MR. AND MRS. HARVEY G. MACKINNON

Wedding Of City Organist Held In New Glasgow, N.S.

Trinity United Church, New Glasgow, N.S. was the scene of a summer wedding when Madelyn May Wadden was united in marriage to Harvey Gordon MacKinnon. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Wadden of New Glasgow, N.S., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacKinnon, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Rev. C. William Harvey performed the ceremony in the church which was decorated with standards of white and yellow gladioli. Mr. David Howat was organist, accompanying the soloist, Miss Sharon Hopper of Truro, N.S.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of "Trumpet Tune in D Major" by Henry Purcell. She wore a floor length gown of nylon organza over layers of nylon net and taffeta. Dainty appliques of lace enhanced the simple scooped neckline, and were scattered over the full bouffant skirt. A large rose was centered in the back, from which panels fell to the floor. Her head dress, fashioned in the pill box style was made of pleated taffeta, studded with pearls and diamante and fastened to a short flowing veil. She carried a cascade of white shasta daisies and yellow sweetheart roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Nancy Wadden, as maid of honor. She wore Swiss organdy over taffeta in apple green with matching accessories. The dress featured a rounded neckline and full softly pleated skirt. The headdress was a matching chiffon rose with short veil. Other attendants were Joyce MacKinnon, sister of the groom Charlottetown, and Marie MacDonald. They wore identical dresses in lemon yellow with matching accessories, and carried nosegays of fluffy yellow shasta daisies. The flower girl, Miss Lorna Jackson, Halifax, wore lemon yellow Swiss organdy over taffeta, and carried a basket of white shasta daisies. Her head band was of the same flowers.

Hazen Hogg. Sussex, N.B. was the best man. Ushers were Bob Wadden, Blair MacKinnon, Roger Craig and Edgar Jones. The men were attired in white summer wear.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Wadden chose a sheath dress of beige lace with a beige ostrich-feathered hat, and wore a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses. The mother of the groom wore a cobalt blue, pure silk shantung sheath, feathered hat and matching accessories.

During the ceremony, Miss Hopper, a former classmate of the bride at Acadia University, sang, "The Lord Bless This Hour": "The Lord's Prayer; and "The Marriage Prayer".

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Norfolk Hotel where the parents and the young couple received their guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by Vincent Muirhead. Mrs. A.J. Heighton and Maureen Richard presided at the tea table. Judith MacCulloch tended the guest book.

For her wedding trip to the United States, Mrs. MacKinnon wore a pure silk sheath in shades of gold and brown, with matching accessories, and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Mrs. MacKinnon is a graduate of Acadia University with a Bachelor of Music degree, and now organist of Zion Presbyterian Church, Charlottetown. Mr. MacKinnon is manager of accounting and systems division at H. M. Simpson Ltd. in Charlottetown.

MARY HAWORTH

Frazzled Young Mother Needs Temporary Help

Dear Mary Haworth: I need help quickly. I am 22 and have two baby sons, ages 16 months and four months, respectively.

I have turned into the kind of mother I hate and swore I would never be — mean, impatient, irritable.

I have told the little one to shut up, which is terrible. And I scold and slap the elder, when I should sit down with him or divert his attention to something interesting.

He had severe colic for his first three months, screaming day and night. Finally he got over it and I was beginning to regain composure. Then his brother was born and he also has colic, still.

Now the elder is cutting teeth. Add to this the recent spell of hot weather and I guess he isn't feeling to well. To boil it down, they both fuss and cry so much that I just feel I can't take it any longer. The weather is affecting me too. It is all I can do to get the meals, let alone put up with all the fussing.

I pray for patience but I simply have no patience left. Please help me. I want the boys to grow up emotionally stable and happy, but at this rate they never will. What can I do?

P.S.: The baby was on sedatives but I took him off, as they were expensive and didn't help much. K.D.

Dear K.D.: As of now, you yourself are psychologically ill, due, it seems, to a long siege of unrelieved physical fatigue and nervous tension.

To get back on your feet, you need a rest from household pressures and baby care. Given sympathetic domestic help during the day, for an indefinite time, to "spell" you in looking after the children and house-work, you'd soon begin to recover health, strength, composure and self-confidence.

