THE MORAVIAN BRIDE.

It was the 1st of August, that brightest, sunniest month of all the year, when the bleak northern coast of Labrador takes on a fleeting garb of emerald green; when the boisterous winds subside to gentle zephyrs, and the tumultuous ocean, seemingly entranced, rests from its labors and lovingly laps the shore.

In one of the broad channels between the thousand rocky isles which gird the mainland, a large brig lay becalmed. Her sails hung idly from the yellow yards, and the helmsman no longer maintained a pretense of directing her.

In the vessel's waist the captain, a bachelor of forty years, promenaded back and forth with a young woman, who lightly rested a gloved hand on his arm.

"So you have never seen his photograph?" he asked.

"No; not even that," she answered, absently.

"You know no more of him than merely this: That he is yet in his novitiate, acting as keeper of the Mission store; that he is 24 and wants a wife, and is willing to accept the Bishop's choice. Yet you come across the sea to share his lot; to sacrifice your inclinations and desires; to bury yourself for life in this wild land."

"A sacrifice it may be, sir," she said. "How great I did not feel when we set sail."

A wave of hope and possible longing flooded the captain's heart. It shone from his clear brown eyes as he turned to face her.

"It is too great a sacrifice," he said with warmth. "The pity of it! and there is one would give——"

She looked at him strangely, and withdrew her hand.

"You forget, sir!" she interrupted. "It is the Bishop's will. He holds my promise made before the church. I did not know then all it meant to me, but I had time for thought and was not urged. It is my duty and my work in life."

"The sense of such a duty is absurd——"

"No, no," she broke in hurriedly. "You are a valued servant of our church; your Christian duty is to help me."

"My duty as a man——"

But she disappeared within the companion-way, and, vexed, he turned impatiently to the lounging helmsman severely recalling him to his neglected post.

* * * *

In the solitude of her cabin she flung herself upon the cushioned locker, the captain's words still ringing in her ears. He loved her! Of that she felt assured. And she—? But no! She must not, dare not think of that.

Could it be a mistaken sense of duty? She was the daughter of missionaries, generation upon generation, and following in the very footsteps, she from them traced a score of years before. Although she had lived at home but till the age of seven, she remembered as though it were but yesterday, the story of her mother's early life, as she herself had told it; and in crowds the girl compared that life with what her own had been, seeking to find some jot of difference.

She knew the harmony of her parents' lives, each kind and thoughtful of the other's weal; their only sorrow the parting from their child, and this they both agreed was wise and best. How else could children of the wilderness be fitted for useful lives; It was a rule dictated by the church, to which they owed obedience as salvation's price.

These mission-born children were educated by the church in the belief that duty to it was paramount; the wishes of its clergy were commands, the Bishop's will an edict from on high. The boys were trained to fill their father's place; the girls to make the missionaries wives; the men to take what wives the church bestowed; the women to marry without choice such husbands as the Bishop might award.

And that the church had wisdom on its side was proved by the universal happiness to which those thus united testified.

And yet she could not reconcile herself. Her innate modesty revolted at the idea of surrendering to a perfect stranger's will. How could she fail to hate him, to despise this man, who without one spark from the flaming altar of true love, would willingly forfeit all noble sentiments of mind and heart and selfishly debase him and her pure young womanhood!

And she herself would make this union possible!

An overpowering loathing of herself possessed her with the thought, a terror she strove vainly to control; and the pent-up torrent of her dread burst forth, sweeping her away upon its turbulent waves in paroxysms of despairing tears.

An atmosphere of feverish expectancy pervaded the usually quiet surroundings of the Post. People were hastily gathering from all quarters upon the little mound beside the church. The oil depot and factory were deserted and the wolfish dogs might pass the unguarded door and drink their fill from the uncovered vats of oil.

The missionary's tidy children jostled with the crowd of natives, unnoticed by their nurses. The baker and brewer stood on the Mission-house porch, puffing vigorously at his long Dutch pipe, while his little frau leaned down him conversed excitedly with the gardener's wife, who leaned from an open lattice.

