Buildings Badly Damaged In $30,000 S'ide Blaze

SUMMERSIDE BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN
Fire causing an estimated $30,000 damage to two buildings containing a bakery, a dry cleaner's and two apartments was discovered here in the early hours of yesterday morning. The Family Bakery was completely gutted and there was extensive damage done to the Victory Cleaners and the two apartments above it. There were no injuries. The fire was discovered by Town Policeman Gordon Grady when he noticed thick smoke coming from the rear of the bakery around 4:30 yesterday morning. The firemen were on the scene approximately ten minutes after receiving the call and for the next hour battled flames in the bakery. For a time it appeared as if it would be contained in this building but at 5:30 the fire broke through the wall adjoining the Victory Cleaners building and ignited it. A spokesman for the Kelly Brothers estimated the loss at "around $20,000... depending on the boilers in the basement." SECOND STOREY
Fire damage in the dry cleaning building was limited to the second storey where two apartments were located. The apartments were gutted and everything in them lost. The dry-cleaning plant and the building housing it are owned by Russell and Gordon Kelly, natives of Charlottetown. The plant suffered extensive water damage but all clothes belonging to customers were taken out of the building before the fire got to it, and transferred to the Linkletter Motel along with a delivery van which was kept in the rear of the building. The building housing the Family Bakery is owned by Hon. Henry Wedge, provincial minister of welfare and labour and when contacted by this paper this morning at 9:30 he expressed surprise as he stated he had not been notified the building was burning. SOME INSURANCE
When asked for an estimation on the loss, he said it was difficult to give an estimate due to the age of the building. It was only partially insured. Martin MacKenna, owner of the bakery, estimated his loss at "around $10,000". The greatest part of this amount was confined to a large mixer and an oven. His equipment also was only partially insured. The two apartments over the Victory Cleaners building were occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown and the other by two single girls, Ada Jackman and Georgie Smith. Neither of the occupants had any insurance on their furniture. Entry to the girls' apartment was made via stairs and a passageway in the bakery building and they barely escaped getting out of their apartment. Fortunately they were up and getting ready for work when the fire started. A spokesman for the Kelly Brothers estimated the loss at "around $20,000... depending on the boilers in the basement." BY MONDAY Partner Gord Kelly said "I don't think any of our equipment is damaged and we should be back in business by Monday". He added "we're well insured". The Kelly Brothers purchased this building in 1950 for their business. Prior to this time the building had housed a restaurant. A short time after they had been in business their building was threatened by fire when a grocery store adjoining them operated by Frank Jenkins was destroyed. Lady Luck smiled upon them that time as the fire was contained in the store although high winds were blowing in their direction. The bakery building, before it was bought by Mr. Wedge, was known for years as the Silliphant Meat Market. It was first operated in that capacity by Levi Silliphant and later by son Roy. Later a grocery store was opened and operated for a number of years by Art Clow. Mr. MacKenna opened his bakery in 1952 and has been operating in the building ever since. Progressive Conservative party, asked the commission to consider exhumation of a body said to be that of Ovide (Dave) Gagnon, one of three missing witnesses. Gagnon, identified by Mrs. Rivard as her brother-in-law and source of $20,000 of the $60,000 kitty, did not appear when called as a witness Thursday. Mrs. Rivard was recalled to testify and she said he died early in December of "a heart attack I think it is called."

