Opening lead—jack of hearts.
The lack of sufficient communication between declarer's hand and dummy's frequently spells the difference between making a contract and going down.

By the same token, the defenders are also hampered from time to time because they lack entries to each other's hands.

In the deal shown, declarer had to make a fine play to disrupt enemy communications and escape otherwise sure defeat.

South was Ruth Sherman, of New York, winner of many national championships and one of our outstanding players on the distaff side, West led the jack of hearts, dummy played low, and East won with the ace. East returned the four of hearts, taken in dummy.

It was obvious that East had started with a doubleton heart and was all set to ruff the next heart lead. Had declarer now led a trump, East would have taken the ace, but West in with a club, and the heart return would then have defeated the contract.
But Miss Sherman, conscious of the death blow poised to descend upon her, managed to ward it off. Since the contract could be defeated only if West obtained the lead to return a heart, she bent all her efforts toward finding a way to prevent East from putting West in the lead.

The two notrump bid had made it clear that East held both the ace of spades and king of diamonds. Hence, West's only entry had to be in clubs. This entry was the one that had to be cut off if the hand was to be made.
Accordingly, at trick three, Miss Sherman cashed the ace of diamonds and then played the queen. East was forced to cover with the king, whereupon declarer discarded her singleton club.
East returned a club, but the king had flown the coop. Miss Sherman trumped the club and forced out the ace of spades. She then ruffed the club return, drew trumps, and ran her hearts to make the contract. All in all, she lost a spade, a heart, and a diamond.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y Z L B A A X E
L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation.
