CONTRACT BRIDGE
By B. JAV BECKER

rect, however, since he had ample values for a free bid, and no satisfactory alternate bid was available.

West made the normal lead of a low spade from three to an honor in response to East's spade bid. Dummy played low, and the result of the hand hinged on East's play to this trick.

Had East made the mechanical play of the queen, in line with the general rule of "third hand high," declarer would have made the contract.

But East, after thinking the matter over played the ten, and South was forced to win with the jack.

Declarer had only seven tricks immediately available. He had no chance to make the contract without tacking clubs. As soon as he did, West took the ace, led the ace and another spade, and South went down one.

East's play of the ten on the opening lead was well-based. If declarer had both A-J, the play of either the ten or queen would not matter. If declarer had only the ace the ten would be just as effective as the queen. But if declarer had only the jack, which meant West had the ace, only the play of the ten could bring the spade suit home.

It is of course true that playing the queen would have won the first trick instead of losing it. But this was not the point at issue. The aim was to beat the lead was a secondary consideration.

The game was duly arrived at, though South's notrump bid without a spade stopper was somewhat unusual. The bid was correct, however, since he had ample values for a free bid, and no satisfactory alternate bid was available.

Japan Looks Toward China
As Possible Major Market

By JAMES CARY
TOKYO (AP)—Japan, industrial giant of Asia, is moving toward a more neutral, but still Western-oriented, role in world affairs.

Prime Minister Kishi and his conservative Liberal - Democrats last month launched a new government pledged to continue close ties with the non-Communist world. Yet pressures against this posture are strong and insistent.

Most imperative is the problem of making a living.

Last year Japan sold $3,712,000,000 in goods and services and bought $4,307,000,000, leaving a gap of $685,000,000 in its international balance of trade.

To cover the deficit Japan must trade wherever it can. This includes the Communist world and the Asia mainland, particularly Red China, a nation with which it has no diplomatic relations.

POTENTIAL MARKET
China is considered by many Japanese a market of great potential, capable of purchasing more than $200,000,000 in Japanese goods annually although 1957's trade totalled only $60,000,000.

China severed trade relations with Japan early this year in a squabble about flying its flag over a trade mission in Tokyo, and made it plain it wants diplomatic concessions as the price for renewal.

There is strong sentiment for paying the price soon even though proper development of the American market is considered by many to be a far greater source of potential revenue.

Strong pressure toward a middle-of-the-road position comes also from Japan's fear of getting Roundup

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
I S L O N G F E L L O W
One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
