Testimonial From Duluth, Minnesota.

DEAR Mrs. Ross,—Having tested your "MAGIC HEALER," I wish to express my gratitude to you by this testimonial, which you can use, if you think it will assist you in selling it: Having cut my hand severely with a chisel, the corner of the chisel having entered the palm of my hand, making a long and deep cut, I applied your "MAGIC HEALER" at once, and after three applications I was able to go to work, and in three days the cut was healed up.

Yours truly,
ALONZO H. LAVERS.

The Parnell Embroglio.

The Scene Previous to His Deposition.

The scene just before to the deposition of Parnell is thus described by one of the correspondents:—

The meeting was resumed in half an hour, and in the interval the excitement had reached fever heat. The members re-assembled amid a scene of extraordinary commotion, and there seemed every prospect of a physical collision between the rival factions. Mr. Parnell decided, at the earnest request of his friends, to hold. The advice coincided with his own sentiment. The position was now on the eve of a climax. Mr. Abraham had drawn up a resolution to depose Parnell. That gentleman got wind of the purport, and, intercepting it as Mr. Abraham passed it on to Justin McCarthy, crushed it in his hand and put the paper in his pocket.

Mr. McCarthy rose to call to order, and was met by Mr. Parnell with counter cries of "Order!"

A dozen gentlemen rose with loud shouts of "McCarthy!" "McCarthy!" "Parnell!" "Abraham!" "John O'Connor!" "Chair!" "No tricks!"

Mr. McCarthy claimed a hearing for Mr. Abraham, to whom Parnell declined to listen, calling upon John O'Connor. Mr. McCarthy insisted upon his right under parliamentary usage.

Mr. Parnell—Don't preach parliamentary usage to me, sir.

Mr. McCarthy—I have had a longer experience of parliamentary usage, sir, than you, for before I sat in the house I sat in the reporters' gallery, and I know that when a member catches the speaker's eye he is in possession of the house. Mr. Abraham caught your eye.

Mr. Parnell, (disdainfully)—John O'Connor, I called upon you, sir.

The greatest excitement followed this autocratic abuse of the rules of procedure in the midst of which Mr. John O'Connor, "Long John," got upon his legs and moved a resolution expressing confidence in Mr. Parnell (loud cheers and counter cheers), and regretting the unsatisfactory recognition given to the deposition by Mr. Gladstone, and condemning Mr. Gladstone generally in the crisis.

Mr. O'Connor made a long and violent speech, into which Mr. Parnell interjected approving cries of his own. Mr. O'Connor's powerful voice was frequently drowned by the furious opposition of the anti-Parnellites and by the vehement counter clamor of Mr. Parnell's friends.

Dr. Kenny seconded the resolution. Mr. Parnell, in speaking to this amendment, delivered an epithetical rejoinder to Mr. Gladstone's letter, and in the course of his speech asked: "Who is to be the master of Ireland—Gladstone?"

Mr. Healy (dryly)—Who is to be the mistress of Ireland? (Uproar and cheers and counter cheers.)

Mr. Parnell (rising excitedly)—You are a low, cowardly scoundrel to speak of a lady in that way before a body of Irish gentlemen. Loud contending cheers followed this retort and it was several minutes before order could be restored. Mr. Parnell at the time was and Mr. Healy sat calm and unruffled. The member for cork then continued a speech remarkable for its varying emotions.

Mr. Abraham rose to move his amendment, and was put aside in favor of other speakers upon whom Mr. Parnell called, and this gave rise to a series of exciting incidents.

It becoming evident that Mr. Parnell intended to fight the position, if necessary, all night; that he had made his mind not to resign, but stand firm to his election on the 25th of November, sharp, at 5.30, on a given signal, Mr. McCarthy rose with 44 others, and prepared to leave the room.

This was the signal for a scene which has certainly never been witnessed in a committee room of the House of Commons, and is without parallel since the memorable expulsion of the home rule party. The room was crowded with a surging mass of excited men.

As the forty-five moved toward the door the minority rose, mounted the chairs, shrieking and cheering and pouring forth personal attacks upon their compatriots, distinguishing individual members as traitors and cowards and villains. The noise was deafening, and the scene one of the wildest possible character.

The police in charge of the corridor, apprehended a serious disturbance, sent for reinforcements and concentrated toward the open door. The members who heard themselves named as traitors and cowards pressed back upon the returning column and made feeble endeavour to get at their assailants. This caused the utmost confusion, pressing back the main body of the dissentients upon Mr. Parnell and his friends, now driven to desperation. The attendants were not a little alarmed, but happily the members who would have resorted to physical reprisals in defence of their honor were forcibly held back by their more pacific or colder-blooded friends.

In the midst of the commotion the voice of Justin Huntley McCarthy was heard in what appeared to be a speech.

"Gentlemen," said the honorable member, "I had decided to support Mr. Parnell in this crisis, but after what has occurred, after the failure of our negotiations with Mr. Gladstone, and in view of the fact that home rule is threatened with provisional ruin by the actions of Mr. Parnell, I shall

VOTE FOR HIS DEPOSITION.

This was a signal for the accentuation of the excitement, and several of Mr. Parnell's friends made a dash for the slight, frail form of the honorable member, but a rallying force rushed to his aid, and he was conveyed from the room. By degrees the depositing party reached the corridor and made their way down stairs to the conference room.

