BRITISH FEAR Unrest As Result Of Move In Egypt
LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP) - Fears that Gen. Mohammed Naguib's creation of a virtual military dictatorship in Egypt will lead to unrest were expressed by British officials today.

They regarded with "some apprehension" the tightening of military control over the mid-eastern kingdom and claimed the changes have thrown several "extremists" into government office.

The Foreign Office refused comment on the dawn sloop carried out in Cairo yesterday by Naguib's armed troops and police, when 47 Egyptian political leaders were arrested and Naguib was proclaimed prime minister.

British officials said they have always regarded sweeping internal reforms as essential for Egypt but fear the impatience of Naguib and his supporters in carrying out large-scale, non-revolutionary changes in land ownership might seriously harm Egypt's whole economy and play into the hands of the Communists.

These private expressions of British nervousness do not jibe with this country's attitude towards Naguib. It may be Britain feels Naguib now is a captive of the intensely nationalist, near-fanatical Moslem Brotherhood. Or it may be Britain feels too open approval of his seizure of power will weaken his position in Egypt.

U. Of T. To Have Strong Team
TORONTO, Sept. 8 (CP) - A team which coach Bob Masterson thinks has the "potential and possibilities of being as good or better" than his championship outfit of last year will carry the hopes of the University of Toronto for its third Senior College crown in five seasons.

Masterson, who won the Inter-collegiate championship pin 1948 in his first year as head coach and again last season, has lost 16 men from the 1951 blue squad. But he believes he has capable replacements from the blues' intermediate team and the high schools.

Big dents have been made in the line through graduations and examination failures but his half-line, except for quarter Alex Lawson, defensive halfback Bob Gar-side and hard-hitting Bob Rumball, is nearly intact.

The backfield has speed and power and is the big reason why Masterson is so enthused about his team. However, he won't say out-right where it'll finish in the league race which starts for the Blues Sept. 27 when they meet the loop's new entry, McMaster University Marauders, in Varsity Stadium here.

Change Attitude On Nationalists
(By J. M. Roberts, Jr., Associated Press News Analyst)
The United States Department has reiterated its opposition to use of Chinese Nationalist troops against the Chinese Communists in Korea.

There is a growing bloc of thought in the U. S. that, whether it is practical to use them in Korea or not, the Chinese Nationalists will yet be the only key to the west can try on the door to Communist China.

More and more reports from Formosa indicate a change in the dictatorial qualities of Chiang Kai-Shek and the corruption among his aides which caused the U. S. to turn against them several years ago.

Justice William O. Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court, one of those who advocated writing off Nationalist China three years ago, has just voiced a change of heart after another visit. Now he says free China will succeed in its struggle against Communism.

Insofar as Korea is concerned, U. S. authorities say that it is just as easy to use the South Koreans as the Formosa Nationalists, who might cause extension of the conflict right now. This, of course, has the dual purpose of troops for the present and the creation of South Korean strength to leave behind on that day when the West still hopes, it will be able to pull out.

As for any reconquest of the Chinese mainland there are plenty of reasons to believe that must be effected eventually not by foreigners but by Asiatic anti-Communists.

Second Fighter Wing For Europe
OTTAWA, Sept. 8 (CP) - Canada's second fighter wing earmarked for European defence, due to fly to France at the end of this month, their movement is expected over to the North Atlantic Treaty Command by Prime Minister St. Laurent.

The wing, composed of Sabre jet squadrons from St. Hubert, Quebec, and from North Bay, Ont., will fly to a field near Metz about the end of this month. Their movement is expected to take some two weeks to complete.

There will be a small ceremony on establishment of the more than 60 planes at a field near Metz, France. But it is expected that Prime Minister St. Laurent, who is going to London for the Commonwealth conference in November, will journey at that time to formally turn the wing over to N. A. T. O.

The wing, under command of Group Capt. J. K. MacDonald of Antigonish, N. S., will be the first peacetime air arm established by Canada on the continent of Europe.

