OLD PROBABILITIES.

We are thankful for Mr. Cundall's letter for it corrects an error into which we were led while endeavoring to ascertain the reasons for the Meteorological Department of Toronto. It also shows the great advantage to shippers—especially at this season of the year—which may be derived from daily telegrams concerning the "weather probabilities." We hope that an arrangement may be made with the Meteorological Department and the Telegraph Company, by which the "probabilities" may be communicated daily. We shall be happy to furnish them through the columns of the DAILY EXAMINER.

A HERO DISABLED.

The Toronto Mail regrets to learn that Mr. Tupper is suffering so severely from sore throat that he has not only been compelled to abandon his engagements to speak at the coming demonstrations, but is obliged to leave for Nova Scotia in the hope that his voice may be restored. It is his intention to leave for England in a few weeks, if no improvement takes place in that time.—Examiner of 13th inst.

Who so madly hostile, so unsusceptible of generous emotion as not to be pained at the intelligence? Who but deplores the fact that this son of this sea-girt isle,—this foremost representative of a sister province,—this heir-apparent to the chieftainship of a great Canadian party,—this prince of the House of Canada, is to-day the victim of his herculean efforts, his persistent, self-sacrificing exertions in the political arena, in the conflict of opposing sentiments and of rival interests? Our system of Government is not faultless. Perfection comes not of imperfection. But, compared with other people's, it is "very good." It is conservative and it is liberal; in a word, it is liberal-conservative. Every well-constituted, reflective mind recognizes in the existence and struggle for supremacy of our great political parties, the legitimate instrumentalities and evolutions of that system; and in the due relative strength and potency of the twin, their activity and vigilance in the contest, the pledge and the guarantee of perpetuity and beneficent operation. This conceded, it follows that party chieftains and other great representative men are indispensable to both. That both parties have such men to a reasonable extent is matter of rejoicing. Such are, and must be, men of might. They stand in the fore-front of the battle; and when one of them, disabled, has to be carried to the rear every eye may well follow him in sympathy, every patriot deem it a misfortune a foeman grasp him tenderly by the hand. As respects the great statesman's present disability it is more than a public misfortune—it is a public calamity, because of his transcendent ability—the great extent of his knowledge and his superlative energy. Sampson scorn of his locks when in lay his strength, had the full assurance of his restoration; Tupper, voiceless, has not that assurance. Let us hope for the best, however. The great doctor, fidelity to party, his work and effort on that behalf, are, and have been, grandly great; but they have not been—they are not more conspicuously so than the fervor and the proofs of his patriotism and of his loyal attachment to British rule and British connection. In now briefly referring to him in this the hour of his great personal affliction, now that he has been compelled to lay aside—may it not be for long—the bow and the sphere, we deem it proper that our references shall be made apart from considerations of party. Correspondence.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions or statements of Correspondents.

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:—

DEAR SIR.—"No more Policemen wanted." This cry seems as much in fashion, amongst a select circle in the city as the Colorado Beetle mania is elsewhere, where every man wants to have a live beetle of his own. The folly of both is, doubtless, great. Curiosity prompts the one; but ignorance and selfishness the other. I don't object to my neighbor having a pet bug—if he keeps it at home. Why should he object to my wanting my person and my property made secure by the appointment of a few additional policemen? He is not going to pay more for their keep than I am—none likely less. Perhaps he has no children to protect, no wife or grown up daughter to save from wanton insult. But I have both, and I want to live in a city where they are beyond the reach of street ruffians. I am not going to ask a magistrate to accomplish this, with but one patrol of two men from one end of the city to the other, from six in the evening to six the next morning; but I am going to support our city fathers when they give him a sufficient force. A Magistrate who has changed the jail from a "Thieves Paradise" to a place of hard work, and can to-day give us hundreds of tons of well-crushed stone for our city streets, deserves that the Council should listen to his request, and give him means to rid us of a gang of vagrants and thieves, grown old by the very force of their numbers. I wish I knew Rochford's carpenter; I should like to have him sketch some of the malcon tents. One gentleman, may be, has had his cow put in pound, and he has had to pay a dollar to get her out. He has not been accustomed to this. In the good old times the policeman brought the cow home, and, touching his hat, begged pardon for taking the liberty to drive her. He don't want any more new policemen. Another, may be, has used the sidewalk for a lumber store until the new order of things came in. He thinks he may play a game of hide and seek with two policemen, but he don't want any more. Another has peacefully enjoyed the stench of his own yard for years. Only the other day he saw an officer looking over his fence sniffing for ground for a summons. He don't want any more new policemen. Another—well Mr. Editor, I'll stop here. But I will tell you what I will do. You send me the list of the men who don't want Policemen, and I'll pay you a dollar for every man whose name is on it, who has not a grievance in the shape of "an old fine" "with costs" wrung out of him in the "City mill," if you give me a dollar for every one who has—that's a fair offer. If you don't take it up, perhaps somebody else will.

