NEEDED INVENTIONS.

Things That Might Fill Various Long-Felt Wants.

London Answers recently invited its readers to suggest various "needed inventions." Here are a few of the many suggestions:

The Pencil of the Future.

The article which in my idea would be the most satisfactory invention to the public at large would be a pencil which, instead of being filled with the ordinary plumbago, should be filled with some composition which would write as indelibly as ink without smudging, and would enable us to write with the smoothness of a pencil.

This would do away with the scratching, spluttering, dirty, corroding pen. Besides, the time lost alone in dipping a pen in the ink is considerable.

The inventor of such a pencil would confer a boon upon the public.

Automatic Omnibus Starters.

What invention would be more humane and, I should imagine, possible than the following?

A spring capable of being applied to omnibuses and similar vehicles that are required to be stopped and started very often, and so constructed that it would act like an ordinary brake in stopping the vehicle, but would, when released, again start the vehicle of its own accord.

It would effect an enormous saving in the number of horses now yearly worn out in this unnecessary labor.

An Overcoat Lifter.

The majority of fellows find it a bother to get their overcoats on. I think an invention for holding and lifting an overcoat would be a good thing.

My idea would be for the machine to hold the coat with two spring clips on two arms, to work by clock-work, and by a series of gentle jerks, to lift the coat to the required height. It would have a spring at the bottom, which being pressed by one's heel would instantly release the coat.

The machine could be made both ornamental, simple, and cheap, and could also be used as a hat and umbrella stand.

Wanted, a Smoker's Friend.

I think one of the most needed inventions of to-day, especially in this changeable climate of ours, is an apparatus for lighting matches in the open air on a wet or windy day.

It should be collapsible, small and covered, and would indeed be a boon to men. I have often pitied poor fellows on a wild night, trying in vain to light their pipes, and dodging behind every corner and projection. They would bless the inventor of a match-box which would afford at the same time a temporary shelter to the flickering light.

Umbrella-Opening Made Easy.

Of late years we have seen a great variety of designs and colors in umbrellas, but as yet nothing has been invented to improve the opening and shutting of this every-day article.

Now, would not a great improvement be effected by fitting a wire spring from the top of the handle down to the socket where the ribs meet, so that if it were pressed by the thumb it would draw up and open the umbrella?

This would help one out of a difficulty which one is often placed in, when he or she has only one hand at liberty to open one's "gamp."

Why Has no One Thought of It?

What is particularly wanted at the present day, especially since we are now threatened with the woman cyclist, is a bicycle so constructed that its motive power is increased by the rider keeping in an upright position, and retarded by the rider keeping the Bico-Scorcherosa position now in vogue.

Again, bicycle riders want a handy lamp-extinguisher, which might consist of a little wire at the bottom of the lam, so that the extinguisher would fall over the wick, and when not in use a small spring would hold it at the top of the lamp, keeping it from vibrating.

He Believes in Dreams.

"I never took any stock in dreams," said J. L. Santer, of Lexington, Mo., "but from recent experiences I am inclined to believe that there is something in the mysteries of sleep after all. About two months ago my wife informed me that she had dreamed of a marriage and that it was a sure sign of death. Two days afterwards my grandfather was killed by a train at Omaha. Following this up, my better half warned me to look after my financial interests, as she dreamed I was being treated for hysterics. To dream that I was being treated for anything, she informed me, was a never failing sign that I would suffer financial loss. In less than a week came the Sedalia Bank calamity, and I am out $2,000. Just before I left home I accidentally broke a looking-glass. Now I am told that I will have seven years of trouble. It has not materialized, but I expect to receive a telegram before morning informing me that my boy has been drowned in the river, my house has been destroyed by fire, or that something else equally as horrible has occurred."—St. Louis Republic.

For Diphtheria.

During the prevalence of diphtheria it is quite as important to look after the well ones as those that are ill; especially needful it becomes if one is exposed to the disease. The observance of a few precautions in this disease, as well as in others, is of great value in preventing their spread. First, never go into the presence of disease with an empty stomach. Eat a good meal if possible, if not able to procure this drink a cup of coffee, a cup of hot tea, or a glass of milk. If nothing more substantial offers drink a glass or more of water, better if a little whisky, brandy or Jamaica ginger be added to it. If possible, visit the sick when not over fatigued or exhausted. Before going into the room where diphtheria is, gargle the throat with diluted alcohol—one-third alcohol, two-thirds water; stronger if the throat will bear it. All the members of the family in the house with a case of this disease should gargle their throats three times a day at least with the same preparation.—Hall's Journal of Health.

How to Make Lime Water.

A bottle of lime water in the house is a great convenience. To make it, put about a pound of unslacked lime in a large bowl; pour over this three quarts of boiling water. Let it stand for ten minutes, then stir well with a stick. Place the bowl in a cool place for eight or ten hours. At the end of that time pour off the clear water, letting the sediment remain in the bottom of the bowl. Bottle the clear water and keep in a convenient place.

A tablespoonful of this lime water may be added to a glass of milk to be given to a patient with an acid stomach. In case of burns cover the burned parts with a cloth [illegible]

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
