

MR. AND MRS. HUGH R. HARRIS
Couple Exchange Vows
At Double Ring Ceremony

Zion Presbyterian Church, Charlottetown, P.E.I. was the scene of a recent spring wedding when Arleen Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold F. Roper, Sherwood, was united in marriage with Hugh Reginald Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald D. Harris, Barris, Ont., formerly of Dryden.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. D. A. Campbell.

Mrs. Harvey MacKinnon, organist, accompanied soloist Nancy Cox as she sang "Because" prior to the wedding ceremony, and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the traditional wedding march. She wore a floor length gown of white peau de seau with re-embroidered Alencon lace on the bodice and over the hips, and a bateau neckline. The gown also featured a detachable chapel train with appliques of re-embroidered Alencon lace, and long tapered sleeves. Her shoulder-length veil of silk bridal flouss was held in place by a crown of seed pearls and organza appliques encircling a rosette of white organza. She carried a cascade of white roses and ivy.

The bride was attended by her sister, Janet, as maid-of-honor. Phyllis MacMillan was bridesmaid. They chose floor-length sheaths of turquoise crepe satin, with detachable trains.

The bridesmaids wore rosettes of the same material trimmed with matching net, and they carried nosegays of turquoise sprayed carnations.

The junior bridesmaid, Karen Roper, sister of the bride, wore a full skirted floor length gown of turquoise crepe satin with a rosette headpiece of matching material and her nosegay was also of turquoise carnations.

Harold Bevan was best man and Kenneth Roper, brother of the bride, and Cecil Taylor ushered the guests to their seats.

A reception for 70 guests was held after the ceremony in the Willow Room at the Charlottetown Hotel.

The bride's mother received wearing a blue lace sheath with matching lace duster and a blue flowered hat. Her accessories were of white lace and she wore a corsage of white carnations.

The groom's mother chose a two piece suit of pale pink shantung with a deep pink flowered hat, pink stole and white accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The bride's table was centered with a three tiered, heart shaped wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and groom. It was flanked by white tapered and encircled with ivy and yellow roses.

Diana Redd circulated the guest book and Mrs. Arthur Roper was hostess for the occasion. The toast to the bride was proposed by J. Richard Hennessey and responded to by the groom.

For a honeymoon trip to Cape Breton, including the Cabot Trail, the bride wore a turquoise double knit suit with Chelsea neckline, a turquoise flowered cloche hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of white roses.

The couple will reside at Embassy Towers, Halifax, N.S., where the groom is in the RCN, and the bride will be transferred to the department of national revenue in Halifax.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Harris, Barris, Ont., Mrs. Grant Ernest, Kitchener, Ont., sister of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Roper, Moncton, N.B. and Mrs. Edouard Burdett, Dundas, P.E.I.

ELLEN'S DIARY
The Spreading Of Lime
Is The Fieldwork Today

A silence reigns in the stables whence the cow-kind have now gone to pastures... We pause in the yards, perhaps when we are giving the Peter-lad a requested "one more swing", to look out on the magic of green fields once more along the valley. And there on the opposite rise which runs up from the stream, on rented pasture, and back on some far field of this farm, sometimes silhouetted engagingly, dark against the blue of that horizon, the little herd keeps.

Sometimes too when the twilight commences to fall and the children are at last playing in the yards, voices intertwined happily in that peaceful pre-bedtime period, and the sweet of the birds' evening song is in progress, you may hear one or the other of our farmers calling in from a nearer range, the house cows to be milked. The homely sound echoes pleasantly across the evening air. It bespeaks for all the approach of night's rest.

You think then of the peace of evening as in old Writings, that which closes out a winsome summer day. And looking back to years gone, you see a little herd of milk cows returning up a beaten path of lane to a night-pasture. You hear again the familiar sound of hoof-beats and the clank of harness, and the rhythm of the pump in the yard giving off its refreshment to the team come down from the fields. And you recall the deep silence of a night unbroken by the rumble of traffic on the Highway, or of a plane heating home, when later you blew out the flame in the lamp in the dimness; or maybe with moonlight lending its silver to the bed-room, when you came to stand a moment by a window before retiring to enjoy the glory of the scene without, before you wrote "The End" to your day.

Only odd ones of the cow-kind you find indoors now; a pair of fat ones, a calf or two. And these lie at rest. Swallows dart in at the open door, seeking the high rafters in the lofts adjacent, where a nest is in construction. You hear the chirping which attends the undertaking, anxious, you fancy, as might be humans, discussing listel and roof-tree. By way of a high window, sunbeams fall to the lofts below. And on the sunny span between, golden motes dance. There is no sound of cattle contentedly munching, no pleasant clank of their chains. Only a silence remains - that which obtains when at last, the farm has called the herd to the grass.

The spreading of lime was the fieldwork of today, indeed has been in recent days.

"There's not the ceremony to it nowadays" we remarked at supper. Nor, the thought lingered wistfully, the magic to youngsters of the slaking of the burnt limestone in the field: the sudden burst of life and the sputter of its crumbling when water was applied. "Nor the work!" James commented.

"Though, I reckon, the boys will be happy when that the spreading of fertilizers and it takes a heap of muscle and strong backs to handle the like."

Busy, happy days these are, and ever hopeful that take farm-folks to the affairs of the cropping.

Winnipeg (CP) - The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire is a "loyal Canadian organization which supports the Canadian flag," the national emblem.

She said that a Canadian Press story May 31 on the use of the Union Jack gave an erroneous impression that the order still supported the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

"This statement, taken from the national secretary's report, applied to the stand of the order one year ago," Mrs. McGibbon said.

"The order now supports the Canadian flag."

She said in an interview, the order will continue to use the Union Jack as its flag as a symbol of Commonwealth affiliation and "because we are a Commonwealth organization."

She added that at the Centaph and church services Sunday both flags were displayed. Previously, at church services during annual conventions, Union Jacks were presented. This year there was no church parades of Union Jacks - the order's flag was dedicated and then displayed with the Canadian emblem.