Predicts High Potato Prices May Remain For Some Considerable Time

According to an article in the Financial Post, potato prices will not only remain high this year, but are likely to stay up for some time. The Post writer states:

"When the record prices for 1951 crops was incentive enough to boost this year's potato acreage in both Canada and U. S. only by some 3%, chances of any substantial price paring over the future appear dim. Better growing conditions may turn this 3% acreage boost into a 9% larger crop in this country. Latest crop estimates are 52.8 million bushels. (In 1949 Canada produced 184 million bush.)

"Currently, wholesale prices are running over 60% higher than last year and some produce dealers are now forecasting $10-a-bag potatoes for next winter. Growers are keeping their fingers crossed on the blight. It was fairly heavy last year and cut crops considerably below estimates. So far it has not appeared as heavy this year, partly because growers have taken more spraying precautions.

"Since potato crop prospects for the 18 surplus states in U. S., including Maine and New Hampshire, are only some 6% ahead of last year there is little hope of price help from that quarter.

"Greater part of the gain in this year's 9% crop rise is attributable to increased production in Prince Edward Island (7,348,000 bus. as against 5,930,000) and Ontario (11,557,000 bus. vs. 9,660,000). Crop estimate is also up for British Columbia and Alberta.

"A number of years of relatively low prices coupled with higher labor, fertilizer and spray prices has reduced farmer interest in this crop and encouraged a shift to other lucrative crops. It may take two to three years of continued high prices to reverse the trend. Besides that, a number of farmers succumbed to attractively high prices to reverse the trend. Besides that, a number of farmers succumbed to attractively high prices this spring and sold their seed potatoes. When prices kept rising they did not care to replace seed stocks."

Anglers Prepare For Big Tuna Tournament
WEDGEPORT, N. S. Sept. 8 (CP) - Teams from six countries are ready to match their wits and muscles against king-sized bluefins off nearby Soldier's Rip Wednesday as the ninth international tuna tournament gets under way.

At stake in the three-day contest is the gleaming sharp trophy—emblematic of supremacy in big game angling's top international competition. Anglers from 11 countries are represented on the competing teams from Brazil, the British Commonwealth, Cuba, Mexico, the United States and Venezuela.

Mexico and Venezuela are newcomers to the contest but old tuna hands from other countries will be back on familiar grounds. Skipper of the Commonwealth squad—last year's winners—will be Dr. Edwin R. Coetzee, a big game angler and hunter from Montagu, South Africa.

Cdr. Duncan M. Hodgson of Montreal, who captained last year's British team, will be out to beat his world's tuna record. He boated a 977-pounder at St. Ann's Bay in Cape Breton two years ago.

This south shore community is trotting out its flags and bunting for its biggest event. Boats are scrubbed and shiny and tuna-wise guides have been scouting the underwater giants for days on the choppy Rip—a six-knot tide stream a mile off Wedgeport.

The prospects are good. About 300 bluefins have been boated on the rip in the past two months. Anglers will be up at the crack of dawn Wednesday to start the 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. fishing day scheduled for the event.

NEGOTIATING TO Sell Out
DENVER, Sept. 8 (AP) - Two Denver men were reported today to be close to completion of a deal designed to deliver millions of barrels of Iranian oil to the United States market.

Reports from Tehran, London and New York indicated that Gerald Waldron, Denver food broker, and Richard S. Nelson, local importer, are negotiating to sell the oil to the cities service oil company.

The oil would be transported to U. S. ports in tankers owned by Ray Carter, New York tanker and petroleum broker, the reports said. Output from Iranian fields has been bottled up since the industry, previously controlled by Britain through the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company was nationalized.

While the initial impression from Finletter's remark was that this was a brand-new gadget just on the way to battle-test, it later developed the device has been in service in Korea for some time. However, the air force still classes the device secret.