Another Purist Heard From.

A great number of Ontario election petitions have been taken up and dismissed for want of evidence to support the charges of corruption. An exception is found in the case of the petition for South Norfolk. The member-elect is Mr. William Charlton, a relative of Mr. John Charlton, who is the federal representative of a part of the same county. The Charltons are both ardent Grits and active politicians, and both are bent on putting down bribery and corruption, as appears from their speeches. The present respondent believes in putting down bribery and corruption by the method suggested in the historical "come-along-John" letters. He also has "lots of money." One witness swears that he was to have a V. to vote for Charlton; "the money was to be left in an old stove." This mysterious method of meeting liabilities was not always adopted. Several witnesses seem to have received their money in a straightforward way, the price being either five or ten dollars. In the case of Wellington Murland, however, the five dollar bill was thrown down in the bottom of a buggy. Wellington "picked it up and kept it." An old man and his two sons were dressing fish. The old man says the agent "reached something to me, and when I got to the light I found it was three five dollar bills." He adds, "when he came he gave me a wink."

It was also put in evidence that one Spencer gave a yeoman a drive in his buggy, and meeting the candidate, introduced him. The candidate asked for the yeoman's vote, and moved on when, according to the yeoman's account, the mutual friend "stopped his buggy and shelled out six dollars and asked me if I would take it. I said 'Yes.' He threw the money on the ground, and said, 'We'll say it was for lumber.'"

The witness casually informed the court that he never had any lumber in all his life. It appears also in Mr. Charlton's campaign the fine old play of the Man in Bed was performed. This drama, it will be remembered, was invented by an Ontario "reformer" in whose behalf a couple of strangers paid out money all one evening to the horny-handed electors. The paymasters were both in bed with their clothes on, and with the exception of their roseate noses and one of their clean hands, were concealed from the view of the payee. How far the Man in Bed controlled the South Norfolk campaign does not appear.

A $30,000 LEG.—A Texas jury has awarded Charles N. Briggs $30,000 for the loss of a leg while in the employ of the Southern Pacific railroad company. He sued the corporation for $50,000.

WALKING IN HIS SLEEP.—Wm. Hannah, the famous hunter, went to Jackson Smith's, Southampton, Cumberland Co., N. S., on Sunday and stayed all night. During the night the family were disturbed by a noise and upon investigating found Mr. Hannah at the foot of the stairs in an unconscious condition. His face was badly bruised, showing that he had fallen down stairs. It was not until the next day at noon that he recovered consciousness. He had no recollection of having got up in the night, and it is supposed that he arose in his sleep. On Tuesday he was able to return to his home.

SOMETHING WRONG.—A correspondent of the Halifax Herald writes from this Province: "Considerable complaint is heard from the farmers at the price they are receiving for their pork. A very large quantity of this is raised here, the farmers going into it rather more extensively on account of the additional duties. Now, while pork is quoted at $16.50 to $17.50 per bbl. in Montreal and Halifax, the local dealers are only paying $5 to $5½ for heavy well fattened dressed hogs, and P. E. Island pork always brings the top of the market, too. There is evidently something wrong somewhere."

WILL HAVE A COLD WINTER.—A Bideford, Me., prophet says we will have a bitter, cold and protracted winter. He is convinced of this by reason of his having made a close study of the hay and grass crops, the shells of crabs and other things, and he finds that all foretell a much severer winter than we have had for some time. The crab shells, he says, are remarkably thick, showing that these things have been fortified by Dame Nature for a long siege with the cold in the muddy bottoms of our rivers this winter. He has found several squirrels with triple extra fur. He also sees that coons and rabbits are much fatter than usual. All this indicates that the animal world is ready for the cold.

A $750 COTTAGE.—Of its equivalent in cash will be given to the person detecting the greatest number of errors, words wrongly spelled or misplaced in the December issue of "OUR HOMES." In addition will be given two cash prizes of $200 each, four of $100, eight of $50, ten of $25, twenty-five of $10, fifty of $5, one hundred of $2, and one hundred and fifty of $1, distributed in the order mentioned in rules and regulations, which will be sent with a copy of December issue on receipt of 15 cents in stamps. Special cash prizes given away almost every day during competition which closes February 1st, 1891. Address Our Homes Publishing Co., Brockville, Canada. nov28 dy wy 2w.

ISLANDERS IN TROUBLE.—The Bangor, Me., News says: Two badly injured Prince Edward Island men are lying at Barney Kelly's boarding house without funds with which to pay for care and medical treatment. One of them, whose name is Morrisey, was rolling logs at Mel Whidden's camp, six miles from Kshradin Iron Works with a man who did not understand the business. The latter allowed the log to get away from him just as Morrisey had placed his cantdog firmly on the log. The sudden movement of the log wrenched the tool from his grasp and threw it against his breast, giving him painful injuries. He laid in the camp for ten days before being removed to this city. The other man, whose name is Roberts, was topping off a tree which had been lodged in falling. When it finally yielded to his efforts, he was thrown from his position on the trunk and severely injured about the head and chest. No medical aid had been called last evening. This is one of many accidents, placing the victims in similar circumstances, which forcibly illustrates the necessity of an hospital in this city.