A rising hum of eager voices came from the hillock, where the throng of dusky Esquimaux was steadily increasing and every eye was strained upon the entrance to the little bay.

The cause of this unusual agitation had been a signal gun hot from the hill, fired by the sentry stationed there to keep a lookout for the long-expected ship. It was to bring them news from over the sea, the history of the great world's doings for a year; letters from friends and relatives, presents and messages, supplies and stores; their first intelligence for a long while months. What wonder then, that they looked forward anxiously, counting the months and weeks and days and hours, until the welcome sail might arrive.

And one there was to whom it brought a bride. He was the youngest white man at the post. He had her picture brought through the winter snows and stormy twilight by the native messenger who journeyed over the frozen snows with his sledge to the lower Missions where he met the factor of the great company, buying furs, and who brought a few precious letters to the Post, forwarded by a winter courier from Quebec.

Two thousand miles the print had come by sledge, and every day the young man studied it, noting the charms of youthful curves and mouth, rounded cheek and wavy hair, speculating upon her character and longing for the dreading that momentous time when they should meet to either love or hate.

Which would it be, and could he gain her love? How should he greet her? He, a gawky youth, who, graduated his school as selfishly trained, and no experience with the other sex regarding them as quite beyond his ken, knew nothing of the pangs of boyish love, and only had a crude abstract idea of the happiness, duties, sacrifice and pain involved in the mysteries of married life.

The elder of the Post had said the time was ripe for him to take a wife. Obedient to the magnate of the church, he had written, at dictation, his request.

And now the signal shot had let them know the vessel bringing her was drawing near.

He left the store with speed, fled to his room, bathed, combed and dressed him in his best; looked at the photograph and put it back with a sigh, yet cover next his heart, laughed and half cried, and paced the rough floor and through the open window nervously watched and waited for the coming ship.

The murmur of the voices now increased and swelled into shouts of "Gleanerakoo-a-k-o-o-t!" and round the precipitous point, with white sails and pennants flying, swept the noble brig. The bay was dotted now with bright kayaks, and volley on volley rang from a hundred guns, the church-bell pealed, the dogs set up a howl and sang their wierd chorus lustily; flags fluttered bravely from the Mission roofs and presently the brig's signalling cannon boomed.

The novice hid his face within his hands, with fluttering heart of mingled joy and fear, and wished himself ten thousand miles away.

A week passed; the brig still lay at anchor in the bay.

Within his study the Mission elder sat; his long gray beard falling in tangled waves upon his breast.

His keen, gray eyes were bent upon the novice and the girl who stood respectfully waiting till he should speak.

For 40 years he had lived his mission life, and his thoughts were busy with that time, long passed, when he had been just such another youth and had obeyed just such a call to wed. His helpmate's silvery hair was auburn then; her dear old wrinkled face was smooth and fair. The children of their love were scattered wide; one had been sent to Asia's infidel land, another lived beneath the scorching rays that bleached the sands of Africa, and a third had labored for the church among the hordes of one of those fair isles in the sea, and news had come that he, the most beloved, had been rewarded with a martyr's crown.

"Fraulein," he said at last, "the time is short; the brig must sail to-morrow. I must urge that you should give your answer definitely.

"It is a thing most serious to you both, but you have been together seven days; not long in which to fix upon a wife or learn to judge a lover's moods and whims.

"But I can speak myself for this young man; I pledge you he is upright, virtuous, kind.

"And as for you, my son, she is far more. Her features would be ample passport without this commendation from the church. That you already love her I can see. What do you answer?"

The young man looked to her, then dropped his gaze. "You speak but truth, sir; she is dear to me. I would not have her leave me; but still less would I enjoy the thought that she was forced by sense of duty only to share my lot."

"I pray let her decide for both of us, and give her till the morrow to reply. If she should wish for more delay it is not necessary we should wed at once, and meanwhile I may try to win her love."

