

(Concluded from first page.)

meat, and the sale of wool, would be £510, which if carried to the credit of the Farm, would show that the stock transaction would be really conducted without any loss at all.

To enable the Society to commence operations in a satisfactory manner, your Committee are of opinion that a grant from the Legislature of £1300 would be necessary, and as for the first 3 years the farm cannot be expected to pay as it afterwards will, your Committee are of opinion that during that period the rent of the farm should also be provided for by a special grant from the Legislature. It may be objected that such a farm should pay better. Your Committee have already expressed their belief that they much underrated the profits. It must be also understood that two thirds of the stock raised will be sent to the different Counties for sale, when experience has proved that an animal which in Charlottetown would realize £5 or £6 is frequently knocked down for 20s. or 30s. In such transactions the farm account must lose, since unlike ordinary farms its produce is sold in the worst, instead of the best market, but the distant parts of the country are benefited, and the great object is attained.

In conclusion, your Committee would observe that although they have considered the proposed undertaking, not as a model farm, but simply as a farm to be conducted for raising improved stock and seeds, for distribution through every section of the country; in short, as a substitute for the plan now in operation by which the object of the Society will at much less expense be more effectually attained,—they indulge the hope that it will with the increasing prosperity of the country expand not only into a model farm, but into something of much greater importance, viz., an institution where a sound education on practical and scientific agriculture can be obtained. Knowledge is chiefly valuable to its possessor in proportion as it bears on the avocations he pursues, the importance of such an institution in an agricultural country, is, your committee believe, beyond calculation. A college, presided over by a professor skilled both in scientific and practical agriculture, where pupils could be taken at low rates, would afford vast advantages, not only to those educated there, but would also exert a most beneficial influence in the country at large, by constantly sending forth well trained and scientific farmers, who, locating themselves in the various sections of the Island, would, by their example, become instructors to all around them, and your committee feel confident that the increasing prosperity of the Colony must soon place its public finances in such a position as will enable the Legislature liberally to endow such an institution without detriment to other objects of public necessity. The academies and colleges of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick attract many of our youth there, to be educated for learned professions; why should not P. E. Island have an Agricultural College to attract their youth here, for agricultural instruction, and thus maintain the honorable position she now holds among her sister Colonies, as the leader in agricultural improvement?

With such convictions as to the immediate advantages which would result to the country from the proposed farm, and with such hopes as to what it will, (if now established,) ultimately become, your Committee beg to offer their Report.

(Signed) JAMES H. PETERS, HENRY LONGWORTH, WILLIAM W. IRVING.

The different annual Cattle Shows, and the Industrial Exhibition, were held as usual; and a particular account of each will be found in the Appendix to the Report when printed. A steady and gradual improvement was observable in the different classes of stock sent forward; and your Committee confidently hope, that the onward movement will continue at a greater ratio, and that farmers in the different sections of the country will show their appreciation of the exertions of the Society, by paying attention to the improvement of their stock; and that private individuals, (every one being more or less mixed up with the farming community,) will exert themselves by aiding the endeavours of the Society by subscribing liberally,—for the more the Society is supported by the public, the better able will it be to extend the scale of its operations.

The Exhibition of Domestic Manufactures this season was considered deficient in respect to Shawls and Flannels, although the quality of the few specimens sent forward was quite equal to anything of the kind hitherto exhibited. The show of Hosiery was highly creditable, and your Committee regret that, while the farmers' daughters in the Island are so well able to compete with the neighbouring Provinces in the manufacture of Hosiery, there should be such a deficiency in the dyeing (more especially as regards Blacks), and dressing establishments, in consequence of which a large portion of this description of cloth is sent to Pictou, by which a very large sum of money is annually lost to the Island.

