INCANDESCENT LIGHTS, For Houses and Shops.

THE P. E. ISLAND ELECTRIC CO. have imported and are now setting up the plant necessary to supply the Citizens of Charlottetown with the INCANDESCENT ELECTRIC LIGHT in their Houses, Shops and Buildings. The system used will be the THOMPSON-HOUSTON, now in operation all over Canada and the United States. The advantages of the Incandescent Light over other lights consist chiefly in perfect immunity from smell, in the absence of danger from fire or otherwise, and in the steadiness and brilliancy of its light. Wherever it has once been introduced it has been retained and given general satisfaction.

The expert Engineer engaged in setting up the plant, and who is prepared to put in the lights in any buildings, will be glad to give all information necessary as to prices, etc., to those who desire to introduce the light. He can be found at the Office of the P. E. Island Electric Co. on and after this date.

Lights will be available at all hours of the night

Another serious consideration is that habit is transmissible by heredity, and we owe a duty to posterity as well as to ourselves. Our children should be given a good inheritance and proper training. It may be helpful to bear in mind that good habits are just as firmly fixed as bad ones, and if the training of a child has been wise and right, he will go steadily on in the right way. The proper way to break a bad habit is to put a good habit in its place. It is the surest and safest antagonism.

A Lincoln Story.

(John Hay in the November Century.) The great public receptions, with their vast rushing multitudes pouring past him to shake hands, he rather enjoyed; they were not a disagreeable task to him, and he seemed surprised when people commiserated him upon them. He would shake hands with thousands of people, seemingly unconscious of what he was doing, murmuring some monotonous salutation as they went by, his eye dim, his thoughts far withdrawn; then suddenly he would see some familiar face,—his memory for faces was very good,—and his eye would brighten and his whole form grow attentive; he would greet the visitor with a hearty grasp and a ringing word and dismiss him with a cheery laugh that filled the Blue Room with infectious good nature. Many people armed themselves with an appropriate speech to be delivered on these occasions, but unless it was compressed into the smallest possible space it never got utterance; the crowd would jostle the perforation out of shape. If it were brief enough and hit the President's fancy, it generally received a swift answer. One night an elderly gentleman from Buffalo said: "Up our way, we believe in God and Abraham Lincoln," to which the President replied, showing him along the line, "My friend, you are more than half right."

Habit.

Dr. Wesley Emerson has said: "Habit is like a boat; it has to be built, but when it is built it will carry you." Again, it has been said that the majority of people die of bad habits—bad habits of eating, or drinking or sleeping; by neglecting to do things which they ought to do, as well as by doing things which they ought not to do.

The following from a lecture by J. H. Kellogg, director of the Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Michigan, is suggestive: The majority of people hardly appreciate how much we are creatures of habit, nor how much habit has to do with our daily lives; yet it is our habits which give us our individual characteristics, and which make us differ from one another. Habit even affects our walk and the carriage of our body, and one can often tell a man's trade or occupation by observing his manner on the street. The old farmer, who has used the muscles of his chest more than those of the back, becomes stoop-shouldered, and he carries his arms half-flexed, because his work has developed the flexor muscles and not the extensors. There is excuse for this but sometimes a mere foolish physical habit becomes so fixed that it is most difficult to root out.

It is to habit, also, that we owe our characteristic expression of countenance. It is mental habit which makes one face happy and another sad; that gives one a penetrating expression and another a vacant stare; that makes one savage and fierce, and another calm and mild. When one feels cross most of the time, the muscles which are under the control of the "bad-tempered" centres of the brain, put a habitual frown upon the face. The muscles which draw the face into the perpendicular wrinkles of the scowl, become so much stronger than the muscles which are used in smiling, that one can hardly smile if he tries. On the other hand, he who is in a happy frame of mind most of the time, is educating the muscles of his face which draw on the horizontal wrinkles, which are at right angles with the vertical wrinkles of ill temper. A person's face in sleep always assumes the habitual expression to which he has been educating his muscles, and so reveals in this way much of his inward nature. These facts show the intimate relation between the inside and outside, and that the face is merely a mirror of the mind. The study of the lines of the face is of importance, then, as well as of interest, since the permanent, fixed expression of the face corresponds with the permanent, fixed condition of the mind.

