Two Milk Plants To Be Clean-Up

By DON MacLeod
Guardian - Patriot Staff Writer
Two pasteurizing plants in the province, one in Charlottetown and one in Prince George, have received a warning from the department of health that their licences are liable to suspension if they do not clean up their equipment and produce top-grade milk.

Dr. Robert McNeill, minister of health, said this morning two plants in the province "have not been producing the grade of milk they can produce, or have been producing in the past. Therefore, these plants have received a warning that their licences are liable to suspension if they do not clean up their equipment and produce top-grade milk."

Dr. McNeill said his department's division of sanitary engineering takes weekly samples from every pasteurizing plant in the province and submits the samples for laboratory tests. "Over a period of time," he said, "we get an indication if a plant is slipping and not producing a good quality, safe product."

TIME LIMIT SET

Dr. McNeill said that the Charlottetown plant has until Sept. 1 to comply with the regulations of the department of health. The Prince George plant, Dr. McNeill thought, has already been taken by these plants, as they cannot operate without a license.

Dr. McNeill added that "the public expects milk and milk products coming from a pasteurizing plant to be safe from a health point of view, and the department means to see that that is the case. It is not threatened by poor handling of milk and pasteurizing equipment during the pasteurizing plant."

Dr. McNeill declined to name the two plants as he felt both should be given time to meet the standards laid down by the health department.

NOT A GOOD PICTURE

It was pointed out in the last interim report of the department of health that the results of sanitary tests of provincial plants over the past four years do not present a very encouraging picture.

Dr. Burton Howatt, acting director of the division of sanitary engineering, wrote: "Ex-

P.E.I. Gets $1,359,000 In ARDA Program Deal

By DON MacLeod
Guardian - Patriot Staff Writer
The federal government has allocated $1,359,000 over the next three years to this province to carry out projects under the provisions of the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act. It was announced jointly this morning by Agricultural Minister Andrew MacRae and Deputy Minister Leo Rossiter.

Mr. MacRae and Mr. Rossiter met in Ottawa Monday with A. Davidson, director of the ARDA program, to discuss this province's participation. "We are also pleased," said Mr. MacRae, "that a number of specific projects have been given assurance of approval. These projects involve reforestation, development of ponds and dams, rural electrification, and the expansion of parks and recreational facilities."

Of great significance is the fact that these federal grants will permit us to accelerate and expand our programs already in existence. Among these are parks, water and wildlife conservation, and electrification."
