

MARY HAWORTH Moral Confusion Shown By Husband's Behavior

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband spent three years in college, is semi-retired and puts himself on a pedestal as a do-gooder in civic affairs and politics.

Yet he too (like husband of your recent correspondent) is an avid reader of "slick" magazines and trashy novels. He buys the raciest trash and interrupts his hides it.

I learned through leaks from his friends that he was seeing strip shows after attending meetings at his men's club. He claims he has stopped but I don't believe him as I said that before, then broke his word.

He isn't sex starved at home. So why is his mind always in "divide and conquer" Canada. Lately he is spending more time than necessary at a property he owns and must have divorced a shop with living quarters, in guise of attending school which is untrue for both know he hires such work done.

He says there is nothing between and I don't believe they are lovers yet, but can't give a reasonable answer for hanging around her. Though he knows I am opposed, he continues to see her.

We have a married son and two pre-school-age children, but I am thinking of divorce, as I no longer love or cherish him, yet our marriage is without fault. I am sure that in the meantime, the other woman is getting in my way. What should I do?

DEAR C.S.: As the twig is bent, so the tree inclines. And in this case, it is the tree that is bent, so the tree inclines.

If your husband is an inveterate reader of pornographic fiction, his personality would be progressively more lecherous than living, of course.

In which case, you are confronted with a serious problem. If you have a healthy disposition towards sex, and a wholesome human need to love and be loved, you would feel a rising tide of distaste for the rampant, insidious decline towards degeneracy.

So, what to do? I think you must have firsthand analytic help, or analytically oriented pastoral guidance, in taking your bearings at this time. I feel sure that any wise, perceptive, dispassionate authority in the field of family relationships and moral welfare would recognize a major threat of your overall well-being, if the mild, mare-type creeping sex sickness that is distorting your husband's behavior is not checked.

Unquestionably, you have a right to refuse to consort with such profane character-transformation in the marriage bed. And if you have high courage and basic respect, this is the course you probably will choose.

I doubt that the divorce, in itself, is a threat to your marriage. I think she figures, simply, as one more symptom of what is wrong with you, namely: psycho-sexual and moral degeneration.

He turns to her (and away from you) because of his pornographically-poisoned mind, so she becomes his primary appeaser. And even now he isn't so depraved as to want to cast his wife in the most prominent role in his quest for variation. M.H.

Mrs. Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of the Guardian.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Beginning to Houseclean Ellen Fills Cookie jars

"This is it!" we called to James in the barnyard, when we came to the outdoors in the mildness and sunshine of this morning. Now, we can feel it's our turn to spring loaded.

"Seems so, Ellen!" he smiled. Alex and Peter were then on the job. Guns bang, bang, bang. "Indians" were on the run, or left, poor things, as "dead as doornails" and they were ordered sternly "Put your hands up!" in a make-believe venture which they are to remind us, "Always comes out right in the end. For don't you see, it's only the bad fellows who are shot. The good ones go free!"

My grandmother doesn't like to see you playing with guns," we overheard James say. She thinks that they are doing serious things. You might fall and get hurt. Or turn suddenly — and away goes an eye. Why?" he suggested "don't you get yourselves a rein from the stable, and go play dead!"

"Play horses?" Peter repeated wondrously. "Oh, I guess he means cowboys!" he snorted to Alex. "You know — a horseback. Not a bad idea!" we commented.

"That's silly," Alex grinned. "How could we play dead?" Children played happily. Lambs sunned at their doorway. There were exultant caws from the poultry house. Sparrows chirped blithely. "It's the new song!" of the springtime was commencing to be heard.

"That's such a luring time, Hearts, with nature's right in rhyme. Seems as if the good brown variety bursts at its spring's reward."

And what of this week about to go out over the hill in the stars? We remember of it, how quickly the days passed. And how pleasantly.

And if James, looking back along its span of days this evening recalled with some regret, "We didn't get even one stick of dynamite out of the barns has not lagged."

"Seems as though there's company a-comin' Mack over the hill in the stars," we could hear him say. "Could be," we chuckled. "But this is intended to tide us over a spell of housecleaning. A backing" we said.

And all day, April was beautiful day, we fancy as one described this in verse: "I heard it's our turn to spring loaded. I fell far off distant hill. I fell the first warm breeze from Canada."

White clouds in majesty march forth Across a clean blue sky. And sunlight bestows its brilliance With warm, emphatic sigh.

Why is it that my heart so full Feels so compelled to sing? God has touched the wintered earth. And, lo, 'tis spring!"

Until Monday — Diary — Good-night...

Book Inspired Stronger Laws On Pesticides

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill Saturday to strengthen federal laws on pesticides and new steps to regulate their control.

The book warned of the dangers of pesticides and urged biological controls rather than chemical ones. It also urged the use of chemicals, such as pesticides and weed-killers.

Miss Carson, who has been criticized by some, including pesticide industry chemists, as presenting an incomplete picture stressing only the dark side. Manufacturers and trade associations defended in advance the safety of pesticides "when used as directed."

