Report of Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Churches of Christ in connection with the Christian Association, was held with the Church at East Point beginning on Saturday, July 11. The weather was all that could be desired, and the attendance a fair representation of the different churches and people of the Island. The preachers present were: Elders D. Crawford, O. B. Emery, Dr. Belding, of New York, a veteran of 53 years standing as a preacher, whose "eye is not dim, nor his natural force greatly abated," and W. H. Harding, a young, vigorous and active evangelist.

The annual sermon was preached by Dr. Belding. As might be expected, from one of his ripe experiences and mature judgment, his discourse was well filled with interesting and practical instruction.

In the evening he preached in the Baptist Meeting House at the request of the Baptist preacher. In the afternoon Elder D. Crawford preached to a large and attentive audience. In the evening, Bro. W. H. Harding preached in the small, but comfortable, Meeting House at North Lake. The meeting was well attended, and an intelligent lady arose and professed her faith in Christ.

On Monday at 10 o'clock a very profitable social meeting was held, led by Elder D. Crawford. The time was spent in reading scripture lesson, singing and addresses by Bro. T. Dwyer, Elders O. B. Emery and D. Crawford, Dr. Belding and others. After social meeting, the Association met for business, Elder D. Crawford, Moderator, in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Elder O. B. Emery was elected Moderator.

The reports from the churches were then received, showing a steady, if not a rapid growth. A resolution was passed, providing for a fuller report of statistics from the churches. It was unanimously resolved to take action on a standing resolution, appointing a managing committee for general mission work on the Island. That committee was amended so as to represent all the churches, which, it is hoped, will work together to support at least one general evangelist.

Though we have no central human authority, there is no lack among us of order and harmony. Both preachers and private members are satisfied to work under the direction of the wise master-builder, whether in the quarry, or the dressing and polishing departments, and to have their work tested by His plumb, square and level.

The writer, who visited East Point church over forty years ago, was highly pleased to find that the present and rising generation are fully equal to their fathers and mothers in Christian zeal, and generous hospitality, which is saying a good deal; while they far exceed them in intelligence and successful business. The beautiful new meeting house which they built and paid for, and enclosed with an excellent fence, is a credit to the church and all concerned. Their kind consideration in conveying travellers by train from Souris to their hospital homes, will be understood by the fact, that the distance is from seven to fourteen miles over a hilly road. The entertainment of strangers, was on a scale suited to the noble hearted sisters who presided over that department. The only complaint I heard was, that there were not guests enough. The writer found himself in charge of such noble Christian ladies as Mrs. John Stewart, of Red Point, and Mrs. Lemuel Morrow, of North Lake, and if others fared as well, the wonder is that we were not tempted to overstep the bounds of moderation.

The next annual meeting should be at New Glasgow, but the members of that church have been seized with a fit of destructiveness and pulled down their meeting house.

However, the association, hoping that better counsels will prevail, and that they will build again, venture to appoint the next meeting there on the second Lord's Day in July, 1892.

Literary Note

"Girls on Horseback" is the title of an important series of papers to be begun in the next number of Harper's Bazaar. Having to do with the practical art of horseriding, even from its beginning by very young girls, the series will commend itself to the attention not only of young ladies and misses, but of their mothers and all others who are interested in this most healthful form of exercise for women.

American writers of short stories are winning golden opinions abroad. A recent number of the London Spectator, in the course of an appreciative review of Annie Trumbull Slosson's "Seven Dreamers," says: "Mrs. Slosson has written a singularly beautiful and fascinating volume; and it is a volume, too, which possesses a peculiar interest, in virtue of the fact that the genius of its author makes itself manifest in the one literary form in which any indications of genius are most seldom to be found. We use the word 'genius,' knowing well that genius is as rare as it is precious; but we know no other word which adequately represents the combination of felicitous invention, of imaginative insight, of quaint fancy, and of delicate literary expression which is to be found in these stories."

It would be difficult for any cultured reader not to be satisfied with the Nineteenth Century. There is seldom a number issued that does not appeal to the most varied tastes in some one of its articles, and its great reputation unquestionably rests upon its broad and liberal editing. The July number, published by the Leonard Scott Publication Co., New York, which opens the thirtieth volume, contains a brief paper on "Gambling and the Law," by Sir James F. Stephen, in which he takes the celebrated baccarat case as his text. Sir Herbert Maxwell has a thoughtful and suggestive paper on "Woodlands," which will prove interesting to those who look with regret upon the rapid destruction of forests in America. In a study of "Pasquale de Paoli," Walter Frewen Lord depicts a dark but brilliant epoch in Corsican history that cannot fail to prove fascinating to the readers of to-day. Marli Manohar, in a brief article on "The Industries of Ancient India," notes some of the more important occupations of the ancient East and their decline in modern times. Mrs. E. Lynn-Linton begins a valuable series of papers discussing the chief phases of the woman question in a paper entitled "The Wild Women as Politicians." H. H. Champion treats of some recent aspects of the labor question in a dialogue called "A Labor Inquiry." The Rev. Dr. Jessop has one of his most delightful essays, "1799—A Rastie Retrospect," in which he gives fresh life to old things and presents a vivid picture of former times. A paper by the Rev. J. Guinness Rogers on "The Congregationalist Council" is timely in view of the meeting in London this month. He presents a careful survey of later Congregational developments. The writings of a modern Greek poet, Aristoteles Valaoritis, are described by Renell Ridd in an article entitled "The Poet of the Klephts." Sir G. H. Reid writes briefly on "The Commonwealth of Australia," and S. B. Boulton has a short article on "Sir John Macdonald and Federation." Other contributions are: "How to Utilize the Naval Volunteers," by the Rt. Hon. H. O. Arnold-Foster; "A Fair Taxation of Ground-Rents," by Robert Hunter, and "The Army as a Public Department," by George Chesney.

News Notes.

New wheat is being marketed in Ontario. A new seam has been struck at the anthracite coal mines in the Northwest.

Reports from Government officials in the Northwest are to the effect that cattle on the ranches are doing remarkably well.

Sunol will be driven against her great record, 2-10, both as a three-year-old and as a four-year-old, at the San Jose fair, which begins on August 10.

The new steel steamer being built at Paisley, Scotland, for the Dominion Government service in British Columbia waters will be launched next week. She should have been finished by June 6th, but the builders say the delay has been caused by strikes.

A witty Detroit girl had two suitors, both named Charles. One had scanty hair, was timid, and did not dare to speak the word he wanted to. The other was quite the reverse, and at the first opportunity made his wishes known. One day one of her acquaintances asked her, "What is the difference between Charles the Bald and Charles the Bold" by which she used to speak of them to her girl friends. "Only avowal," she answered quick as a flash.

In commenting upon the recent purchase by Mr. C. H. Nelson for $25,000 of the quarter interest in the Springfield Republic, the stallion's value in that short time illustrates in a peculiarly striking way the vast increase of wealth in this country during the past few years. The stallion Nelson would have no such value were it not that rich men abound who like to dabble in finely bred stock.

Liverpool is greatly excited over the report of the registrar-general, which announces that her population has decreased by nearly 35,000 in the last ten years, and that she is the only great city in England showing no growth. The result of the census is a complete surprise. "The trade of the port has been increasing steadily, shopkeepers and middlemen have prospered, and the working class have been well employed. Moreover there is no apparent decrease in the voters' lists of the different wards. On all sides rises a protest that a great mistake of some kind has been made, and the registrar-general is a target for uncomplimentary remarks."
