Newfoundland Troubles.

THE JUDICIAL INVESTIGATION OF THE CAUSE OF THE RIOT OPENED—WHO FIRED THE FIRST SHOT?

A Harbor Grace despatch of the 3rd inst says that John Bray and Richard Bradbury died there this evening. Bray was an Orange sympathiser, and Bradbury was an Orangeman who was accidentally shot by the bursting of his rifle while engaged in the feu de joie. Twenty-one persons are now in custody. Five of those last arrests have been identified by the crown witness. Brigus wires that the Orange Association paraded that town on the 3rd carrying a flag bearing the inscription, "Peace to all men." The latest Harbor Grace despatch states that the depositions taken before Judge Bennet disclose the following facts:—River Head, Harbor Grace, is populated exclusively by Irish Roman Catholics.

THE PRELUDE TO THE TRAGEDY.

Some days before the riot they were terribly incensed at outrages committed by Orangemen at Spaniard's Bay, a town six miles distant. There the windows of the Roman Catholic Church were demolished, all the crosses in the burial ground were broken, and the church-yard otherwise desecrated. On Christmas day rumors reached River Head that the Orangemen were coming up next day to attack the Roman Catholics, which caused great excitement and consternation. At 11.30 on St. Stephen's day 100 young men left River Head to oppose the march of the Orangemen on the settlement, the old people vainly expostulating, and a few of them followed after to prevent a collision. The mob had no guns at first, but got them in the neighborhood of the riot from friends. When they knew the Orangemen were approaching they remained at the head of Parnister lane till 12 p. m., when they met the Orangemen deploying from Harvey streets, the bands playing, flags flying, and the officers and men in full regalia.

IN BATTLE ORDER.

Head constable Doyle now came on the scene and remonstrated. The Roman Catholics, said, "Very well; let them go back, and there will be no bad work." Doyle went back to the Orangemen, who now halted, and briefly addressed them. They, however, moved on, the Orange leaders waving their staves to them in the rear to come on. They advanced within ten feet of the Roman Catholics, when a slight pause ensued. At this point there is a conflict of testimony. So far no blows had been struck on either side, and all the Roman Catholic witnesses swear positively that Head constable Doyle, encouraged the Orangemen to march onward, saying, "Let us cross the Boyne again," and affirm that he fired the first shot which killed Callahan. Doyle denied having firearms with him. Witnesses also proved that the first shots came from the Orange ranks.

WHO FIRED FIRST?

Police Sergeant Winslow swore that at least the first two shots were fired by Orangemen, and that only seven shots were fired in all. Winslow further swore that he saw one of the Roman Catholics fall after being deliberately aimed at from the direction of the Orange party. No guns were visible in the ranks of the Orange procession, but sympathisers and followers were armed and shot at the Roman Catholics in a kneeling position. The shooting was almost simultaneous on both sides. The Catholic party numbered 100 men and boys, and the Orangemen's procession, with their following, nearly 1,000. Callahan carried the green flag, and with Quirk and Shanahan, went to the leader of the Orangemen—before collision—and advised them to turn back. They refused, and called upon the society to advance. The deadly part of the affray lasted only three minutes. No Orangemen were arrested. Head Constable Doyle is temporarily suspended.
