Mrs. Bernard Batchelder and three children returned to Georgetown on Tuesday to take up residence in their home, after having spent the winter in Charlottetown where Mr. Batchelder was employed.

Her friends in Georgetown and throughout the Province learned with regret of the passing in Charlottetown of Mrs. Elizabeth Easton, on Tuesday, April 4th in her 77th year. The late Mrs. Easton had been in failing health for some time, but her passing came as a surprise to her many friends. The deceased was the widow of the late William Easton and had resided her lifetime in Georgetown. Burial took place on Thursday from the home of her son, Mr. Edward Easton.

Mr. Lemuel MacCormack has completed the job of installing a quantity of new deck planking in the Georgetown - Lower Montague ferry boat. Planking a deck and caulking it is an art, now able to be accomplished by fewer and fewer tradesmen in this modern age. Generally this work is done when the ferry is on the Marine Slip in Pictou, N.S., undergoing her annual overhaul. Having the work done by a local carpenter, while the boat is off the run for the winter is a good idea, and provides work for local men. Some heavy 12 x 12 carrying timbers were also put in place and the sill which runs around the 180 degree circle formed by the deck house was also replaced by new material. Mr. MacCormack, the foreman, was assisted by Mr. Gordon Gottle.

Dorothy Dix Says

and suspicious, who is so evil-minded himself that he attributes his own unworthy motives to every one else, will be doubly and trebly suspicious of his wife and make her life a burden to her with his spying upon her.

I can see no happiness in a marriage with a selfish, jealous, grouchy man, and if anything comes up to keep you from marrying such a one, regard it as the work of your guardian angel and return thanks accordingly.

It is highly desirable, of course, that a man should have good principles and be a go-getter, but the thing that makes or mars his wife's happiness is his disposition. That is what she has to live with, and whether a woman is happy or miserable depends upon her husband's attitude about the little common, everyday affairs.

As for you not being willing to dump your mother and sister down on your husband to support, that shows the right spirit; and, while your fiancé may say now that he would be willing to take care of them, the chances are that he would regard them as a burden and make you very unhappy over the situation.

DEAR MISS DIX: In a recent class discussion the subject of adopting children came up. We were unable to decide whether an adopted child should be told of his or her adoption or not. What is your advice on this matter?

THE CLASS
ANSWER: An adopted child should always be told of its adoption and told while it is so young that the knowledge makes no particular impression on it. It just becomes a familiar fact. No sense of degradation goes with it. The child may even be proud of it, as in the case of one little fellow who boasted to his playmates that, while they were wished on their parents, his mother and father picked him out.
