

Insufficient Clothing in Winter.

There are in the winter time numberless children and young girls to be met with who are not sufficiently dressed for the severe season.

The want of smoothness and moisture in the skin, the hectic spot on the cheek, the narrow, compressed chest, the sharp breath, the dull eyes, the wan cheek—all show that there is not enough warmth in the blood to keep up vitality, and that they are insufficiently clothed.

You see short skirts in the children, allowing the air to go up their tender limbs. A jacket is believed all that is needed when these children pass from an over-heated house to the cold atmosphere without, and that is not sufficient for their protection.

The hygiene of clothing is as yet little understood, but the time is approaching when it will be, and we shall know that the texture of a material may either make it a bad or good heat conductor, and consequently, a fit or unfit substance to wear in winter weather.

Nothing is for children more necessary than that the trunk of the body should be well protected, the arms and legs from the knees downward, will be warm if the trunk of the body is thoroughly covered and warmed.

Let us warn mothers against having no skirts for young children, or perhaps only one for the outer dress. A double or treble skirt, even if short, will not allow the cold to play around the trunk of the body, and it is that which must be kept warm, especially in girls.

You may see numbers of young girls in cars dressed insufficiently. By their appearance you can judge that it is not through the want of means, but from fancy. The thin scanty skirt and the light jacket show that the season's need is not thought of.

What future do they not provide for themselves, their husbands and children? The doctor will have a long bill for them; ill-health will follow them through life, and maybe they will find an early grave.

See with what easy grace a well-clad woman, girl or child bears the wintry weather and freely breathes the exhilarating air! How they enjoy it, and how, instead of shivering with cold, their blood is warmed and bounds in their veins, tingling their cheeks with a beautiful faint red, and not discoloring their lips with that bluish color, which bespeaks a defective circulation.

Three layers of clothing are needed in winter and if these are to carry out a thorough heating system, they should be of different textures. It is almost a crime to allow children and young girls insufficiently dressed to go out from rooms kept far too hot into a freezing atmosphere.

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

It is well known that a very large proportion of the ills to which females are the direct result of suppressed or disordered menstruation, and it is necessary therefore that a safe and reliable remedy for the cure of these diseases be placed within the reach of every one.
