Travel-Hungry Canadians Reported Heavy Spenders

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Travel-hungry Canadians are distributing more dollars abroad than foreign travellers are in Canada. And, in a way, these Canadians also are contributing to a major deficit in trade.

Ever since the government lifted restrictions on travel funds in 1950, there has been a growing deficit in Canada's travel account. More tourist dollars flow out than flow in.

From a surplus of $49,000,000 in 1950, Canada went to a deficit of $6,000,000 in 1951. This deficit has increased each year. Last year it climbed to a record $192,000,000.

RECESSION NO BAR

Canada's foreign spending rose even in the midst of recession In 1958, the flow of tourist dollars into Canada dipped to $352,000,000 from $363,000,000 in 1957, down $11,000,000. Canadian spending in other lands increased to $544,000,000 from $525,000,000, up $19,000,000.

Details of where these dollars went are being prepared by the bureau of statistics. Preliminary information indicates little change in the pattern. The big flow of tourist trade is between Canada and the U.S. But a lot of Canadians are making European trips and officials say this trend is increasing.

Tourist trade is but one factor in Canada's deficit in trade in goods and services. The over-all deficit dipped last year to $1,112,000,000, down $288,000,000 from the record $1,400,000,000 of 1957.

But federal authorities maintain this deficit—the highest of any year previous to 1956—is still fairly high. Usually the big factor in the over-all deficit is trade in goods. Last year this deficit in trade in goods dropped sharply to $174,000,000 from $405,000,000 as imports declined under the spell of recession.

FINANCED FROM ABROAD

Offsetting this decline was the rise in the tourist trade deficit, along with other adverse balances in shipping costs and the flow of interest and dividends. The deficit in trade usually is financed by foreign capital. As this flow of capital increases, it adds to Canada's international indebtedness

At the end of 1957, this net international debt climbed to $11,000,000,000. The bureau of statistics now figures that by the end of 1958, this debt rose "to well over" $12,000,000,000.

As this figure rises, it means increasing foreign control over Canadian economic development.

Canadian earnings from foreign investments increased — to $161,000,000 from $149,000,000 in 1957—but this was not entirely commercial. The increase arises out of resumption by Britain of annual repayments of $22,200,000 worth of interest on her $1,185,000,000 loan made by Canada in 1946. This interest payment was waived in 1957.
