to be opened at will, and that there are a refuge-him in his life. Books set the spirit free. God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant and the dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages.

A good book is like a garden earned in the pocket, and gardeners need books in their making of a garden so given garden books this Christmas to your friends who are interested in gardening because happiness lies in our tastes, and not in things themselves; a man is happy in possessing what he likes, not what others like and we must remember this in our Christmas giving each year.
 Milton tells us how we must not read incessantly, and to his reading brings not a spirit and judgment equal or superior. Uncertain and unsettled still remains deep versed in books and shallow in himself crude or intemperate, collecting boys and trifles for choice matter worth a sponge, as children gathering pebbles on the shore. Someone has said "Show me the books you read and I will tell you what you are." Books are keys to wisdom's treasure. Books are gates to lands of pleasure; books are paths that upward lead; books are friends; Come let us read.

KASHMIR JOURNEY
 In an English magazine we read of a Kashmir Journey and it makes good reading this winter day. I left London on the afternoon of a Saturday and was in the capital of Kashmir: Srinagar by mid-day on Monday. It's true a permit is required for a tourist to enter Kashmir and I did set the wheels in motion some time before: so that all that was needed was a hasty journey between planes, through the leafy streets of New Delhi very early in the morning — as the doorkeepers and sweepers were just rising from their beds yet despite the early hour, the permit was quickly to the city.

 I changed to a smaller plane, which flies daily to Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir. We were soon in the air flying low over the flat Ganges plain, and below us stretched an endless mosaic of villages, repeating the same pattern of clustered mud houses, village pond, shady trees and paddy fields.
 Below the first folds of the hills began to appear and the plane circled round and round like a hawk, spiralling upwards, to rise above the mountains which encircle the Vale of Kashmir.
 In cloudy weather this journey is not possible, but on this occasion the pilot was able to find a clear way between the immensely tall cumulus clouds, which rode like galleons above the mountains.
 Below us, through gaps in the clouds, we could make out the har-pin bends of the road over the Banihal Pass, which is now the main motor road into Kashmir.
 In a few moments we were over the rim of mountains, and came down into a sunlit world of emerald verdure, and the silvery foliage of dried herbarium specimens. I had a little time to spare to visit some of the lakes and canals of the Valley, which I had heard so much about. So I hired a gondola, the one I chose was called "Green Garden" fitted with "full-spring seats" gaily upholstered in Kashmiri embroidery. The blue-eyed boatman and his small son piloted me away swiftly up a narrow canal, lined with luxurious looking houseboats, towards the Dal Lake.

There were many boats on the canal. Huge barges passed us, heavily laden with rushes for mat-making, or earth for adding to almost water-level cultivations, or wood for the winter fires of the town houses. Country canoes were continually passing, piled high with marrows, pumpkins, tomatoes and other solanaceous fruits, gathered from the prolific gardens lining the canals, on their way to the markets of Srinagar.
FROM LAKE BED
 These waterside gardens are built up from the lake bed by the continuous addition of soil to the surface, so that they stand out like small islands, almost completely surrounded by narrow waterways. They were at this time producing heavy crops of maize, which stood ten to twelve feet high, and patches of brilliant carmine celosia, the cocks-comb, which I was told, produced a dye used in Hindu weddings. No space is lost in these gardens; the cucumbers and marrows are trained on trellises set out over the water, so that the ripe fruits can be picked from a canoe.
 Further on we came to the floating gardens, which are perhaps unique. They are built up on floating mats of reeds, which are cut away from the edges of the lake. They are sown to a suitable place and anchored with long stakes driven through the mats into the lake bed beneath. On to these mats are placed small piles of soil, and in them are grown tomatoes, cucumbers and other fruits during the summer. There are stories of how whole gardens have been stolen, by simply pulling up the stakes and towing them away.
 After continuing our journey up corduroy in bold black and white stripes. It has three-quarter sleeves, a single button closing and two side pockets. Worn with the coat are fitted black corduroy cuffed pants.
