Congress Wants More Information From State Sec'y

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing insistence was heard Thursday that State Secretary Dulles keep Congress better posted on what his department is doing around the world.

Leading this call for closer consultation was Senator Walter George (Dem. Ga.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and principal Democratic spokesman on foreign policy.

George said he hopes to lay the groundwork for more frequent bulletins from the state department when Dulles appears before his committee today, ostensibly to explain the Saudi Arabian tank deal that caused such a commotion last weekend.

George called the present state of foreign affairs "disturbing." He told reporters he is particularly concerned by what appears to be an "uncertainty" about American actions in the Middle East and south Asia.

New Royal Navy Is Being Built

LONDON (Reuters) — Plans for a streamlined royal navy propelled by atomic power are well under way, Viscount Cilcennin, first lord of the admiralty, disclosed Thursday.

In a report published with the navy's annual financial estimates, he said nuclear power will be used to drive submarines and that the planning of a marine power plant already is going ahead.

Naval experts forecast the British atom plant will be much smaller than the one driving the United States atom-powered submarine Nautilus, which is already in commission.

NEW SEA STRATEGY

Lord Cilcennin also reported that the development of Britain's new sea strategy is "nearing realization."

This consists of a battle group centred around the modern aircraft carrier with its multi-purpose squadrons of planes—some able to deliver atomic bombs.

Accompanying the carrier will be new types of cruisers and destroyers armed with guided weapons.

These ships already are being designed. So are more powerful guided weapons.

The battleship, once the key to Britain's sea might, has no place in this nuclear age setup.

Lord Cilcennin said that the Royal Navy had called in one of the country's largest submarine building firms to co-operate in developing atomic propulsion. This firm will work in conjunction with other engineering firms.

Shortly afterwards, the big shipbuilding and engineering firm of Vickers announced that, with Rolls-Royce and Foster Wheeler Limited, two other big engineering concerns, it will form a group of work on the application of nuclear energy to marine propulsion.

The naval program is estimated to cost £401,670,000 in the coming year—an increase of £9,720,000 compared with the current year's spending. But this increase, and more, is absorbed by higher pay and pensions.
