MR. AND MRS. BRIAN MICHAEL REDMOND

Radiant Bride Is Gowned In Lustrous Organza, Lace

Joan Marie Flemming of Charlottetown became the bride of Brian Michael Redmond in a marriage solemnized at the Most Holy Redeemer Church in Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Amid a setting of white roses, the ceremony was performed by Rev. Frances Maloney, C.Ss.R.

The organist was Mrs. William T. Campbell and Mr. Frank McIntyre was the soloist. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clary Flemming of Charlottetown and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Redmond, Long Beach, California.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a portrait gown of lustrous organza and chantilly lace. It featured a silhouette bodice, rounded neckline and lily point sleeves. The bouffant skirt, worn over a hooped crinoline, fell from a bustle back to a slight train.

Her bouffant veil was caught to a small pillbox of organza and guests wearing a gold, silk shantung over taffeta gown featuring a scooped neckline and bell shaped sleeves. She wore a high crowned hat of white tulle and a corsage of white roses.

Mrs. Redmond, grandmother of the groom, wore a two piece blue and white silk print, black accessories and a corsage of white roses.

Following their wedding trip through the southern United States the couple will reside in Long Beach, California.

For travelling the bride chose a green linen sheath with matching three quarter length coat, bone bowler hat and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses.

The bride is a graduate of Mount Saint Vincent College with a bachelor of secretarial science degree. The groom attended St. Dunstan's University and California Tech.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Sustaining Diet Essential During Long Trips By Bus

WHILE the roses, peonies and flowers in Virginia were at their loveliest, I slipped away for a holiday on the Eastern shore of Chesapeake Bay to visit my friend Mrs. Verne Minich of Vaucluse Farm, one of the estates in that region.

For a change I went by bus, something I had not experienced for several years. It was very pleasant; the bus comfortable, window glass slightly tinted to avert glare, seats adjustable, spotlessly clean rest room and a series of courteous uniformed drivers called "hosts".

The new "host's" name was posted at the front of the bus every 2½ to 3 hours at long stops when the drivers changed.

HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY

A bus driver carries a heavy responsibility and cannot be subjected to "highway hypnosis", a driving hazard caused by fatigue in keeping the eyes in a fixed position over long stretches of road for a comparatively long time and to a fixed position of the body itself. Physical and mental alertness tend to diminish rapidly after more than 2½ to 3 hours of continuous driving on superhighways and thruways.

At every stop both driver and passengers should leave the bus (or car), walk, stretch and have a glass of water, a soft drink or tea or coffee.

Here is a much-tested sustaining diet I worked out for both drivers and passengers on a day-long drive or a motor tour.

DIET FOR LONG MOTOR RIDES

(Low in starch calories, low in fats, moderate in sugar, high in protein, plenty of vegetables and fruits for roughage and needed fluid)

WAKER — UPPER: 2 glasses water, 1 hot and 1 cold, with juice of ½ lemon to assist elimination.

BREAKFAST: Citrus juice; choice of cereal with milk, or eggs (not fried) with or without broiled ham or bacon; buttered toast; strong coffee or tea with half milk and sugar.

MID-MORNING BREAK: Choice of hot or iced tea, soup, tomato juice, a cola or fruit drink; fresh fruit.

LUNCHEON: Fruit cocktail; tomato or vegetable soup with Melba toast or a roll; roasted broiled or boiled meat or fish, potato (not fried), green vegetables or salad; choice of cup custard, sherbet, gelatin or fruit dessert; hot or iced coffee with sugar.

MID - AFTERNOON BREAK: Sherbet sundae, fruit or hard-cooked egg; hot or iced tea or a fruit, cola or soft drink and an open meat, fish or cheese sandwich (1 slice bread) or a hamburger or frankfurter (½ bun).

DINNER: Grapefruit or melon roasted, broiled or boiled poultry, meat or fish with 1 roll; hamburger or frankfurter on a bun; 2 vegetables (no potato); tossed salad with French dressing; choice of fresh or canned fruit, fruit cocktail, a gelatin dessert, chiffon pie, baked apple or sherbet; strong tea or black coffee with sugar (no cream).