In your present state of confused exhaustion, you are a logical candidate for emergency aid from the Homemakers' Service. This is an organization of national scope, with local units in various cities, which provides short-term domestic help (nursing care, child care, kitchen help, whatever the case requires, when family welfare is threatened by a mother's illness.

The central purpose of the Homemakers' Service is to hold the family together, by keeping the mother in the home while helping her back to health.

Fortunately for you, there is Homemakers' Service in the town through which your write. You will find the service listed in the phone book under "Homemaker" (not "Home Maker").

Other readers, hopeful of finding a comparable service in their areas, should inquire of their local welfare council or community fund agency. If necessary, ask the local telephone information operator to help in the search.)

A telephone call to the Homemakers' Service, from the household needing emergency help, starts things rolling. The situation may be assessed by phone, or a visit to the household may follow, to determine the type of help the family needs.

Costs of the service are adjusted to the client's ability to pay. Those who can't afford hired help are assisted cost-free, on emergency basis.

An interesting sidelight of the service is that many housewives seemingly on the verge of invalidism, take a turn for the better almost as soon as they learn that this friendly help is available to them.

Indeed it sometimes happens, a spokesman says, that help seekers decide, on second though after a hair-down session on the phone, that all they needed was that catharsis experience (of getting their troubles off their chest,) to make their trials bearable.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Homemakers Soon Find Idleness Begats Boredom

Only rarely now does the woman, at this old house at Alderlea, spend a day alone. There was a time back in the years, when the seasonal work moved the farmers to this or that farm of the name, the farmwife nearest the scene prepared the meals for them, thus leaving the others in a more or less solitary state through the day.

Then, mainly because a farm needs the practised eye of its master at times to see that all is well with his crop and his stock, and that, after all, by machine, they were never farther than a few minutes away from their own tables, the former habit, at length disappeared. So that it is only infrequently now that the women-kind of these farms find themselves so long deserted.

This week however, has given us several of these quiet days, so many that by today, the novelty of living alone had pretty well worn away.

The first day, we found the change exceedingly pleasant. The solitude in itself had its charm. There was idle time on our hands. To eat alone and leisurely also had its nice points—We recall too how blithely the fetchingly speckled little sparrow sang to us from the sunny vine which creeps up the wall by the front verandah, one noon when we dined alone at our table. And the robins' chirps on the lawn were cheerful and bright.

"There's nobody here now but us and a woman" one remarked.

"She'll get some reading done now!" the other observed with a chuckle.

By today, the scene had changed. The former delight of being alone had become boring. And the meals! Why bother with spreading a cloth and serving oneself? Why not just lunch at a cupboard? And how forlorn all day were the house and surroundings.

No brisk step came to a verandah to inquire "How's the time going, Ellen?"

To ask "Shall I stop now for dinner — or maybe I should stay a few minutes yet at my chores?" There was no one to offer at a meal, "This bread is —the best yet, Ellen! Yes, got the right flavor to it, I'd say. "No one — just no one. The sparrow's tune had a somber note to it, and the robins were quiet as they tugged together hand over hand at a dew-worm. And the echoes of the world without rang lovelily along the reach of our valley.

The night too, which came down a little eerily as nights will, when one is alone, is still. "You keep listening" Curiosity observes from the depths of the old armchair.

"Listening!" we repeat.

"Yes. But there" he smiles "hear it? Scampie is barking! Is that what you've been waiting to hear?"

James is, at last, coming home. We anticipate our tomorrow. How good it will be, we think, to be back to our old paths of living again.

Historical Data Displayed At Stanhope Tea

The ladies of Stanhope Women's Institute played host to the summer residents of the area at an informal get-acquainted tea held at Stanhope School on Wednesday afternoon.

Guests from many parts of Canada and the United States, as well as Islanders, intermingled over a cup of tea; some renewing old acquaintences, while many met their summer neighbors for the first time.

Presiding at the silver- servicd was Mrs. James MacLauchlan, a charter member of the Institute since its' organization in 1926.

A feature attraction was the display of historical data being compiled by the Women's Institute. Mrs. Harry Lawson, convener of this community history project, was much encouraged by offers of information with regards to data from some historians in the group.

The newly decorated rooms were enhanced with a profusion of summer flowers, drawing many favourable comments
