

CBC Is Not Needed In Its 'Present' Form

By ED SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer
AMHERST (CP) — President Don Jamieson of the Atlantic Association of Broadcasters suggested Wednesday that a national broadcasting system is possible without the need of the CBC in its present form.

In his opening address to the AAB annual convention here, the vice-president and general manager of CJON radio-TV in St. John's, Nfld., said private broadcasters if given a greater measure of responsibility as part of a national system could create "the kind of material that is the bricks and mortar of national consciousness." But he thought broadcasting has been given a new atmosphere in recent months.

"The Board of Broadcast Governors has shown itself to be fair and reasonable. We will be treated as mature, responsible citizens for as long as we merit that assessment."

But there was still confusion and uncertainty in the public mind, among regulators, legislators and administrators of the national system.

This was created by "the involved technical nature of the private broadcasters."

Mr. Jamieson said... "The impression is widespread that most (private broadcasters) would sell Canada down the river for an essay dollar."

In reference to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, he said it was his personal opinion that blanket commendation of the CBC "is unwarranted on the basis of its past record of performance."

"Have the CBC create only those programs which, justifiably are in the public interest. To do this, let the corporation retain its existing stations and facilities in the major programming centres of Toronto and Montreal. In all other areas, leave the actual transmission of these programs to private outlets."

HAS POWER
The Parliament of Canada, he suggested, has it in its power to achieve exactly the kind of radio and television it considers best "without having to pay for as much as a camera tube."

By regulation a Canadian content minimum for all stations could be obtained with more desired local talent development in times now "commandeered by the CBC for the transmission of American shows, and unnecessary trivia." And importation of American material could be controlled, as in Britain, where the amount that can be used each day is set by regulation.

"If the CBC was relieved of the responsibility to act as the featured entertainer, and the only

Automatic elements
Now you can fry, steam, boil, stew and grill your foods on top of the range, at any heat you select. No worries about burning or scorching. The Frigidaire Heat Minder Unit automatically keeps the pan from overheating!

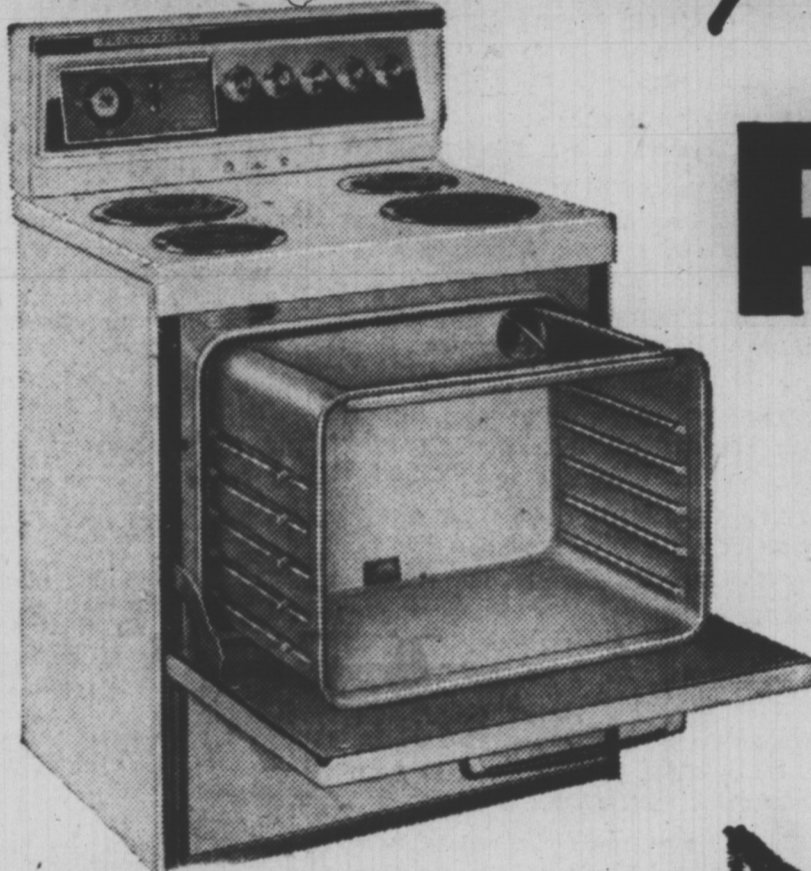

Roast meats without guesswork
No guessing when your roast is done. An Electric Meat Thermometer lets you dial the proper degree of "doneness" before you roast. A buzzer signals you when the roast is just the way you want it.

You can now broil up to a hundred times without having to clean the oven. With Frigidaire's exclusive Spatter-Free Broiler Grill, grease stays in the pan, not on the oven walls.

This exclusive Frigidaire feature is most convenient. You can open the French Doors together and close them together. They save you aisle space and save you stretching over a hot oven door.