MID-EVENING BREAK: Hot or iced tea with sugar, or a soft drink or unsweetened fruit juice and a small package of candy fruit drops.

Tomorrow's Dinner Modelled on that for long motor rides

(Which leaves eaters with that pleasant unstuffed feeling)

Watermelon Wedges
Broiled Lamb Chops or Fish Fillets Maitre D'
Mashed Summer Squash
Creamed Spinach
Tomato-Lettuce Salad
Combined Raspberry and Lemon Sherbet
Hot or iced coffee or Tea
Milk

After following my own regime for long motor drives, I arrived in Cheriton, Virginia, after a seven-hour trip feeling refreshed and rested. My hostess met me at the bus stop and on we drove, 18 miles more, to Vaucluse Farm her home.

A farm hand rushed up to take out my luggage exclaiming: "The quail's having a picnic in the strawberry patch'

"Always news on the farm," laughed Mrs. Minich.

TOW U.S. VESSEL

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The 13,795-ton United States ship Globe Explorer has been taken in tow after drifting in the Atlantic Ocean since an engine-room fire July 9. The L. ELLEN'S DIARY

Cool Fields Lie Shadowy Under A Haying Moon

Evenings come dim, now that the gift of June-moon has entered its last quarter. The moon of the haying it has proved to be, that seasonal work having become general now on farms Island - over. This evening, a first mowing was made at Rob's, the elder son of this farm, for this is an endeavour that all hands together the family. Tractors are pooled, other machines as well, and many hands make light of the work.

"It may be that this fine weather will continue for a time," James offered. "I've seen it happen odd times that we made all our hay, without it getting a drop of rain throughout the making. Yes, we could get a longish dry spell. So long," he added, "we would be wishing for rain Anyway," he smiled, "we'll have to take what comes - shower or shine!"

"You'll see that it will be better haying than last year's-much better," we said.

Tidying a far fencerow, James was at the time, kindling heaps of brush that had been gathered up there, in a matter of lumbering, when the farmers found they suddenly "must get a stick or two there," for this or that repair of the farm. Our chore it was to pick up any scattered sticks, and add them to the heaps, the repeated bends incurred. James declarer smilingly, being only good exercise, in that it brought into play muscles un-used through the day.

It was a delightful time to be out of doors. The sun was bedding behind a dimming row of hills. Shadowy now, the fields below lay, though across the valley the fields and woodlands were still being touched by fingers of gold.

The warm day was being cooled now by the dewfall, which brought the youngings of cattle from the shade of their grove, once more to the pasture. They grazed comfortably, moving in the direction of the millstream, which between wooded banks there, was already settled in shadows.

Now the colors, the deep glory that had been the summer sunset, spread and floated away above the sky-line, leaving a band of gold to mark that miracle of day which comes at the gates of the west.

"There, Ellen," James said presently, drawing in the burning embers of a last heap to a snug pile, "I guess that will do it. I think now, we can call this a day!"

A busy week this was for our farmers, comprised of those odds and ends of chores, they would do, so to be ready for the haying. It is more or less a habit with them to have the work so arranged they can come to any such seasonal endeavour, as they say, "with a contented mind."

So this lovely week, one of July's choicest, goes now beneath clear and starlighted skies. And the week to come, the near one, just over the weekend, what will it bring, we wonder? Whatever its gifts or its concedns, as Annie Johnson Flint reminds us, we shall live but "One day at a time."

"One day at a time, with its failures and fears,
With its hurts and mistakes, with its weakness and tears;
With its portion of pain and its burden of care;
One day at a time, we must meet and must bear. . .
One day at a time, and the day is His day;
He hath numbered its hours though they haste or delay,
His grace is sufficient; we walk not alone;
As the day, so the strength that He giveth His own."

Until Monday - - Diary—Good-night. . .

REDISTRIBUTION of FEDERAL RIDINGS

Over the years members of Parliament have been faced with the Herculean task of redistributing Parliament's seats. Many agree that there is little doubt of the need for fundamental change. Weekend Magazine Staff Writer Robert McKeown discusses in this week's issue the many ideas in circulation as to what the ground rules should be in making these changes.