Commissioner Andre Desjardins Friday produced a death certificate which said an Ovide Gagnon died Dec. 7 and was buried Dec. 19 in Cote-des-Neiges Cemetery here. Mr. Drouin, who had commented on "this untimely death" earlier, asked the doctor who signed the death certificate be summoned as a witness, the report of any coroner's inquest be produced and the advisability of disinterring the body be considered. He remarked during an Ontario commission inquiry into organized crime about 18 months ago four witnesses disappeared at just about the same time—just before testifying—as Gagnon. STEPS BEING TAKEN
Mr. Desjardins said the necessary steps now are being taken, to reply to the points raised by Mr. Drouin. Unless the inquiries showed "something particular" the body should not be exhumed. The other two missing witnesses are Roger Aubin and Bill Lamy, who were said by Mrs. Rivard to have contributed a total of $32,000 to her husband's bail kitty. As occurred Thursday, the court clerk called Aubin's name but without reply. Chief Justice Dorion ordered a policeman be sent for Aubin forthwith. "See to it right away, send someone right away," the chief justice ordered. Leo Maranda, a counsel for Rivard, told the court Thursday Aubin had been in the courtroom the previous day but had been taken suddenly "ill." HOME WAS CLOSED
About mid-morning, police constable Harry Sweeney, 57, testified police went to Aubin's home, found it closed and had been told Aubin left early this morning. "No one knows where he has gone." Constable Sweeney said. Commission counsel Desjardins said he hopes Lamy, the third missing witness, will appear next week. Lamy had been subpoenaed for Tuesday. He is said Lamy is travelling. "On 'The Long Trip'" asked Mr. Drouin. Both Mr. Turanne and Rivard testified that Gagnon, reported source of one-third of the $60,000, held a ticket-takers job which paid him $75 to $80 a week from June to September. "ADMIRABLE MAN" Chief Justice Dorion commented Gagnon must have been an admirable man to find $20,000 suddenly when he was making $75 a week and didn't own a car or a house. Mr. Turanne said Gagnon was about 50 or 55—the Rivards said he was in his 60s—and had seemed to be in good health. He added that so far as he knew Gagnon had never had a heart attack before. Mr. Turanne and Rivard both used the words "Bob Gignac" several times in referring to Gagnon who had earlier told the inquiry he never had been known by the nickname Bob. Mr. Lamontagne has said a person calling himself Bob phoned him one July evening with threats to agree to Rivard's release on bail. Mr. Turanne was asked whether he knew Yvon Dupuis, not further identified by Paul Join, the New Democratic Party counsel. "Who is Yvon Dupuis?" Mr. Turanne replied. During his testimony, Rivard told of being advised at Bordeaux by his wife and Gignac of efforts to find an "extradition expert" to help in his case. He had been told at some time his wife gave $1,000 to Gignac for this purpose and that Guy Masson was "working very hard" on it. But he never asked what Masson was working on and never found out. "I was thinking he (Gignac) had extracted $1,000 for nothing. That was always my impression." He described Gignac and Masson as "a gang of hoaxsters." "You don't stop to think in jail; we rise to any bait." Rivard said his wife had $8,000 to $10,000 in cash which she kept in a hiding place in their home. "She doesn't seem to have much faith in the banks," he said. Rivard said he had worked politically for "both parties." In the last election he didn't say whether federal or provincial—he had worked on the Liberal side for a Rochon in Dollard riding. He said he had never worked for Guy Rouleau politically. He said his election work entailed furnishing a car to take voters to the polls. He said his wife had borrowed money from Gagnon who now was "unfortunately dead." He did not know whether Gagnon suffered from heart trouble. LAWYER ALSO WORKING Rivard said Raymond Daoust, one of his lawyers, was working in the same way as Masson and Gignac to get him freed. Mr. Daoust, heavily tanned, immediately protested "we don't use the same methods" and Rivard said he meant working at the same time. Mr. Daoust told a reporter he had just returned from two weeks in Jamaica when he found Rivard was going to testify before the Dorion inquiry. Mr. Daoust has already been a witness. Rivard told of going to Japan

Degree Status At PWC Seen First Gov't Step

In the opinion of Premier W. R. Shaw the first step in carrying out the recommendations of the royal commission on education would be to proclaim the 1964 Prince of Wales College Act effective. The act provides for making Prince of Wales College a degree-granting institution. The passage of the act was delayed until after the report of the royal commission was given to the government. The report called for the setting up of a university of Prince Edward Island, with St. Dunstan's University and PWC as components. Premier Shaw pointed out that the report delivered to the government on Wednesday "has not been studied in any detail by the cabinet or in caucus." He added the costs involved in changes would have to be examined by the government. "The commission pretty well left it up to the province to appropriate money to carry out the recommendations."

The leader of the opposition, Alex Matheson said the report was "null and void" because of the recommendation that more of the provincial revenue be allocated for education. Mr. Matheson claimed the province has no net revenue because it operated on a deficit. Premier Shaw termed this "a childish statement that is useless and without substance."

