Toronto Ballet School Is Unique In North America

Special emphasis will be on the arts and languages as well as ballet training for the residential and day school to be opened next September by the National Ballet of Canada. It has been announced by Celia Franca, Artistic Director.

While we are seeking the best available talent in Canada from the age of 10 we realize that often this talent cannot afford the cost of such training. We will offer scholarships where possible, but our own funds are limited. It would be unfortunate if a talented child was forced to miss the opportunity of such training because of lack of funds and we hope that, where possible, local scholarships could be provided to ensure that all Canadian youths have the same opportunity regardless of finances.

JAPANESE UNIONS
The total trades union membership in Japan is between 5,000 and 6,000,000 workers.

The registration will be limited to 12 residential and eight day students at first. A considerably larger number can be accommodated in the ballet division only," Miss Franca said.

Fees for the residential school pupils will be $1,500 for the season, which includes board, education and ballet fees. Day students who will live out but take the full academic and ballet curriculum will pay $300 for the season. Fees for classes in the ballet division will be according to the number of classes and courses in ballet taken.

Swing High Or Swing Low It Is Still Pointed Toe

Not in decades has a shoe style been the object of so much attention, from so many varied sources, as has the pointed-toe, needle toe pin. Nor has there been one so quickly accepted by women in this country that it enabled Canadian shoes to land smack in the lime-light of the world fashion scene, putting its country in the position of a style leader.

Heels on dress and after-five shoes remain high and slim. On the other hand, a wide variety of "little" shaped heels will be seen this fall—Queen Anne, the squashed Louis, stacked keg types, on up to middle and a little higher heights. These are sturdier but still graceful in contour.

and particularly attractive in colorful soft glove, brushed or textured leather ties and pumps. Not only will the style-conscious teenager love the new little heel patterns, but so will scores of older women wanting a fashionable shoe on a lower heel. The closed pump is still the leader, but there is already some indication that Spring 1960 will see a tendency toward more open-work and less ornamentation. As to fall colours in dress and street shoes, the Bureau says these in order of importance are deep, rich black, a wide range of browns, greens, grey, some blue, and a small amount of red at high fashion level. Greens and greys are more important this fall than for many seasons past.