Moreover, by the end of this calendar year production will be seven times that of July, 1950. Finletter gave no statistics. However, in July 1950 it is believed that about 120 planes were being produced monthly for the air force, the total production for all the services of all types of aircraft being about 250.

The house was in his name. She said he had produced a full bottle of rum in the afternoon but she saw no other liquor. She had seen four or five bottles of beer in his bedroom earlier. She saw the rum around 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Williams was visiting and the deceased and she went to the kitchen. Witness said she took a glass of rum and hid it behind the toaster. There was a lot in the bottle then but only a little later on. She could not say if the beer had been consumed.

She had thrown the remains of the rum out the window as she hated the look of it around the house. Mr. Butler was staggering under the influence of liquor, she stated.

The witness said she did not go down stairs when the victim fell as she did not think he was even hurt. She was standing in the bedroom door about eight or nine feet away when he fell. He had put out his hands as though reaching for the banister. She thought he had a case of beer in his bedroom from the morning and had dozed and did not see him fall. Questioned by Mr. Nicholson she said she had not seen any beer just rum.

Mr. Charles Young, printer, said he had been in the Richmond Street house about 6 o'clock. He talked to Mrs. MacNeill and had only one drink. The late Mr. Butler was not having anything but appeared to be under the influence as he was talking "heavy."

The kitchen door was never closed tight while he was there. He had known the deceased for over a year and a half and had seen him drinking before. He did not recall who poured the drink he asked for when he went in and did not see any other glasses on the table or elsewhere.

Wayne Genge, 8-years old, was called to the stand but was no sworn. He said he lived in the house and his room was down stairs. He had heard the fall when Mr. Butler came down and had run to tell his aunt next door. Although he had heard talk from upstairs he did not know of any fighting.

Mr. William MacKinnon, 114 Richmond street, said he was having a nap when his wife told him that Mr. Butler had fallen downstairs. He went in and saw him lying on the floor and told his wife to call the Police. Mrs. MacNeill was standing by her bathroom door and said that Bruce (Mr. Butler) had fallen down.

Recently Unveiled Historic Tablet

The tablet unveiled by His Excellency Governor-General Vincent Massey, on his recent visit to Charlottetown, was recently placed on the eastern pillar of the front of the Province Building by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada. It commemorates the entry of Prince Edward Island into Confederation, as a Province of Canada, on 1st July, 1873.

The inscription on the tablet is as follows: "PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND BECOMES A PROVINCE OF CANADA, 1873. "Cradled on the waves, this beautiful island was successively named Abegweit, Saint-Jean, and Prince Edward to denote Micmac, French, and English regimes. Discovered and settled by the French, it finally became a British colony in 1763. English, Scottish, and Irish settlers joined the French inhabitants, to form a sturdy pioneer stock and to build primary industries of agriculture and fishery. Considering the original terms of Confederation unfavourable, Prince Edward Island did not join the Dominion until 1st July, 1873. Hon. William Cleaver Francis Robinson was the first Lieutenant-Governor, and Hon. James G. Pope the first Premier."

The Board is erecting a number of similar tablets, with appropriate variations of the wording, in the capitals of those provinces which became provinces of Canada later than the general Confederation of 1867.

The tablet unveiled in Charlottetown by His Excellency writes of the Board's chapter in the growingly comprehensive outline of the history of Prince Edward Island to be read in bronze letters upon the twenty-three tablets already erected by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board at various points throughout the Island. Many of these tablets are centered around the Province Building and the adjoining Square, and both Prince Edward Islanders and visitors can learn much of the history of the province by reading the various tablets, and by studying the figurative symbolism of the larger standard tablets.

drinking. However, his face was flushed. City Police Constable James Howatt said he had responded to a call to go to 112 Richmond Street and found deceased in the hall. He was with Constable Lloyd Wakefield. He had seen no bottles of beer or liquor and the house was in good order. It was not upset.

He said that Mrs. MacNeill told him that Mr. Butler had come from the kitchen and lost his balance, falling down the stairs.