Dupuis Is Described Acid-Tongued Orator

OTTAWA (CP)—Yvon Dupuis is a young, brass-tongued, acid-tongued orator of the old Quebec school. He has turned his wit and French vitriol against the late Maurice Duplessis, against Real Caouette and against separatism. It was his comic but telling oratory—especially in the 1963 federal election campaign against the Creditistes—that won him appointment to the cabinet a year ago as a minister without portfolio. Since then he has dropped out of the limelight. Until Friday, with the terse announcement that Prime Minister Pearson had asked for and received his resignation from the government. No reason was cited. Mr. Dupuis is 38. He was the youngest member of the cabinet. He was only 26 when first elected to the Quebec legislature in 1952 for Montreal Ste. Marie. His father, Hector, had been in the provincial house for eight years. Yvon immediately began sniping at Premier Duplessis' heels—trying to find the fatal political tendon—with a brass-tongued and tenacious tenacity that even blustered his own Liberal colleagues out of countenance. Mr. Dupuis took on him Le P'tit Jeune, The Kid. SCORES WITH RIPOSTE
Mr. Dupuis retaliated by calling the premier Le p'tit Vieux, striking with a single phrase at two unmentionables—the premier's age and height. Later, Mr. Dupuis recalled that the premier once said in the legislature: "I don't understand why the member for Ste. Marie attacks me this way. His father is one of my best friends." "I have never chosen my father's friends," Mr. Dupuis shot back. In the next provincial elections he was defeated and sold his tobacco shop and insurance business in Montreal, moving to St. John's, Que., where he set up a music store and became an exporter and importer of books and recordings. In the 1958 federal general election he won election in St. Jean—Iberville—Napierville despite a Conservative sweep that took 50 of Quebec's 75 seats. He took a seat in the back row of the Liberal opposition benches. But he wasn't so far removed from the core of house debates that other MPs could miss the flourish, the vigor, the demanding tone of Dupuis oratory. His speeches would delight even some English-language MPs and press gallery members who couldn't understand a word he uttered. BATTLED CAQUETTE
He rose to national prominence in the 1963 federal campaign by stumping Quebec in a one-man battle with Real Caouette and his followers. In a grand style that his Quebec rural audiences loved, he would harangue them on the perils of Social Credit. Once he threw pre-war German marks into the audience to illustrate the inflationary effects of misguided monetary policy. He was one of the first Liberals in Quebec to recognize the threat to the party posed by the Creditistes, and organized a series of 15-minute television programs to counteract the TV campaign used so successfully by Mr. Caouette. Mr. Dupuis also has delivered the sharpest anti-separatist

Train, Car Collide; Two Hurt

GEORGETOWN — A collision between a special snow plow train and an automobile occurred early last evening on the main highway about a mile and a half from here. Two men were slightly injured. There were five occupants in the car, owned and driven by Albert Brousseau of Georgetown. The other four were Richard MacNeill, David Pitre, Vincent LeClair and LeRoy MacIsaac all from Georgetown. The two men injured were Pitre and LeClair. They were taken to the King's County Hospital, Montague, and after receiving treatment were released. The men were returning from the Lorne Valley area where they had been cutting pulp. The driver saw the oncoming train, but could not stop on the slippery road. The car was hit on the left side, was dragged about 25 feet along the highway's right-of-way and ended up in the ditch. Although it appeared that the car was extensively damaged, it later proceeded to Georgetown under its own power. The men were returning from the Lorne Valley area where they had been cutting pulp. HALIFAX (CP) — The weather office says that late Friday evening skies had cleared over most parts of the Maritimes as strong north-west winds ushered in colder air. High pressure centred over Northern Ontario should edge closer to the district today. The strong northwest flow of cold, dry air will ensure sunny weather in all regions. On Sunday, however, a disturbance now over Oklahoma should curve northeast and is expected to bring snow, ice pellets, and rain to the Maritimes after noon. Temperatures should moderate once again. Regional forecasts: Nova Scotia Mainland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick: Clear and cold; northwest winds 25 with gusts to 40, shifting in the afternoon to northeast 20. Low-high at Halifax 10 and 20, Yarmouth 12 and 22, Kentville 8 and 15, New Glasgow and Geesboro 5 and 18, Charlottetown 8 and 15, Moncton zero and 12, Fredericton 5 below and 7 above, Saint John zero and 10.