The competition altogether was so great and varied, that the three gentlemen who acted as Judges have very properly suggested that a more judicious classification of the goods should be made in future, and Judges appointed specially to examine and judge certain articles confined to a fixed class of manufacture. The duties of the last Show devolving on the three Judges occupied them the principal part of two days; they commenced with the examination of the Cloths, and concluded with upwards of sixty packages of Butter and thirty-six of Cheese.

It has also been suggested that no useful end is gained by these annual Exhibitions, or rather that their utility is circumscribed, and that to test the real power of the whole Island, Industrial Exhibitions should not occur oftener than once in three years. "The prizes to be of greater value, or of that description, that the honor they are destined to confer should compensate for the want of value. A silver medal not worth intrinsically more than half a crown, would, with some, and those the better nature, stimulate to greater exertions than ten times its value in money. Whilst on the other hand, poverty and ingenuity, which too often march hand in hand, would be best compensated by the award of such a sum of money as would at once give immediate comfort and assistance, &c., &c."

Your Committee received information from J. Rouch Bourke, Esq., relative to a newly-invented machine for taking potatoes out of the ground, which he says in operation last autumn in the neighbourhood of Belfast, in Ireland. This machine is driven by two horses, and raises the potatoes out of the ground and cleans them of the soil, as fast as thirty or forty people can gather them up. Every invention which will reduce the price of labor in a new country, and facilitate field operations, being of importance, your Committee considered it their duty to order one of the machines to be sent out in the Spring, and beg to express their thanks to Mr. Bourke for the information which he was kind enough to afford in the matter.

They have also to thank Mr. Gainsford for information relative to some improvements in weaving, and have ordered from Manchester a number of "Fly Shuttles"—the possession of which will enable any one acquainted with weaving to produce five yards of cloth for every three made under the present process.

Your Committee regret that during the past year, several of our largest subscribers have (from causes, as they believe, over which the Society have no control), withdrawn their subscriptions. While your Committee regret that they have done so, they cannot forget how deeply this Society, from its commencement, has been indebted to these individuals for their large and handsome contributions, the recollection of which induces your Committee still to hope that if they do not see fit to renew their former liberality, they will at least not entirely withdraw their countenance from our institution, which they have hitherto so generously supported. It is, however, to the farmers and the people of Prince Edward Island generally, that your Committee would appeal for support.—Our subscription list at its commencement, owing chiefly to large sums subscribed by individuals, amounted to £500 per annum. Although the number of subscribers has greatly increased, it now amounts to £161 12s. 9d. This was to be anticipated, as although the necessity of commencing such an institution might induce many to contribute largely at first, it was not to be expected they would continue to do so when the Society was once fairly under way. It is not, however, in the trembling torrent, nor the rapid stream, that the noblest rivers depend; but countless rills, converging to a certain point, sustain their volume; and so it should be with an Agricultural Society, which our own experience, and the history of all other countries, has proved essential towards improving a system and developing the agricultural branches of a country, in which especially in this Island all are interested. Hence not only from the merchant, the mechanic, the professional and the wealthy man, does it confidently ask contributions; but it has a right to expect that the poorest farmer should not withhold his trifling subscription. If this were so, then, like the river, the offspring of the tiny rills, which through their support, now bears a country's rich productions in its bosom—the Society, not cramped for means, would be enabled to extend its operations into new channels, and thereby confer benefits to which their trifling subscriptions would bear no proportion.

In conclusion, your Committee may remark, that it cannot be expected that such a Society could be conducted to the satisfaction of all; many things really right, may meet the disapproval of some, and they may often be blamed for misfortunes they had not the power to avoid; that errors and mistakes have been committed, they have no wish to deny; they are incident to every undertaking, and for this reason, they are ingenuously man far exceeds his foresight; and it is therefore much easier to point out errors and to find faults, than to originate and successfully carry out any undertaking; and perhaps those who are readiest to bestow blame on your Committee, might, if the labouring oar of conducting the Society's affairs were thrown on them, find themselves not exempt from the censure which your Committee are often compelled to bear.