Other muscles, like the heart, can be wrongly educated. If by running and other violent exercise long continued, it gets into the habit of working too hard, it will pump away at that rate all the time; and besides the damage of forcing too much blood to certain parts, it will wear out too soon. A person may also acquire the habit of eating enormous quantities of food, and may distend his stomach to accommodate the burden, until by and by it becomes relaxed and habitually torpid. It is first slow from necessity, and by and by becomes slow from force of habit. As an opposite extreme, sometimes people coddle their stomachs too much with soft, bland food, and too little in quantity, until it loses its ability to digest a good meal. Such a stomach needs a course in gymnastics, by giving it an increased amount of work to do upon substantial food. We do not mean that improper food should be put into the stomach, for this or any other purpose. Rich pastry, mince pies, fried foods of every description, should never be eaten. But an invalid need not live perpetually upon milk and gruel.

A banquet was given on the 29th ult. by the mayor of Stratford-on-Avon. Among the guests was Earl De La Warr, high steward of Stratford-on-Avon, and brother of Lord Sackville, who recently made a claim upon the municipality for rent of the ground upon which stands the Shakespeare memorial drinking fund presented by G. W. Childs of Philadelphia. The earl made a speech, saying he regretted the action of his brother, and that he was sorry it caused bad feeling in Stratford-on-Avon and other places. He was sure, he said, that Baron Sackville would acknowledge that he made a mistake in the demand for it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Dissatisfaction in the East.

Sir,—It is to be regretted that so much dissatisfaction has arisen in consequence of the way in which the provincial banquet was carried out. To say nothing on the temperance side of the case, which may be safely left to the true friends of that very mixed question, I must say that the way in which the invitations were managed showed the true inwardness of the committee who had the matter in charge. It was quite proper that a goodly number of the respectable citizens of Charlottetown should grace the festive board, but as it is the country, and not the city, that will have to foot the bill, it would have been equally proper if all parts of the country had been taken into account when the invitations were sent out. Take King's County for instance. Georgetown was, of course, very properly not overlooked. But the rest of the County was very shabbily treated. With the exception of three leading lights, the representative men of the County were ignored. How was it that J. C. Underhay, Cyrus Shaw, James R. McLean, J. P. Sullivan, John McLean and Angus McLeod, M. P.'s, got the go by? The committee, extending their invitations, did not forget New London. Of course, no one expected that everybody would be invited, but I am convinced that the public will censure those who saw fit to invite so many of their own favorites, to the exclusion of leading representative men of the country. Cumberland's Hay Crop.

An Amherst despatch reports that hay cutting and curing are still going on in some parts of Cumberland and Westmorland counties. The latter part of last week a considerable quantity was put in barns or stacks, but quite a lot yet remains in swath or raked up on the fields, most of which will not be secured at all. A large part of that now housed is of little value. A farmer in Minidie informed the Sun's correspondent that not less than 400 tons on the 'big marsh' will be left uncut. A considerable quantity on the marshes about Amherst Head has not yet heard the click of the mowing machine, and much grass is still standing on the Tantram marsh. This state of affairs is due to the copious rains in the hay season, and to the subsequent flooding of the marshes. Good weather would have saved all this hay. The situation, however, might have been much worse, and as things now stand considerable hay will be sold from Sackville and Amherst. Messrs. Patterson and George of Sackville are making arrangements to again send hay to the West India market. Last year Mr. Patterson shipped 1,300 tons via Pickford & Black's Halifax line to Havana, and about the same quantity to other places, mostly from Sackville. Just now farmers are holding what they have housed in good condition for higher prices and the market is consequently very stiff.
