

F. B. I. Chief's Greeting Read At Police Convention

Representatives of two great Police organizations were featured speakers at yesterday's session of the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs Convention now in session at the Charlottetown Hotel. Commissioner L. H. Nicholson, M.B.E., of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Special Agent, E. J. Powers of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States, each addressed the meeting.

Mr. E. J. Powers of the F. B. I. brought greetings from his Chief Mr. J. Edgar Hoover expressing warm appreciation of the co-operation that his organization has experienced with Canadian Police organizations. His message reads as follows:

It is indeed a pleasure to have this opportunity to send my personal greetings to the members of the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs on the occasion of your fifteenth anniversary meeting.

"No single factor has been more directly responsible for the recent advancements in our profession than the cooperation of law enforcement agencies at all levels. The International co-operation which the F. B. I. is enjoying with our Canadian friends is particularly gratifying. The results which we have attained by working together for our common goals have been most noteworthy and it is my earnest hope that we may continue to profit by this cordial relationship."

him for the time he spent at the job.

"It was a matter of people selecting one man — a man of their own choice to look after them on a full time basis", he said. With the changing of times, this basic principle of appointing a man of the people's choice has been somewhat overlooked. He pointed out that the tradition should not be lost sight of however. He said that a great deal of Police work involves administration but on the whole it was desirable to give the constable an opportunity to think for himself and exercise to a large extent his own initiative.

The R.C.M.P. Head said that the tendency for the public to leave all the prevention and detection of crime to the police was becoming more and more the rule in most communities. He believed that this was a regrettable attitude since public co-operation in the apprehension of criminals was not only desirable but necessary.

He impressed upon his listeners the importance of giving encouragement to the good constables. He suggested that they be given responsibility with the idea of not letting their work become too monotonous.

"We should make our men try to understand this personal responsibility, letting him know that he is not an answerable to his squad but to himself."

Referring to his own organization, Commissioner Nicholson said that the R.C.M.P. put great confidence on the efficiency of the small detachment, noting that it is here that a man can show his real worth and be given an opportunity to exercise his best judgment.

"Give him a feeling of pride in his own badge, his uniform and his force and he will be a great deal happier than if he is confined to routine duty", the Commissioner said.

"The Prayer Perfect", a solo by Miss Joyce MacCallum; and "The Lord is My Shepherd", a duet by the Misses Malda and Joan Rogerson. Mrs. E. R. Woodside in a very fine meditation appealed for less spending for the trivial and unworthy and more in service to humanity.

The auxiliary president, Miss Dorothy Auld, after graciously welcoming all present, introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Florence J. Murray, missionary doctor on furlough from Severance Hospital in Seoul, Korea. Dr. Murray in a splendid showing of color slides depicted many aspects of Korea and the natural beauty of the country to the destruction and deprivation wrought by the war. In closing, Dr. Murray made a stirring appeal for young recruits who are needed for replacements on the mission field. Pleading with all to think of the deplorable existence of half of the world's population and to act now before it is too late. Dr. Murray asked the question: "Why are you living in luxury in the midst of a world of poverty?"

Trinity Y. P. U. Holds Social. Trinity Young People's Union held their opening social for the newer members last evening. A very enthusiastic group of young people participated in the games which were led by Tommy Davies, Gladys MacMillan, Sandy MacLean and Eddie Cutcliffe.

Rev. Howard Christie welcomed all the young people on behalf of the church. F. B. I. ROLE. Aside from reading J. Edgar Hoover's message of team work with the F. B. I., Mr. E. J. Powers from Boston, Massachusetts said that in his 14 years as a law enforcement officer he had seen and come to realize the value of public co-operation in the apprehension of some of the nations most notable criminals.

Outlining briefly the role of the F. B. I., Mr. Powers said it was their duty to enforce federal statutes only — they do not have the power to conduct local investigations. However, he said they do work closely with State and municipal authorities.

The F. B. I. Agent went on to relate the circumstances of certain not worthy crimes in the U. S. A. and how the offender was captured and prosecuted through the scientific knowledge of the Force along with the co-operation of alert citizens.

Chief John Chisholm of Toronto who thanked the speaker, recalled several instances where the co-operation of the National Police organizations combined to bring fugitives to justice. He also referred to the identification branch of the F. B. I. which proved to be of such wonderful assistance in making positive identification of many of the "Noronic" victims that were destroyed in a disastrous ship fire of a few years ago.

A most instructive and interesting talk on "Police Statistics" was given by Mr. William A. Magill of the Judiciary Branch, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa. Mr. Magill emphasized the importance that statistics play in the efficiency of police work.