Yours truly, G.M.P.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Saturday afternoon last, two boys, named Moore and Turner, whose parents reside at the north end of the city, started on a beach-nutting expedition, which ended rather seriously to the first named. They rambled the woods along the lower St. Peter's Road, and finally arrived in the vicinity of the new Lunatic Asylum. There Moore ascended a tall beach tree a distance of about twenty feet, and commenced picking the nuts. Not paying that attention to his situation on the branches which was required, he, in some way, lost his grasp and fell to the ground, breaking one of his arms and severely injuring different parts of his body. He lay apparently lifeless in the gold and rain for hours before he could receive any assistance. His companion being only a small boy, could render him no more assistance than to give the alarm. He was conveyed to his father's—Rev. F. E. Moore—residence in an express wagon and at last accounts was doing well.

The third business meeting of the Temperance Reform Club was held in their Club Hall on Saturday, 13th inst., last. About 600 were in attendance. The reports of different committees were reviewed and unanimously adopted by the meeting. The Club-room Committee reported that they had secured the Athenaeum for a term of three years, with the option of purchase. The report of the Finance Committee was postponed to next Saturday night. Various other matters of interest were discussed by the Club in a light and humorous manner. The night of an entertainment was fixed for Thursday next, when a pleasant evening may be spent with some of our public speakers, readers, musicians and others, who will assist in the entertainment. A further notice, with full particulars, will be given. As there will be a few expenses to meet, a collection will be taken up in the Hall.

A dispatch from the Czarowitch headquarters on Wednesday, says: "The severe storm of cold wind and rain, which began a week ago, continues. The camps are literally lakes of winds. All the roads are impracticable except the highway between Biela and Rustchuk. The suffering of the soldiers is indescribable."

LONDON, Oct. 13.

The Roumanian press are clamoring for the withdrawal of that principality from the war. The people are just finding out that over a third of the Roumanian army has been placed hors de combat in the battle in front of Plevna, and the greatest grief and consternation prevail. In the meantime the Russians are concentrating a heavy force near Lom where an attack from Suleiman Pasha is looked for. Siege operations, under the direction of Todleben, the new Chief of Staff, are still going on around Plevna in spite of the wintry weather which has already set in.

GENERAL NEWS.

PARIS, Oct. 13.

The following is the last address of McMahon to France: "Frenchmen—You are about to vote. The violence of the opposition has dissipated all illusions, no calumny can longer pass for truth; no, the Republican Constitution is not in danger. No, the Government, respectful as it may be to religion, does not obey pretended clerical influences, and nothing shall cause it to be dragged into a policy that would compromise peace. You are not menaced with any return to abuses of the past. The struggle is between order and disorder. You have already decided that you do not wish, by hostile elections, to throw the country into an unknown future of crises and conflicts. You desire tranquility at home and abroad to be assured, that the public powers be in accord, with security for work and business. You will vote for candidates I recommend to your suffrages. Frenchmen, the hour has come. Go to the polls without fear; listen to my appeal and I, placed by the constitution at a post which duty forbids me to abandon, shall answer for order and peace."

To this proclamation Emile DeGisardin makes reply, referring to past events and concluding as follows: "We have already decided. No, we do not wish to plunge the country into a future crises and conflicts by elections hostile to those of February, 1876. We want to have tranquility assured at home as well as abroad; security of labor and of business, and the harmony of public powers by means of the Senatorial elections in '78, in conformity with the elections of deputies in '77. We will vote for those candidates whose election will guarantee that 1877 will not see a revival of the war of 31st May, 1850. Yes, the war has come, we shall go to the polls without fear, and it is our exemplary discipline which will be the surest guarantee for order and peace."

By Director of La France, EMILE DE GISARDIN.
