

Federal Gov't Facing Another 'Coin' Affair

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN OTTAWA - The Liberal government is facing another 'coin' affair, perhaps more serious than the controversy which raged three years ago over the firing of Bank of Canada governor James Coyne, in the opinion of Arnold Peters, MP for Timiskaming.

In an interview here, Mr. Peters said thousands of Canadians are incensed over their inability to purchase mint sets of 1963 Canadian coins. Thousands of orders for the new coins have been returned to prospective purchasers because the mint cannot produce nearly enough to meet the tremendous demand.

This new coin affair has very significant political implications and could blow up into a major issue when parliament meets Feb. 16. Mr. Peters said he has had more letters of complaint about this than he had in a similar period over the flag debate. Every MP he has talked to tells me the same thing.

Leader John Diefenbaker was among those present. The coffin was borne to the foot of the Tower of London and placed aboard a navy launch for the 14-mile journey up the Thames to Festival Pier. From there the coffin was taken to Waterloo Station for the trip to Bladon.

The service was led by the dean of the Cathedral, Very Rev. Walter R. Matthews. Without mentioning Churchill by name, the dean said he "was raised up in our days of desperate need to be a leader and inspirer of the nation."

A canon of the cathedral read the lesson, following which the congregation rose and sang "Fight the Good Fight with All Thy Might, another choice of Churchill's."

Other bishops present also present at the funeral were the archbishops of York, Armagh and Wales and the primate of Scotland. The Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, Dr. John Heenan, soon to become a cardinal, attended the service.

Following the archbishop's final prayer, and the singing of "God Save the Queen," came one of the most stirring parts of the service.

A trumpeter, high in the whispering gallery up in the dome, sounded The Last Post. The tones of the trumpet echoed softly through the vast cathedral. When he stopped, another trumpeter sounded Reveille to signify the spirit marching on.

Handel's Dead March in Saut was played on the organ and, as the bearer party of guards slowly carried the coffin from the cathedral, the congregation sang "O God, Our Help in Ages Past."

As the funeral cortege moved away from the cathedral for the trip by river and hearse to Waterloo Station, a fleet of royal limousines drew up at the south door of the church.

The Queen and her party were driven to Buckingham Palace. There the Queen was hosted at a luncheon for visiting royalty, Commonwealth prime ministers and representatives of France, the Soviet Union and the United States. Pearson and Opposition

Man Honored On Retirement After 39 Years

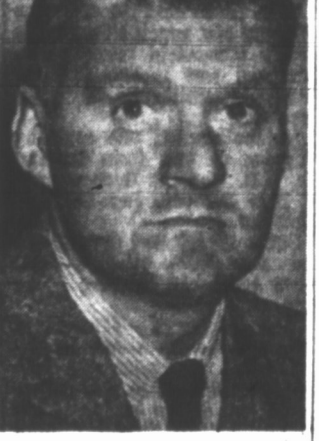

J. Stewart Bunny Moore was presented with a gift from fellow employees Saturday honoring his retirement after 39 years service with the department of transport and department of veterans affairs.

The gift, a travel case, was presented by William Kitson in a short ceremony at DVA offices. Mr. Moore served in World War I from 1916 to 1919. He left Charlottetown with a draft for the 3rd Siege Battery, went to France with the 12th Siege Battery and transferred over to the Canadian Corps.

Following the war he joined the Department of Transport and retired in 1956, after 33 years service. In 1959 he joined the staff of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

One of the Island's leading sportsmen, Mr. Moore was a member of the MacDonald Brier Curling team from this province in 1955. He is also an enthusiastic fisherman and hunter.

FOUR PLOTTERS ARRESTED KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) - Malaysian police have arrested four persons, including two leading figures in opposition political parties on charges of plotting to launch an armed revolution in Malaysia. Having been nominated for the office of Mayor of Montague, I would like to say that I am prepared to accept this responsibility if I am elected.

It is my intention to call on as many ratepayers as possible before election day and I will be pleased to answer any questions that you may wish to ask. We in Prince Edward Island are on the threshold of a new era, both in industry and tourism. If we are going to share in this progress we must be realistic, energetic, and unified in our thoughts and actions.

I feel sure that with their help and co-operation, I can give our Town Council the leadership and stability that will be necessary in order that we may become a part of this forward movement. If I am elected I promise:

- 1. That I will not undertake any major project that will cause a tax increase unless this is approved by YOU, the ratepayers, in a plebiscite. 2. That I will work hard and fairly for ALL the citizens of the Town.

Also we must face up to our responsibility of finding, and putting into effect, a sensible and organized snow removal program for the Town.

For a number of years there has been an obvious need for an improved water supply for fire fighting. The time for costly experiments at the expense of the ratepayers is past. This neglect can and will be corrected if I am elected on February 2nd.

GIANT CROWD ENJOYS SHERWOOD RINK

Sherwood rink on Maple Avenue was a busy place yesterday recording at 550 the largest attendance of the season. The rink recently reopened after the January thaw that curtailed operations at most outdoor rinks. The 90 by 180 foot rink is in its fourth year of operation and is under the directorship of the Sherwood Recreation commission. It is financed by donations from the community and by a grant from the physical fitness branch of the department of education.

MASSEY GIVES EULOGY

Mourning Ceremony Is Held At Ottawa

By BEN WARD OTTAWA (CP) - we thank God for having had him amongst us and take comfort from the knowledge that his memory can never die. Vincent Massey spoke those words for all Canadians at a simple, solemn National Ceremony of Mourning Saturday for Sir Winston Churchill.

