went quickly to the door. As he reached it, however, it opened, and he found himself face to face with his friend, behind whom he could in the falling light, dimly discern a few figures.

"No you don't, old man," laughed Markham, divining his friend's intention, and gently pushing him toward the fire, which was the only light in the room.

"You want to find your nurse, Stella," I fancy this young lady may help you," and with a smiling, her face flushed, and a suspicion of tears in her eyes.

Hugh could scarcely believe his eyes, but before he could question, Dick again interposed.

"I hope you will forgive us, Hugh," he said, as he put out his hand on the girl's shoulder, "but we have to confess that you are the victor in this contest. When you told me the story of your brother's wife in the country, I had already heard it from my sister, who had met and made friends with Mrs. Selby through some hospital work she had undertaken. Both Beatrice and I were determined to do our utmost to alter your feelings toward the poor girl, and were trying to hit upon a plan when your sister-in-law came here to tell us that she was to be sent down to you to nurse you! It occurred to Beatrice to personate her, and we succeeded in restoring her to her, and you can tell your sister."

Hugh looked from one to the other in bewilderment.

"These Miss Nurse Brett—"

"Is simply Miss Beatrice Markham? Exactly."

"And, with admirable discretion, Dick Markham slipped from the room."

"And you are quite sure—quite sure, Beatrice, that that was not part of the comedy; that you do care for me?"

She made no audible answer, but apparently Hugh was satisfied.

"The ladies' papers a couple of months later were full of the description of Miss Beatrice Markham's wedding. 'And the bride's train carried by an adorable little page, Master Ralph Selby, nephew of the bridegroom.'"

science

Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old-time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.

In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven benefit—either a lot or under dose. Get Scott's. Genuine has a water-colored wrapper.

A FAMILY MATTER.

BY THE DUCRESS.

MISS BRETTRON, nearest quietly, and turning away, covered her face with her hands.

"Dearest," he urged, "don't hate yourself for me; say that you will marry me some day, say that—"

"No, no," she murmured, brokenly; "don't say any more; don't ask me anything."

Her evident emotion gave him courage.

"You are frightened now; it was too sudden."

Miss Brett turned slowly and faced him. A deep flush covered her face, and her eyes were downcast.

"Mr. Selby, I have something to tell you—something I ought never to have concealed from you."

"I can hear to hear anything," he said, passionately; "anything but that you will not marry me."

She put up her hand to stop him.

"You are the one man in the world whom I can never marry."

He sank into a chair, and she sat on the little page, Master Ralph Selby, nephew of the bridegroom.

The Actual and the Ideal Waist.

Lady Harberton, speaking of tight lacing, says: "It would materially help discussion on this subject if people would bear in mind the fact that there is an actual anatomical proportion in the size of the human waist, and that it is not a mere question of fancy. The true proportion is a difference of ten inches between the circumference of the bust and that of the waist. Thus, a woman whose bust measures 36 inches should have a waist measuring 26 inches, but 40 inches, waist 30 inches, and so on. Very few corsets are made in this proportion, and if they were still fewer people would buy them, as fashion decrees that the waist should measure from 12 to 15 inches less than the bust. And in many cases even this compression is exceeded. But even the more moderate deformity must be injurious, as these two or three inches of external compression necessarily imply a very considerable displacement of all the internal organs, and no one can honestly suppose that this is not injurious. The present dress looks so curiously clumsy on a figure with correct proportions, and therefore waist compression, with its attendant though unseen horrors, will go on until some sign of fashion's wheel releases the victims who have not the spirit to release themselves."

Looking After Baby.

Give the baby and each child a bed to himself. Have the sleeping room cool and clean as a bare of furniture as a cell. See that the clothing of the little sleeper is loose at the neck, waist and arms, and keep his head uncovered. If there is anything young animals cannot do without it is fresh air, and babies get less than any other class. Through the pores of the skin the body is continually throwing off poisonous vapors. If the head is covered with the bed clothing, the unfortunate infant will be breathing bad air. Fashion or no fashion, it is a cruel shame to trim or starch babies' clothing. The average child suffers from overfeeding and overdressing. Let him learn to be a trifle hungry. Half the time the child cries, he wants fresh air or fresh water. Wiping the lips of a crying baby with cool water will often soothe and refresh him.

A Casual Disappearance.

A queer accident happened near Wall, in England, lately, where a canal fell into a coal pit. The canal flowed over the pit, the underground supports of which gave way, letting down the ground above, draining the canal of water, and putting a stop to all traffic.

It is convenient for housekeepers to know that a quart of wheat flour is almost exactly a pound.