PRaise FROM UDALL After learning of her death, Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall heaped praise on Miss Carson. He said she was "one of the kind of women who makes men proud, a scientist of rare courage and conviction."

Miss Carson first became concerned with chemical weed-killers and pesticides in 1951 when she was a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

She received a bachelor's degree at Pennsylvania College and a master's degree at Johns Hopkins University.

When she cracked the heat-resistant plastic containers for the U.S. she was editor-in-chief of all Fish and Wildlife Service publications. She retired from the government about a year later and wrote "The Edge of the Sea. Silent Spring," published in 1962, was her last book.

Miss Carson never married but had a grandnephew, Roger Christie, now 10.

DALLAS DESIGN

Cupola-Leelees of Dallas designed this fresh two-piece costume for summer wear in town or for travel. The outfit is of rayon and cotton with a silk-like finish. It comes in a choice of colors with white stripes.

Stripes are worked up, down and around on the jacket with its mock pockets, unusual merered sleeve detailing and self-covered buttons. The skirt is slender with horizontal stripes.

Calls For Start On Nat. Renewal

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — Mrs. Paul Duchesneau, president of the women's division of the Quebec St. Jean Baptiste Society, has called on the French-speaking women of Quebec to participate in what she calls Quebec's spectacular start toward national renewal.

Some 30 delegates gathered in this community, 30 miles east of Montreal, for the meeting. They represented 100,000 members of the group.

Miss Duchesneau said French people would, however, any biological controls argued that fresh fruits and vegetables are full of chemicals, such as pesticides and weed-killers.

The delegates called for a more active participation of women in the ranks of our ethnic minority without, however, any feminist activities of a gross and old-fashioned kind.

PRaise FROM UDALL After learning of her death, Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall heaped praise on Miss Carson. He said she was "one of the kind of women who makes men proud, a scientist of rare courage and conviction."

Miss Carson first became concerned with chemical weed-killers and pesticides in 1951 when she was a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

She received a bachelor's degree at Pennsylvania College and a master's degree at Johns Hopkins University.

When she cracked the heat-resistant plastic containers for the U.S. she was editor-in-chief of all Fish and Wildlife Service publications. She retired from the government about a year later and wrote "The Edge of the Sea. Silent Spring," published in 1962, was her last book.

Miss Carson never married but had a grandnephew, Roger Christie, now 10.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

CAC Reviews Problems Of Local Consumers

Local problems handled by the Consumers' Association of Canada were described at this month's Information Program held Wednesday evening at the YMCA.

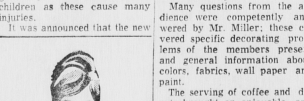

The study of consumer problems is one of the objectives of CAC and while most of this work is done at the national level, local questions are handled by the local associations.

SUGAR PRICES The question of sugar prices was reviewed with the advice to cut down on those products with high sugar content when prices are at their highest and to shop around as the price has differed up to 7 cents from store to store.

BREAD PRICES Bread prices were also under discussion and it was pointed out that it is still possible to buy good Island bread at 25 cents or less. The fine work of the Food and Drug Dept. of the Government was brought to the attention of members. Labels and weights on packages and grades of food products were explained.

MAGAZINE SALESMEN The license required by the city from magazine salesmen was shown and the suggestion made that they be given representatives not from door to door salesmen, but from these salesmen the consumer should check with the Better Business Bureau the type of company they represent. Parents were advised to keep pea shooters and BB guns out of the hands of their children as these cause many injuries.

It was announced that the new

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Crab Meat Is King In Souffle Supreme

"Crab is one of the finest sea foods in the world," observed the Chef. "Fortunately, it is available year-round at food stores and supermarkets."

"I like to serve crab plain, with a touch of Tabasco and Worcestershire, not too much of the latter."

DIETERS' DELIGHT "It's also good to know that crab is low in calories and fat. As to calcium and other minerals, it compares favorably with other seafoods."

"On these spring days, we occasionally appreciate a light dinner. This new souffle provides all the requirements of a diet with a satisfying quality of protein."

Measurements level; recipes for one: CRAB SOUFFLE 4 tbsp. butter or margarine 4 tbsp. flour 1 1/2 c. heated milk 4 eggs 1 c. grated zucchini Swiss cheese 1 c. grated lemon rind, crushed 1 egg 1 tsp. salt

IODE President Stresses Unity

HAMILTON (CP) — Mrs. P. Morrison, president of the Ontario chapter of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, told today IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

In her opening address to members attending the three-day 44th annual meeting of the Empire club today IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

IODE members must stand united against "subversive forces" that aim to "divide and conquer" Canada.

What's Happening

6 The Guardian, Charlotteville, Sat. April 18, 1964.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband spent three years in college, is semi-retired and puts himself on a pedestal as a do-gooder in civic affairs and politics.

