to the editor

In the last few issues of the SUN the topic of late yearbooks has been brought out into the open several times. Is it the fault of the yearbook staff who work hundreds of dreary hours trying to put together a yearbook before each year's deadline? Is it the photographers who spend just as many long hours in the darkroom and around campus trying to get photographs of every event and situation? How can anyone blame these people for putting in the many hours they do with no initiative and no internal drive, except that they want to put out a yearbook each year. Both the photographers and the yearbook staff get paid peanuts for the work they do. There is no extra bonus if deadlines are met, no recognition whatsoever. So why should one really become involved deeply in his or her work when there doesn't exist a strong internal drive to produce one's best work as fast as one can? Of course none of the people would do this work unless they enjoyed it at least a little. With only some initiative, such as a bonus for meeting deadlines on time, our yearbook might just be published on time. If not, I think that by the time we do get our yearbook it isn't worth the eight dollars we pay for it. I also feel that this same problem can be applied to all of the student oriented activities such as CIMN, the SUN, and the sports events. If the Student Union can boost up the morale, not only will the quantity of work go up, but so will the quality.

Happy But Underpaid.

To the Editor:

Our first great controversy in the paper is playing itself out in the letters to the editor and most people are probably tired of the Personnel Board by now but I think a few things should be cleared up.

The Personnel Board is faced with a long tedious job at the start of every school semester and I think should be thanked for the work (which is exactly what it is) that they do. If I were a member of the board, I would be disappointed at the lack of positive ization of Jerusalem as the first step to a fair settlement. Not only should Canada not move its embassy to Jerusalem, but Israel should move its capital back to Tel Aviv.

The voices for justice will get increasingly louder. The Palestinians will not just go away if we ignore them and neither will the Palestinian Liberation Organization. America has long been a champion of world justice, despite the unjust actions at times of some Americans. The American people are a good people, and as a good people must not allow their government to continue an unjust policy. Americans of all political callings must, if they would preserve their own liberty and inalienable rights, come to the aid of those most in need. Shalome, Salam, Peace!

I was surprised by a number of the P.B.'s selections but they had their decisions to make and they picked people who, on the basis of information presented, would be best for the job.

Our system of student government may not be the best around but it is our own and the Personnel Board is a part of it. Writing a letter to the editor is a good way of blowing off steam but a more positive step would be to take your complaints (P.O.P., Neil and Dave) to Council. Council could do with some excitement anyway.