"What says the maidchen?"

The girl was touched by the generous thoughtfulness the youth had shown, and by the kindness of the aged man. She cast one swift, wistful glance through the open window at the anchored brig, where the captain's stalwart figure paced the quarter, and blushed and bowed her head and tried to speak. Then, with returning courage and resolve, she approached and knelt beside the old man's chair.

"Father," she said, her sweet voice tremulous, "I have had thoughts, unworthy of my faith, rebellious thoughts and fears, and wicked moods. If either is unworthy, it is I.

"Give me some few days more before we wed—and let the brig sail. I will stay with you."

The American Woman.

The most interesting of the American women, by far, are the married ones from six-and-twenty to forty; at that age they are apt to become suddenly grey and plain. Their faces dry up and grow sharp, and colorless; you scarcely ever see anyone approaching the comfortable, happy English matron of forty to fifty-five. Perhaps they danced, flirted, gadded about too much when they were young to have any fund of enjoyment left. Whatever the reason, whether it be that of a digestion ruined by tea, iced water and candy, your best companions and friends in America will always be the young married women; so long as they are not too much given to cocaine and French novels of the gayer type.

They have, as a rule, travelled more, read more, thought more, and to far more intelligent purpose, than their English cousins; nor do they let their children, in English fashion, come between you and their conversation. Who has not talked to the young English matron, and, just as you are getting at her mind, note the distant look in her eye, which tells you she is wondering what the children are doing? Whether Gerald is in bed yet, or Belle has had her milk? Now the American matron never does that; when she is with you, she makes tabula rasa of children, and household duties, and gives you her undivided attention and intelligence. Not that she cares much about listening; as a rule, she cares only to talk of herself, her experiences and thoughts, nor is she, to my mind, the less agreeable companion for that.—Temple Bar.

THAT ACHING HEAD.
What Causes It and How Overcome.

How often the remark, "Oh, my head aches," and there are so many varieties of aches and pains the head is subject to all along the line from the dull and heavy and oppressed feeling over the eyes to the persistent, racking and torturing misery of Sick Headache. The cause is in most cases the same, the overflow of poisonous uric acid is not extracted from the blood by the Kidneys, and accumulating in the blood, causes high and irregular pulse, headaches, mental depression and nausea. Chase's K. & L. Pills tone and restore the Kidneys, excrete poisonous matter from the blood, sending it on its way pure and health-giving, curing Headache, and removing all the attending symptoms from its wake. Mrs. G. Bird, Harriston, Ont., while attending the 1894 Fall Exhibition at Toronto, was taken very ill with Sick Headache and dizziness. She was subject to these attacks for years, compelling her to take to her bed. In this case by using Chase's Pills relief was immediately obtained, and the usual days of misery and prostration avoided. Thousands of such cases can be referred to where Chase's Pills have cured Sick Headache and its attendant symptoms. 25 cents a box, of all dealers, or by addressing Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard St., Toronto.

GRATIFYING INTELLIGENCE.
Word Received of the Complete Recovery of Mrs. John Dowly.

OWEN SOUND, June 24.—Word has been received here of the complete restoration to health of Mrs John Dowly, wife of a former well known and esteemed resident of the town. The intelligence has been very gladly received as Mrs Dowly has many friends here who are well aware of the lamentable condition of her health during the past six or seven years. Her illness has been found to result from a severe kidney complaint and she has been restored to health by the judicious use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which is now well known to most of the residents in this locality as having previously affected some very extraordinary cures.

Science Triumphant at Last.

Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the outcome of the latest scientific researches. There was always a prejudice against taking Cod Liver Oil on account of its disagreeable taste, but Miller's Emulsion is agreeable to the palate, and that is one reason why it has become so popular with the medical fraternity, the hospitals of the country and the households wherever consumption or lung troubles prevail. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottle, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

Advertisers!

The home circulation is the most valuable for advertisers. THE EXAMINER reaches the homes of our citizens every evening. That accounts for our large advertising patronage.
