AFFAIRS IN ICELAND.

A recent despatch from Copenhagen says: "The mail has just arrived from Iceland, and the news brought from this country is unusually cheering, the fisheries having been very successful, while the disease which during the last two and twenty years had ravaged the sheep has apparently disappeared. Only about 60 Icelanders had emigrated to the new colony in Canada during the present year, and it is thought that the emigration is now virtually at an end."

ENGLISH LABOR MARKET.

The position of the labor market in England is eminently unsatisfactory. A great strike among agricultural laborers in the eastern counties is expected early next month. A Birmingham paper of the 3rd says on all sides there are industrial revolts of a wholly mistaken and pernicious character—revolts which inflict heavy losses on the workmen in the present, and must permanently affect them by discouraging the employment of capital in the future. The late futile Bolton strike is stated to have entailed a loss of £100,000 on the operatives of that town. It is probable that even those figures do not adequately represent the loss to the employers. A trustworthy return from Greenock sets down the sum of $312,000 as the loss in wages during the Clyde lock-out, whilst £156,000 was spent from trades' union sources to sustain the men. In the iron districts there is complete stagnation and great distress. On the 2nd three valuable iron properties in the Cleveland district, three blast furnaces at Middlesborough, and five at Darlington were put up at auction, the result of recent failures, but withdrawn, the bids being ridiculously small.

DUKE OF NORFOLK'S WEDDING.

A London correspondent writes: "It has been surmised that the intended bride of the Duke of Norfolk must have become a convert to the Roman faith as a consequence of her alliance with the chief representative of the Catholic aristocracy in this country. This assumption is erroneous and unjust. Of course it was not imagined that the Duke could have forsaken the ancient faith of his ancestors in order to ally himself with a Protestant wife, for the force of family tradition is too strong on his side, and it was certain he could not espouse a heretic without causing a painful shock to Catholic Christendom. I am informed that Lady Flora Hastings was received into the Church of Rome about two years ago, and that the Duke of Norfolk was not at that time a suitor for her hand. The match was made quickly. The Duke met Lady Flora a few months ago, and a proposal of marriage resulted immediately. The wedding preparations are remarkably sumptuous. The Norfolk family jewels, which are of immense value, are being reset for the young duchess. The Sheffield tenantry are arranging to send a very handsome wedding present to the bride."

HOLDING ALOOF.

At a numerously attended conference of clergymen and laymen, held at Glasgow to consider the question of holding aloof from Church connection, the Rev. David Russell stated the following objections which he conceived working men were in the habit of stating in defence or explanation of their not attending divine ordinances, to wit, that while they heard much about Christian fellowship from members of the churches, yet they saw very little of it in their conduct and actions; that their chief enemy was intoxicating drink, still there were no men more opposed to the total abstinence movement than ministers; that from the discussions on essential doctrines of Christianity which proceeded, they were in doubt as to whether ministers believed what they preached on the Sabbath; that Sabbath school teachers were not trained as to their work, and the children were not properly taught; that the church seats were too high, and that is, 64. per head was sufficient to charge annually, the balance being made up from voluntary contributions; that they were puzzled by the references which were made in the pulpit and the objections stated to scientific men; that ministers, while dwelling on points of doctrine and the Jews, ignored present toils and cares; that society was being divided into classes, and ministers generally sided with the moneyed capitalist; that competent men should be appointed to preach in the open air, where working men could be reached; and that and that the charge of infidelity made against workmen was not justified by the facts of the case.

The circulating medium of the St. Domingo is now brass buttons. They are made at a New York button factory, the manufacture and metal in one hundred thousand of them being worth $2,000. The people at first refused to take them, but the Government promptly ordered the arrest of the unpatriotic and the buttons are now in fair standing, financially.

A boy of thirteen has hanged himself from a window-sill at Bernau, near Berlin, after drawing up a kind of will.
Hares are among the latest importations to the London market.

General News.

It is said that Gambetta has just come in for a legacy of one million sterling.

A London paper censures the Local Government of Newfoundland for its remissness in dealing with the Newfoundland wrackers.

Little Russian monitors, built expressly for the Danube service, are making their appearance on the river.

The Silver Bill, making silver an unlimited tender, in its progress through Congress is interfering with the sale of the 4 per cent. loan and putting up gold. The report that the President will not sign it in its present form will help to counteract its bad effect.

The Queen, it is said, having recommended "Edgar and I; the Story of a Home," published by Messrs. Remington & Co., for perusal to the Empress of Russia, the latter has accordingly sent to England for a copy of the book.

A dry goods salesman named Robert Lunnie, formerly of Guelph, Ont., committed suicide in a New York theatre while the play was in progress, being prompted to the act by some suggestive part of the stage dialogue.

Bristol seems bent on regaining its maritime importance. At a special meeting of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of considering the question of converting the river Avon into a floating harbour by placing dock-gates at its entrance, and thus creating a dock of 700 acres, with seven or eight miles of wharfage, a resolution was unanimously adopted in favour of this proposition.

Mr. Ruskin continues his crusade against thing in general. The current number of For's Clavigera contains the following:— "A tolling machine has been erected at Ealing cemetery at a cost of $80, and seems to give universal satisfaction. It was calculated that this method of doing things would (at 300 funerals a year) be in the long run cheaper than paying a man threepence an hour to ring the bell. Thus we mourn for the departed!"

A story is told about Cleopatra's Needle, according to which Professor Wilson was haranguing, in a most enthusiastic manner to a friend not noted for antiquarian tastes on the desirability of having so interesting an object of antiquity as Cleopatra's Needle. When the Professor had finished, his friend dryly replied, "The best thing would have been to have had it photographed in Alexandria, and then had it made to order over here. The public would have appreciated it as a piece of British workmanship."

GALLANT RESCUE.—The Anchor Line steamer Devonia, which arrived in the Clyde yesterday, had on board the shipwrecked crew of the steamer Zeolite, of Dublin. The Zeolite sailed from Labrador for Naples on the 19th ult., with a cargo of fish. She encountered heavy weather, and on the 20th had to leave to sea, several tremendous seas carried away a quantity of gear. On the 20th a heavy gale snapped several of the stays and carried away the foretopmast. Before the wreck could be cleared away the foremast broke below the deck, tearing away with it a large portion of the deck. The Devonia, shortly after this, bore down upon the Zeolite, which by this time was fast sinking. Mr. Allen, chief officer of the Devonia, and a boat's crew went off and rescued the Zeolite's crew, seven in number, at considerable risk, owing to the high sea that was running. All the Zeolite's boats had been smashed or carried away. The rescue was made amidst the intense excitement of the Devonia's passengers. The rescued are now in the Sailor's Home, Greenock.—London Daily News, Nov. 1.