BRACKLEY LUNCHEON. Shortly after noon the Convention members along with their wives went to Gregor's Hotel at Brackley where a delicious luncheon was served, featuring fresh Island Lobsters. Many of the inland delegates had an opportunity of seeing the North Shore surf which was in full force yesterday. On their return to Charlottetown, the whole group greatly enjoyed the through the Provincial Building and the Confederation Chamber.

The convention concludes today at five o'clock when election of officers takes place and the site of the 1956 meeting are named.

Gen. Lonardi. He posed a grave threat. But Hector Hugo di Pietro, secretary-general of the General Labor Confederation, whose 6,000,000 members were the backbone of Peron's power, called on the workers to "keep calm and continue working for the good of the country." He spoke over the state radio.

Armed forces and police moved twice during the morning to crush incipient violence. Tanks and machine-guns blasted into smouldering ruins of the headquarters of Peron's brown-shirted National Alliance. The armed forces also seized a branch of this organization of Peronist militants confiscating arms the alliance had collected to fight for a restoration of Peron.

Heavily armed soldiers and a police searched every house in a city block looking for hiding members of the alliance.

Report Rebel Heading Back To Indo-China. THE HAGUE. (Reuters) — Capt. Raymond (Turgo) Westering, who led a private army in an abortive revolt against the Indonesian government five years ago, was reported Wednesday to have escaped from The Netherlands without a passport and to be heading back to Indonesia.

Westering, 36, a former paratrooper, had been living here since 1952 following the failure of his rebellion. He was released by the authorities after his return to Holland, on the understanding that he would not attempt to leave the country or go into his native land.

The Netherlands news agency published the text of a letter it received Wednesday, purporting to come from Westering, in which he said he had left for Indonesia.

Last June Dutch police launched an armed yacht in an effort to capture Westering had planned to sail to Indonesian waters.

He told reporters then that he intended to support the South Moluccan rebel movement, which claims to be defying government rule in some islands of East Indonesia.

Reiect Cyprus Debate Move. UNITED NATIONS. (CP)—The UN steering committee Wednesday rejected Greece's appeal for a second UN debate on the problem of riot-torn Cyprus. The committee sided for another try for a settlement by quiet diplomacy.

Climaxed an emotional debate on the first hot issue to come up in the 10th assembly, the steering committee voted 7 to 4 against recommending assembly consideration of the Cyprus case.

Greece is certain to appeal for the full 60-member assembly but it is problematical whether she can get a majority large enough to overturn the steering committee recommendation.

Commercial T V Starts In Great Britain Tonight

LONDON. (Reuters)—Commercial television—with tight restrictions on advertising—starts in Britain tonight after two years of public argument, parliamentary debate and scorching criticism from some quarters.

The new venture makes the first challenge in 30 years of the British Broadcasting Corporation's monopoly in the radio field.

Under the watchdog system worked out by the government, advertisers will not be permitted to sponsor shows. They will be sold time—no more than six minutes in any one hour—by private program contractors.

The contractors who put on the shows get their permits from the Independent Television Authority, the watchdog body appointed by the postmaster-general.

ROYAL RESTRICTION. One special restriction on advertising is that there must be at least two minutes of non-commercial material before and after any program on which the Queen appears.

Britons still remember the appearance of American TV chimpanzee J. Fred Muggs during the showing of a film on the Coronation two years ago.

Commercial television hopes to out-dazzle the BBC's one-channel program with an assortment of personalities, variety shows, extravaganzas and plays. It is unabashedly borrowing American ideas and even importing some of the most successful shows, including "I Love Lucy" and "Dragnet."

Opening night will begin at 7.15 p.m. with a look-in at the ancient Small Boy.

A passenger seated across from Harold sprang across the plane but was too late to grab the youngster, who shot through the 20-inch-square opening.

Pilot Bob McLean was notified. He was flying on instruments through cloud formations at the time. He swung the plane back to the approximate spot in order to fix the location.

When the plane reached Seplisles of the grief-stricken pilot who speaks scarcely any English, said she didn't know how the accident happened. Helmut shouted to her, but it was too late.

A company helicopter was sent to aid in the search. The company operates at least five planes regularly, and these are being used both on regular flights and search flights in an effort to locate the body from the air.

lone Hits. fell at Sydney airport between 8 p.m. Tuesday and 2 p.m. Wednesday—only slightly less than the district normally gets in the whole of September.

Widespread flooding was reported and Sydney police had to re-route traffic when the rains blocked the downtown Victoria road subway.

Lightning cracked east of Cape Breton island, but shipping was well battered down to ride out the storm. Water flooded the Sydney and Louisbourg railway roundhouse at New Waterford when a dam broke and it took several hours to bail the building out.