The ceremony, held in the white stone entrance hall to the Parliament Buildings, was attended by 600 men and women from every facet of the capital's political, diplomatic, church and military life.

It began with a mournful tolling of the Peace Tower bell and a slow cannonade almost at low moment when Sir Winston's body was being lowered into a grave 3,000 miles away.

Governor - General Georges Vanier and Mme. Vanier headed the impressive assembly of mourners, a somber crowd in which the dark formal attire of the men and simple black dresses of the women contrasted with the occasional gilt-ter of military braid or the scarlet of an RCMP tunic. USE DAIS Nothing was added to the simple carved-stone setting, except a low carpeted dais set up in the main rotunda facing the audience, seated in two rows down the hallway.

There was no crape or funeral drapery. No picture of Sir Winston was displayed. The only spoken word at the 23-minute service, apart from the sharp commands of the military guard, was a 1,150-word eulogy by Mr. Massey, former Governor - General and Canada's high commissioner to Britain during the Second World War.

Subdued emotions broke to the surface momentarily when the muted band music played the opening bars of Beethoven's 5th symphony—the "V" notes that Churchill made the signal of an embattled Britain 25 years ago.

Another emotional moment came near the end of the ceremony when a solitary bagpiper paced a floodlit gallery above the audience, played a lament. Heads bowed and eyes were wiped as the doleful notes drifted down.

Acting Prime Minister Paul Martin, head of government during the absence in London of Prime Minister Pearson who attended the Churchill funeral, shared the dais with Gen. Vanier, Mme. Vanier, Mr. Massey and Senator A. B. Baird of St. John's, Nfld.

Gen. Vanier placed a 30-inch wreath of poppies and natural leaves at the base of the carved stone column that arches up from the main rotunda under the Peace Tower.

The wreath bore a simple white card inscribed in English and French from the people of Canada. Mr. Massey, 77, delivered the eulogy in a firm, resonant voice, switching at one point to French.

He spoke of Churchill's dynamic leadership, his inspiring oratory and his matchless presence. "His presence lives on, and nowhere more than in the halls of Parliament that were his other homes," Mr. Massey said. "He was, as he said, a child of Parliament; a man, it seemed, who walked with destiny, whose life was but a preparation for the greatest trial and his people's finest hour."

Now, "Winston Churchill has gone, to stalk history to its lair."

WORLD LEADERS

Continued from page one: War leader was born 90 years and 61 days ago, a son of another great British war leader, the Duke of Marlborough. Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill died Sunday, Jan. 24, 10 days after suffering a stroke.

Police estimated that almost 1,000,000 persons poured out of their homes in a raw wind to line the London route of march for Churchill's state funeral earlier.

Some sat in the streets all night to watch the procession from Westminster Hall to St. Paul's. Churchill's coffin lay in state in the hall for three days while 306,166 persons passed in awed respect and affection. This was more than the 305,806 who filed past the bier of King George VI in 1952.

PACK WHITEHALL The people packed Whitehall, Trafalgar Square, the Strand, Fleet Street and Ludgate Hill, leading up to the cathedral. The great doors of the cathedral swung open at 8:45 a.m., more than two hours before the service began.

Officers of Britain's Pack regiments - the Coldstream Guards, the Grenadier Guards and others - already were in position, resplendent in dress uniforms.

The official guests began to arrive at 9:40. President de Gaulle of France and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, former U.S. president, took seats under the vast dome of the cathedral. De Gaulle was wearing his brigadier-general's uniform.

Visiting royalty - King Baudouin of Belgium, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, King Frederik of Denmark, King Olav of Norway and King Constantine of Greece, took seats in a front row near the catafalque.

The catafalque, about five feet high, was covered with a wreath of black velvet trimmed in silver.

Television spotlights and cameras high up in the walls of the nave were directed at the area immediately under the dome where the catafalque rested.

The strictest royal protocol was observed. Members of the royal family "not being royal highnesses" arrived first. Then came the Queen, the Queen Mother and members of the Royal Family "being royal highnesses."

The Queen, Prince Philip and Prince Charles were last to arrive.

Then the funeral procession arrived before the cathedral. The 12 official pallbearers formed up to accompany the coffin into the cathedral. These included such warriors as field Marshal Earl Alexander, former Governor-General of Canada, and Admiral of the Fleet Lord Mountbatten, both of whom had fought under Sir Winston.

And there were the politicians among the pallbearers. Earl Ailes, 82, the former prime minister whose Labor party defeated Churchill's Conservatives the Earl of Avon, the former Sir Anthony Eden who succeeded Churchill as prime minister, Sir Robert Menzies, former minister of Australia, a former Conservative prime minister Harold Macmillan.

DEAN LEADS SERVICE

The service was led by the dean of the Cathedral, Very Rev. Walter R. Matthews. Without mentioning Churchill by name, the dean said he "was raised up in our days of desperate need to be a leader and inspirer of the nation."

"We shall commit his soul into the hands of God, the merciful Judge of all men and the giver of eternal life," the dean said, "praying that the memory of his virtues and his achievements may remain as a part of our national heritage, inspiring generations to come to emulate his magnanimity and patriotic devotion."

After a prayer, the organ boomed out the stirring music of the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

A canon of the cathedral read the lesson, following which the congregation rose and sang "Fight the Good Fight with All Thy Might, another choice of Churchill's."

Other bishops present also present at the funeral were the archbishops of York, Armagh and Wales and the primate of Scotland. The Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, Dr. John Heenan, soon to become a cardinal, attended the service.
