Jubilee Celebrations.

In view of the proposed celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee it may not be out of place to publish an account of the manner in which the jubilee of George III. was celebrated. The account is taken from Harper's Bazaar, the celebration took place on the 25th October, 1809:—

"This Jubilee is notable as being the first occasion on which the English people celebrated the fiftieth year of their sovereign's reign. Earlier Jubilees had been held in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward III., but they were commemorations of birthdays, and not of the Jubilee period of rulership.

"The Jubilee of George III. was a season of general national rejoicing. There were feastings and illuminations from end to end of the kingdom, the doors of the debtors' prisons were thrown open, and largess was freely distributed among the poor. In "the good old days" a debtor might languish in prison for years, or even for life, if he could not pay, and if his creditors were obdurate.

In Oct., 1809, there were seventy-two people in the Marshalsea Prison, owing an aggregate sum of £2092. It was arranged, as a fitting celebration of the Jubilee, to effect the release of these unfortunates by offering their creditors a percentage of the moneys due to them, and similar movements were made in nearly all the important cities and towns throughout the land. Neither were the prisoners of war forgotten. At Portsmouth the Jubilee was celebrated by distributing money to the French and Danish captives who were confined on board the prison ships in that harbor, and many prisoners of war were allowed to return to their native land.

"The royal residence at Windsor was naturally the centre of attraction. Thousands of people, from fifty miles round, poured into the little town, and beds were only procurable at one or two guineas each. It is characteristic of the popular manners of the time that the chief amusements were a bull-roasting and bull-biting. The bull for roasting was given by a patriotic citizen, who also gave the poor of Windsor one hundred quarter loaves and eight hogsheds of strong beer. Windsor was on fire on the 24th of October. A triumphal arch was erected in the Market place, and the Bachelors of Windsor paraded the town, with colors flying and drums beating, to exhibit the carcasses of the ox and two sheep given by the butchers of the town, which were to be roasted whole next day.

"At two in the morning of the eventful day the ox-roasting commenced, and this is how it was done. First of all—were two immense ranges for the fires, supported by brickwork.
These ran parallel to each other, with a space between for the ox. At each extremity a triangle of large poles supported a beam, from which the carcass was suspended by a chain four men, two at each end, kept it turning.
The animal's head was au naturel, horns and hide complete, and as the body was skinned and trussed like a rabbit, it must have presented a somewhat ludicrous appearance.
Underneath it was a huge tin dish, and above it was another, perforated with holes, in which was placed the melted fat wherewith to baste it. And the donor, to make his gift complete, added a bushel and a half of potatoes wherewith to stuff the ox. Outside the fireplaces the sheep were roasted.

"When the ox was considered cooked to a turn, which was about an hour after noon, the King and Queen, with the princesses and royal dukes made their appearance. A pavilion had been erected for their accommodation, whence they could have a good view of the roasting; but as royal curiosity was not sufficiently gratified by seeing the operation at a distance, a slope, boarded, railed in, and guarded by Bachelors who had been sworn in as constables, was provided, and the royal party minutely inspected the barbaric cookery.

"Nor were they content with this—they must taste it; so butchers, dressed in blue, with silk stockings on their legs, carved for them choice portions of the ox, which had now been removed from the fire and placed on a large wooden tray. Slices of beef and portions of plum pudding were served on silver plates, and carried in procession up to the pavilion; where the Queen and her party partook of this repast amidst the hearty cheers of the assembled multitude.

"In the evening of the great day a fete took place at Frogmore, where a banquet was spread for the illustrious and noble company."

Boston Markets.

BOSTON, May 21.

POTATOES.—With a better demand and smaller receipts, prices have gained strength the past few days, and an advance of about 10c has been established. Houlton Hebrons command $1, and Rose move readily at 95c.

Provincial stock 80 to 85c

EGGS.—The market has ruled firm during the past few days, with sales of Eastern at 124 and Western and Provincial at 124 to 13c.

Very few offering under 13c.

FISH.—There is no improvement in the demand for Mackerel, but holders are firm and Nova Scotia No 1 are not offering under $14 per bbl. while some are held higher. No 2 are cleaning up at $13 and $14. Several lots of new Mackerel have been landed at New York and Philadelphia by the Southern fleet and the outlook for the catch is more encouraging, though the fish still run small and poor. Sales at $7 and $8 per bbl. fishermen's order. A few large No 3 sold at $9 and $9.50.

With increased receipts prices will probably be lower. Receipts of Mackerel at Boston for the week were 276 bbls., nearly all of which were new.

CURRENT NOTES.

Several companies are organizing for the operation of iron mines in Ontario and Quebec. Many wealthy Americans are investing.

The telephone has been introduced into China, and the pigtails are getting more cross-eyed than ever trying to wink at the girls in the central office.

The United States southern mackerel catch has proved a comparative failure, and most of the fleet has returned home to refit for the season off the British American coasts.

When a Japanese husband wants to complicit his better half he introduces her as "my fool of a wife." When an American husband wants to pave the way for a divorce, or lose a few handfuls of hair, he will adopt the Japanese fashion of introducing his wife, but not before.

Principal Grant of Kingston preached in Ottawa on Sunday, delivering a powerful sermon against the national vices of luxurious and unchaste living and political immorality. He pleaded for simpler and purer modes of life and for the abandonment of partizanship in church and state.

A young man named Alfred Simmons, 18 years old, living at Knightville, Cape Elizabeth, Me., one night last week, saw a girl with whom he had been keeping company walking with another young man of whom he is jealous. Simmons went home, got out his pistol and shot himself. The wound was not fatal, but his ear was blown off.

Wednesday's St. John Sun states that the steamer Cumberland arrived on Tuesday afternoon with a large number of passengers, some fifty of whom were men belonging to P. E. Island, Nova Scotia and parts of this province along the line of the I. C.
R. These men had gone to various parts of the New England States in search of work from one to ten months ago, and were going back to their native places sadder but wiser men.

An exchange says: We wish to call the attention of the farmers that if they drop a soup bean or two in each hill of potatoes when they plant them the pesky potato bug will never bother them, besides the protection of your potatoes you will get a crop of beans as well. A farmer has informed us that he has tried the experiment for five years and has never been bothered with bugs, while his neighbors lost their crops. There is a small about the bean that keeps them away.

Win. B. Orr loved not wisely but too much. In other words, William had two wives. The law declares that one wife is sufficient for one man. The law caught on to William's little bigamy act, and as a result he was arraigned on that charge in Boston last week. Both wives were in court. They had never met until a day or two previous, yet they embraced and kissed each other, while the little ones played together on the floor. Orr parted with his wives with tears and declared that as soon as he was at liberty he would engage apartments in Roxbury where they could all live together. This project, which was discussed within hearing of the judge, greatly consoled Orr's wives, and both women hastened out of court in quest of bail.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person