Yet he too (like husband of your recent correspondent) is an avid reader of "slick" magazines and trashy novels. He buys the raciest trash and interrupts his hides it.

I learned through leaks from his friends that he was seeing strip shows after attending meetings at his men's club. He claims he has stopped but I don't believe him as I said that before, then broke his word.

He isn't sex starved at home. So why is his mind always in "divide and conquer" Canada. Lately he is spending more time than necessary at a property he owns and must have divorced a shop with living quarters, in guise of attending school which is untrue for both know he hires such work done.

He says there is nothing between and I don't believe they are lovers yet, but can't give a reasonable answer for hanging around her. Though he knows I am opposed, he continues to see her.

We have a married son and two pre-school-age children, but I am thinking of divorce, as I no longer love or cherish him, yet our marriage is without fault. I am sure that in the meantime, the other woman is getting in my way. What should I do?

DEAR C.S.: As the twig is bent, so the tree inclines. And in this case, it is the tree that is bent, so the tree inclines.

If your husband is an inveterate reader of pornographic fiction, his personality would be progressively more lecherous than living, of course.

In which case, you are confronted with a serious problem. If you have a healthy disposition towards sex, and a wholesome human need to love and be loved, you would feel a rising tide of distaste for the rampant, insidious decline towards degeneracy.

So, what to do? I think you must have firsthand analytic help, or analytically oriented pastoral guidance, in taking your bearings at this time. I feel sure that any wise, perceptive, dispassionate authority in the field of family relationships and moral welfare would recognize a major threat of your overall well-being, if the mild, mare-type creeping sex sickness that is distorting your husband's behavior is not checked.

Book Inspired Stronger Laws On Pesticides

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill Saturday to strengthen federal laws on pesticides and new steps to regulate their control.

The book warned of the dangers of pesticides and urged biological controls rather than chemical ones. It also urged the use of chemicals, such as pesticides and weed-killers.

Miss Carson, who has been criticized by some, including pesticide industry chemists, as presenting an incomplete picture stressing only the dark side. Manufacturers and trade associations defended in advance the safety of pesticides "when used as directed."

PRaise FROM UDALL After learning of her death, Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall heaped praise on Miss Carson. He said she was "one of the kind of women who makes men proud, a scientist of rare courage and conviction."

Miss Carson first became concerned with chemical weed-killers and pesticides in 1951 when she was a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

She received a bachelor's degree at Pennsylvania College and a master's degree at Johns Hopkins University.

When she cracked the heat-resistant plastic containers for the U.S. she was editor-in-chief of all Fish and Wildlife Service publications. She retired from the government about a year later and wrote "The Edge of the Sea. Silent Spring," published in 1962, was her last book.

Miss Carson never married but had a grandnephew, Roger Christie, now 10.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.

What's Happening

6 The Guardian, Charlotteville, Sat. April 18, 1964.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband spent three years in college, is semi-retired and puts himself on a pedestal as a do-gooder in civic affairs and politics.

Yet he too (like husband of your recent correspondent) is an avid reader of "slick" magazines and trashy novels. He buys the raciest trash and interrupts his hides it.

I learned through leaks from his friends that he was seeing strip shows after attending meetings at his men's club. He claims he has stopped but I don't believe him as I said that before, then broke his word.

He isn't sex starved at home. So why is his mind always in "divide and conquer" Canada. Lately he is spending more time than necessary at a property he owns and must have divorced a shop with living quarters, in guise of attending school which is untrue for both know he hires such work done.

He says there is nothing between and I don't believe they are lovers yet, but can't give a reasonable answer for hanging around her. Though he knows I am opposed, he continues to see her.

We have a married son and two pre-school-age children, but I am thinking of divorce, as I no longer love or cherish him, yet our marriage is without fault. I am sure that in the meantime, the other woman is getting in my way. What should I do?

DEAR C.S.: As the twig is bent, so the tree inclines. And in this case, it is the tree that is bent, so the tree inclines.

If your husband is an inveterate reader of pornographic fiction, his personality would be progressively more lecherous than living, of course.

In which case, you are confronted with a serious problem. If you have a healthy disposition towards sex, and a wholesome human need to love and be loved, you would feel a rising tide of distaste for the rampant, insidious decline towards degeneracy.

So, what to do? I think you must have firsthand analytic help, or analytically oriented pastoral guidance, in taking your bearings at this time. I feel sure that any wise, perceptive, dispassionate authority in the field of family relationships and moral welfare would recognize a major threat of your overall well-being, if the mild, mare-type creeping sex sickness that is distorting your husband's behavior is not checked.

Fun to embroider, beautiful in any setting — no wonder everyone who sews, crochets or knits is flocking to this pattern (no stamps, please) to Alice Brooks, care of Guardian. Buy only from the authorized office of juvenile content, Ontario residents add 1 cent. Send to: ALICE BROOKS, 1000 BAYVIEW AVE., SCARBOROUGH, ONT. M1P 2Y5. TEL. 491-1111.