

Text Pearson's Address Saturday Night To The UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — The text of the address of the late Sir Alexander Pearson to the United Nations General Assembly Saturday night.

The immediate purpose of our meeting tonight is to bring about as soon as possible a cease-fire and a withdrawal of forces, in the area which we are considering, from contact and from conflict with each other. Our longer-range purpose, which has already been referred to tonight and which may ultimately, in its implications, be even more important, is to find solutions for the problems which, over the years, have finally exploded into this fighting and conflict.

In regard to this longer-range purpose, important resolutions have been submitted this evening by the United States delegation. We value this initiative, and our delegation will give the resolutions the examination which their importance deserves and will, I hope, make its own detailed comments concerning them later.

So far as the first and immediate purpose is concerned, a short time ago the Assembly passed, by a very large majority, a resolution which is now a recommendation of the United Nations General Assembly. And so we must ask ourselves how the United Nations can assist in securing compliance with the terms of this resolution from those who are most immediately concerned and whose compliance is essential if that resolution is to be carried out. How can we get from them the support and co-operation which is required, and how can we do this quickly?

BEDTIME STORIES

Hooty Grows Sleepy

Who would a faithful vigil keep, Cannot afford one moment's sleep. —Hooty the Owl.

Over in that part of the Green Forest where a certain big hickory tree grows, it was very, very quiet. It was so still that you might have the rustle of a falling leaf had you been there. It was strangely still because only a short time before it had been the noisiest place in all the Green Forest. Chatterer the Red Squirrel had been shrieking at his cousins, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and could turn each of the Squirrel cousins was in hiding and so was Sammy Jay.

Hooty was disappointed, but he never allows disappointment to discourage him. He can be very, very patient. He knew that no matter where the others were hiding they would have to come out by and by. So he flew to a perch where he could watch the big hickory tree and prepare to stay a long time if necessary. It was daytime. As a rule, Hooty does his sleeping in the daytime and hunting at night. But he does hunt in the daytime when the hunting had been poor at night, especially on dull, dark days. It was a dull, dark day, now, so at first he didn't mind keeping awake.

He made no sound. He sat with his big, keen ears wide open to catch the faintest sound. Now and then he turned his head for a quick look behind him. Hooty can do this so quickly that if you were watching him you might make the mistake that many folks have made, of thinking he turned his head completely around. Of course he cannot do that. If he did, he might twist his head off.

Now all the time the bright eyes of Sammy Jay and the three Squirrel cousins were watching him. They watched him every minute. Never once did one of them turn his head to look anywhere else. They were watching for opportunity. And whoever watches for opportunity cannot afford to turn a side for even one little minute.

Now and then Hooty blinked. It was always a quick blink. His eyes closed and opened so quickly that it could hardly be seen. After a while Hooty blinked more often. The truth is, he was getting sleepy. You know it really was his sleeping time. Presently the four watchers were ready. They slipped away while Hooty's eyes were closed, but they didn't make a sound doing it. If they had, those wonderful ears of his would have heard.

the cease-fire visualized in the assembly resolution which has already been passed.

For that purpose my delegation would like to secure co-operation in a very short draft resolution which I venture to read at this time. It is as follows:

"The General Assembly, bearing in mind the urgent necessity of facilitating compliance with the resolution (A-3256) of 2 November, requests, as a matter of priority, the Secretary-General to submit to it within forty-eight hours a plan for the setting up, with the consent of the nations concerned, of an emergency international United Nations force to secure and supervise the cessation of hostilities in accordance with the terms of the above resolution."

I would assume that during this short period the Secretary-General would get into touch, with, and endeavour to secure co-operation in the carrying out of this resolution from the parties immediately concerned—whose co-operation, I venture to repeat, is essential—as well as endeavouring to secure help and co-operation from any others whom he thinks might assist him in his vitally important task.

This draft resolution which I have just read out, and which will be circulated shortly, has an added purpose of facilitating and making effective compliance with the resolution which we have already

THE WEEK AT S. D. U.

Many students are now breathing sighs of relief as the tedium of long, sleepless nights and much book delving caused by exam time has passed. And the general upheaval in our midst clearly expressed Milton's "disastrous situation, waste and wild". With the subsiding of this atmosphere, fears have been dispelled as the tide of examinations has been put to flight. In certain quarters of "uninviting" textbooks which have survived the recent harsh usage have been reshuffled to their usual slot amid other intact objects. The vast majority of students, of course, are finding their pace with regard to keeping their studies in line, and the going gets better for those who take heed of their shortcomings.

The Students' Union held a meeting recently to fill the position of president of the Amateur Athletic Association which was vacated by Arnold Mullen. Elmer Hamill was appointed as the new president, and sat as chairman of a meeting of the A. A. A. called to discuss plans for the forthcoming hockey season soon to open.

It was suggested that some samples of hockey equipment be purchased before the regular outfits are chosen. The secretary-treasurer, Adelbert Roche, proposed to take orders, from all students interested, for skates.

Athletics for the coming season got its first boost here on Sunday when St. Dunstan's engaged in its first outside competition of the year. A jubilant crowd of spectators watched the Saints Senior Basketball team display rare early-season form in defeating a Charlottetown All-Star team by the score of 65-49. The coach, Father McGuigan is pleased to see all last year's regular team members back along with the addition of several new prospects. On the whole, the Saints' hoop squad should be a stronger and better balanced aggregate than they were last year.

