NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

SALISBURY, N. B., Oct. 5.

While a number of children were playing around the railway turn-table at Hillsboro, a little girl named Mary Crandall was crushed to death by falling under the table, which was being turned by the rest of the children.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

The Passaic Rolling Mills at Passaic Junction, N. J., were almost destroyed by a supposed incendiary fire last night. Two firemen were perhaps fatally injured by a fall through the roof. A portion of the mill burned—600 by 400 feet—contained much valuable machinery. Loss $50,000; fully insured. Four hundred and fifty men are thrown out of employment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

The Herald's Montreal despatch says Courtney, before leaving for home, expressed satisfaction at the fair play he had received in Montreal, and said he had done his level best to win the race. "The stories circulated about my selling the race are shameful, and I mean to bring those who started it to an account. Ned Hanlan is the best scull rower the sun shines on today. I am only his second. I pulled all I knew how, but Hanlan passed me just when he liked, and I don't think he did his best, either; that's the whole truth."

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

The great walking match which has been in progress during the week at Gilmor's Garden, between O'Leary and Hughes, terminated last night, the former covering 403 miles to 311 by the latter.

PARIS, Oct. 6.

Le Moniteur has reason to believe that Italy has made some official representations with a view to obtaining the Porte's assent to an arrangement by which, if Egyptian administration becomes international, all the Mediterranean powers, and not France and England alone will share therein.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

The Sunday Star has a sensational report from Montreal that the Irish Nationalists are planning to capture the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise on their voyage to Canada. Two vessels are being manned and officered by the Fenians to cruise in the path of the Royal Pacific, and if captured they will be held as hostages until England pledges the removal of the heel of despotism from Ireland forever.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

A Cabinet Council was held Saturday, which lasted two hours and forty minutes. All the ministers have since left town. It is believed that no further council will be held until the ordinary meeting of the Cabinet before the Lord Mayor's banquet.

PESTH, Oct. 6.

An imperial decree has been published accepting the resignations of the whole Hungarian Ministry, but ordering them to continue the administration of affairs until the appointment of their successors.

CETTINGE, Oct. 6.

The town of Kolaschen peacefully surrendered to the Montenegrins on Friday, in accordance with the treaty of Berlin.

LOONDON, Oct. 6.

Lord Chelmsford, formerly Lord Chancellor of England, is dead.

ROME, Oct. 6.

La Courier, of Italy, reasserts that England has taken steps with some of the great powers in favor of the cessiott of Crete to Greece.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I noticed in the concluding part of the Patriot's editorial on Mrs. Youmans, some dishonest allusion to the Reform Club, which I would be inclined to let pass, if I thought it will only show some more of the "rude, rough, ignorance" of the soi-distant Chesterfield of the Patriot. But it is more; it is deliberate lying, with the intention of ruining the Institution, I own, because of the few Conservatives in it. Could not the man come out of the late political campaign without being so completely saturated with falsehoods, littered so steeped in the brine of deceit that every article that his pen furnishes, partakes, more or less, of the salty flavour. I could excuse the grossest ignorance—even the blissful ignorance of the Queen Square sanctum—which, along with an accompanying primate, vice, the whole family—Pere de fils—delight to revel. I could even look at that, and attribute the effect to its natural cause; but deliberate intention to deceive others, and to injure us, cannot let go unrebuked, in justice to the community or our Reform Club. We have had enough work fighting an up hill game with the flesh and the devil, without the printer's devil attacking us in the war. Our Club is heavily in d d b, owing to the mismanagement in the beginning; but since May last, we paid off some $700 out of a large debt of $1,200, leaving a balance of $500, besides the debt of $450 to pay in a little while. We do not look to the public for it. We have not asked one cent, nor have we received one from them. Ours is a "Working Men and Boys' Club," and if it were not for the esprit de corps existing amongst us we would be bankrupt to-morrow, and the Patriot man might join the rum-sellers and the devil in their laugh against us. So whatever little money we have to spend, we spend it in our own Club Room; the amusements there are superior to those found in the man trap on south Great George Street, or any of the similar places in this city. Our motto being to give as good an entertainment (perfectly harmless and innocent in itself) to our young men and members as they can get for the same money (without the curse of the drink) anywhere else, and every cent they leave in their Clubs for billiards and bagatelle they know goes to keep up our institution, "The Working-men's Club," for their own profit and amusement in the coming long winter evenings—some place they can go and feel at home in—all on a level—an even footing—on our Temperance floor—young, old, rich and poor. "Liberty from the bondage of drink, fraternity and equality" for all. Our regular price for the Hall is from $5 to $7. When Mr. Morrison, the worthy gentleman who, if I am informed correctly, brought Yeomans here, did so at his own risk (he never spoke to our Club about it, they were never asked for their assistance or co-operation, nevertheless they gave it) he got our Hall, on the condition of paying the Gas expenses—$2.00. Could we possibly do more. The reason of the bungling about the Market Hall—as the Patriot facetiously terms it, is, the Reform Club were chiefly instrumental in getting Mrs. Yeomans for last Sunday night? The Patriot man might have informed himself of this if he liked. One of our number was told to engage the Market Hall for her. But when they were informed of the handsome collection taken up on a previous night in the Hall (Athenaeum) amounting to $3.50—an average of 3-4 of a cent (I have not the slightest doubt the Patriot man and his charming family were among the audience) he was told to countermand the order. The price of the Market Hall would be $12.00—and I suppose the fullest intellect in the Patriot office can figure up if they take $12.00 out of a probable $6 or $7, there will not be a great deal left to pay the expenses of the lecture, so we concluded to give our hall for the lecture, only charging the gas light as before. In fact I do not think they even intended making that charge for Sunday night. The next time a charge is made against the Reform Club I advise the people to look to the source from which it springs. Benedict Arnolds will be found lurking in every camp. I intend soon to explain to the mothers and fathers the true principle and working of our so-much abused billiards and amusements; and feel confident when they are made we will have their fullest active sympathy for our exertions.

