BACK WHERE IT ALL BEGAN AFTER 100 YEARS

The Provincial Building here today is barely starting to show its age. In 1864, when the Fathers of Confederation met here for the first time Sept. 1, 1864, the building was a simple wooden structure. It has since been replaced by the present building, but the location remains the same. The building is a fine example of Gothic Revival architecture, with its prominent spire and arched windows. It stands as a testament to the historical significance of the site.

RENEW DEDICATION

Quebec Mayor Wilfrid Hamel said the departure not only commemorates the 100th anniversary of the day, but should spark renewed dedication to the province of good will and mutual confidence that went into the creation of the federal union of Canada.

GREATER FREEDOM

"We desire a position of greater strength, a greater freedom to develop the potential of this great land for ourselves. The question of colonial union has got to be considered. I believe its consideration must be now, and we will ignore it at our peril."