The hockey players are taking regular workouts these days, and are preparing to take to the ice within a few days for practice sessions. From the ranks of the potential distance runners, a cross-country running team is being organized to represent St. Dun-passed on the part of those whose compliance is absolutely essential. It has also the purpose of providing for international supervision of that compliance through the United Nations, and, finally, it has as its purpose the bringing to an end of the fighting and bloodshed at once, even while the Secretary-General is examining this question and reporting back in forty-eight hours.

If this draft resolution commended itself to the General Assembly—and I suggest that it is not in conflict with the draft resolution which has just been read to us by our Indian colleague—and if it were accepted and accepted quickly the Secretary-General could at once begin the important task which the draft resolution gives him. I apologize for adding to his burdens in this way, because they have already been added to in the immediately preceding draft resolution, but we know that he can carry burdens of this kind both unshakably and efficiently.

Meanwhile, during this period of forty-eight hours we can get on with our consideration of and decision on the United States draft resolution and other draft resolutions before the General Assembly which deal with this grave and dangerous situation which confronts us both in relation to its immediate as well as its wider and perhaps even more far-reaching aspects.

Both the C. O. T. C. and U. N. T. D. contingents of the Armed Forces have a good representation of college students here this year. The total enrolment, including the holdovers from last year's ranks as well as the newcomers, is a substantial increase over last year's number. The C. O. T. C. recruits have already begun their basic training program under Father Kelly's direction.

The Co-eds on the campus have expressed their voice in college society activities by organizing this year's committee of the Delta Upsilon Sorority, which is as follows: Moderator, Father Landrigan; President, Nancy Gillis; Vice-president, Marjorie Aker; Secretary, Mary Cameron; Sophomore representative, Mary Elaine Trainor; Freshman representative, Mary Clare Smith; Chairman of Social Committee, Arlene Dowling; Chairman of Cultural Committee, Beverly Howard; Chairman of Religious Committee, Doreen Cusack.

This year, emphasis will be placed on the cultural aspect, since it is felt to be lacking in the program of girls' college life. This project will consist mainly in presenting guest speakers. Girls' basketball is to be organized, and they hope to draw up a few teams. The girls also plan to engage in badminton and skating as regular activities of the winter months.

We have had a number of interesting visitors on the campus recently. Representatives of the Civil Service Commission from Ottawa have held a short conference open to all students who might be interested in finding out about careers in the Civil Service. Also a delegation of R. C. A. F. representatives touring the Maritimes to lecture on opportunities in the Airforce as Officer Cadets visited the campus and held an open conference last week.

So until next week, greetings from S. D. U. And remember, in the hustle and bustle of daily pursuits, that experience for some merely causes them to make new mistakes instead of the same old ones.

CHOW TIME AT THE GAME SANCTUARY

An unforgettable sight can be witnessed any evening this time of year at Moore's Game Sanctuary, Milltown Cross, four miles from Montague on the Commercial Road. At the familiar "Come on!" "Come on!" of their friend Mr. Harvey Moore, ducks by the thousand-blacks, pintails, mallards and bald-pates—and a few Canada geese waddle hurriedly up the bank to partake of the feed being scattered for them.

These creatures of the wild gathered close around Mr. Moore as he sat tossing out handfuls of grain. One little duck snuggled trustfully on his shoulder, others ate from his hand; and the big Canada geese pecked in his pockets or plucked at his clothing with a proprietary air.

Grenfell Ass'n. Head Pays Visit To Montague On Ship

Dr. Charles S. Curtis, International Grenfell Association head, arrived from St. Anthony's, Newfoundland on board the famous mission ship the "Nellie A. Cluett" and spent the greater part of the week at Montague where citizens were interested in this man who has given so generously of his talents to the great foundation work started by Sir Wilfred Grenfell.

It was, however, a disappointment to the people that Dr. Curtis could not have stayed longer so that more might have had the opportunity to meet him and hear of the progress of the well known association since its inception, and when Sir Wilfred first sailed his hospital ship around a thousand miles of coast, when there were no doctors, schools, or hospitals to be found.

It was no doubt tedious work and then there were many hardships encountered, as hospitals at St. Anthony's, Harrington, Battle Harbor, St. Mary's River, Cartwright, North West River and so on were established.

Many nursing stations also were erected and served faithfully and well the countless numbers during the past years. Also there were boarding schools, orphanages and clothing houses, where donations were distributed.

For forty years Dr. Curtis has been with the International Grenfell Association with headquarters at St. Anthony's. Today it is most modern.

Captain Kenneth Iverson, who is master of the Cluett has been with the Association for some 27 years and has been coming to this port of Montague with the different Grenfell ships, where Poole and Thompson Ltd., has been privileged and honored to load them for as many years.

It is interesting to note that Mrs. Iverson, who joined the boat at Montague, returned during the week from a five-month trip to New Zealand, where she visited her sister.

Both Captain and Mrs. Iverson, are now well known here and have a host of friends.

Island Doctor At Springhill

Dr. R.A. Burden of St. Peter's Bay, who is a native of Springhill, N.S., and who, in his boyhood days, was connected with the mines, left immediately for Springhill on receipt of the news of the terrible disaster at the mine.

The grand old disciple of Aesculapius, Dr. Roddie MacDonald, in his 99th year and 70th year of medical practice, is taking charge of Dr. Burden's practice during his absence.

The youthful near-centenarian has attended several cases already since Dr. Burden's departure. He steps around with all his former verve and pristine vigor. Considering the extent of the disaster, it is quite possible that Dr. MacDonald will have to assume full