Yours, etc., MEMBER OF REFORM CLUB, Ch'town, Oct. 7, 1878.

Ben. Franklin's Influence.

"See here, old woman," Harry observed with his eyes intently fixed on a "Poor Will's Almanac" of 1827.

"Now, what is it?" said Mrs. Archibald, without removing her hand from the pie dough.

"Why, that great and good man, Benjamin Franklin, who wrote into this almanac afore you was born, says: 'Never argue at home.'"

"Of course not. Any fool might know that."

"But it's a good idea of him, notwithstanding."

"No, 'tain't. I knew that much afore your old Benjamin Franklin was ever thought of."

"Then, why don't you try it on once in a while?"

"Try what on?"

"Not arguing at home."

"Who's arguing, I'd like to know?"

"Why, you are."

"I ain't."

"You are."

"I ain't; you are; ain't; 'yar; ain't; 'yar; ain't 'yar-hain't 'yar-hain't."

"You Martha," she screamed, "where's that poker? What on the face of the airth's the reason everything in the house is out of the road everything it can do the most good?"

Henry made a break for the door, but she saw the movement, and grabbing up a piece of dough as big as a watermelon she brought it down over his head and gave it a twist around his neck, as though she was putting the finishing touches on an apple dumpling, while Henry, blinded by the involuntary mask, fled across the front room only to fall out of the window, breaking the eggs he had for breakfast across the sill, and dropping through the open cellar door into the coal pile, where the old woman held him at bay with a soft pumpkin pie, while Martha scrubbed the dough out of his ears, and the snout of his nose with the stove-brush she had been using up stairs.

When Henry got out he confidently buttoned his coat and remarked, with a cautious look over his shoulder:

"I always thought Ben Franklin was a fool, and now I'm convinced of it."—Gaston (Pa.) Free Press.

A NOVEL PROPOSITION CONCERNING NIAGARA FALLS.—The proposition made by Lord Dufferin to Governor Robinson that the Governments of Ontario and New York shall unite to make of Niagara Falls a sort of international "pleasance" will be hailed by all tourists and lovers of the beautiful. It is perhaps not possible wholly to eliminate from the neighborhood of "the Staggerer" the rapacious hackman, the quack's advertisement-dauber, the Hibernian squaw that sells Indian curiosities fresh from New York, the vendor of photographs and the other nuisances that mar a visit to the Falls, but it would be possible, under some such arrangement as Lord Dufferin has proposed, to remove these nuisances to a decent distance and keep them under proper control. This done, Niagara might become something more than a sight for travellers perfunctorily to hasten away from.—N. Y. World.
