GLORIA TALKS
Chapter 49

After that first visit Pan took Frankie to the picture gallery every day. She read his child's books about the paintings, and found the nearest public library, to get out still more volumes on Flemish or Italian art.

"We did the Dutch school today," Frankie informed his mother with an important air "one afternoon when she came in from her office.

"Oh you did? And what do you mean by that?" Gloria asked, pulling him into her lap.

Frankie explained in detail and with great seriousness.

"Such a learned old man as you are becoming!" Gloria exclaimed laughing.

"Why don't you run and play in the park while Pan acquires wisdom and culture from the old masters?"

"Now you're making fun of me!" Frankie sulked a little, looking at his mother's merry eyes and the smile that showed her dazzling white teeth. "I don't like being made fun of!"

"Oh you don't!" She caught him back as he started to climb away. "Son where is your sense of humor? I believe you were born without one. Shall we play mother bear and little bear?"

"Oh yes!" And the child's seriousness vanished instantly. Instead of looking like a queer little old man he looked again like a small and boisterous youngster.

The romping game ended on the floor and when Bobby appeared for tea, Gloria was sitting, flushed and laughing and disheveled on the floor, while Frankie growled at her from the bear's cave under the desk.

"What a versatile creature you are!" Bobby grinned from the doorway. "You can amuse a child as successfully as you can persuade a fat old lady to spend four times what she ought to on her house!"

"The child's the harder task," Gloria called back, fleeing to her room to make herself presentable for tea.

Gloria was alone at home tonight, which was an unusual occurrence. For she was so enormously popular that she had more demands on her time than she could meet, and as she tried to go everywhere she was usually rushing from work to play and back to work and off again on some frivolous errand to reach bed exhausted long after midnight.

"I've committed the most heinous of all social faults," Gloria moaned that evening when the last tea guest departed. "I've accepted two dinner engagements for one evening; the worst is the people know each other and if I keep one, I'll infuriate the other hopelessly."

"So you'd better keep neither. I'll call up and say you're ill, which is perfectly true, you look like a ghost," Pan said.

And she phoned two expectant hostesses and was so nice that neither minded having her well-balanced dinner party upset at the last moment.

Gloria, lying on the couch, did gloomily look ill.

Their dinner appeared on its tray and was served on the little low table that did for breakfast and tea as well.

"We have a new cook," Gloria murmured looking at the thin little negro maid disappearing through the doorway. "I didn't know that."

"No, I got her yesterday," Pan said. "She seems all right—you're so busy I didn't want to bother you about it."

Gloria leaned back with a tired, little smile.

"What a competent girl you are!" she murmured. "Why do you call yourself stupid? My house and my son have been perfectly managed ever since you came here."

"It takes no intelligence to run a house and family," Pan interrupted.

"It takes more than most women give to it!" Gloria answered quickly. "Pan, you have the knack of making a place homelike. Believe me, it's a great gift and a rare one. Why do you envy these women who come to my tea parties, with their smart frocks and ready talk?"

"They know so much, they're so clever!"

"They know a very limited amount about most things, but they've been trained to talk as though they knew more than they do—that's their only cleverness. When they buy a house, they hire me to paint and furnish it because they haven't originality or taste. When they want clothes, they go to my equivalent among the dress-makers, and have clothes made for them, as they have their homes designed for them. Their amusements—some ready made in the form of theatres, and half of them have orders with booksellers to send them the fashionable books each week, so even their ideas come ready made!"

Pan laughed at this. She piled wood in the fireplace when the meal was over, and going to Gloria's desk began sorting the business and social letters that were piled on it, making a pencilled list of future engagements. Later she found a blank book, and by writing in days and dates, turned it into an engagement book.

"I'll buy you a real one tomorrow," Gloria suggested, watching her.

"This will do, why spend unnecessary money?"

Gloria laughed a little. There was a silence while Pan worked busily, making a special pile of letters to be answered.

Suddenly Gloria remarked, "I heard from my husband today."

FOUR-FOOTED DUCK; TWO ON ITS BACK

FLINT, Mich., May 25.—Roy Traynor, a poultry farmer, living near Flushing, was startled on Saturday when he went to his coop to find a newly hatched duck running about on its back. He found it had four feet, two on its back and two in regular position. When its regular legs became wearied it executed a hop and began prancing around on the other.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Nurse Recommended Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Bothwell, Ontario.—"I was weak and run down, had no appetite and was nervous.

The nurse who took care of me told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I am getting strong. I recommend your medicine to my friends, and you may use my testimonial."

—Mrs. D. MAXWELL, R. R. No. 2, Bothwell, Ontario.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ailments is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good fashioned roots and herbs which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, beneficial influence, and as it contains no narcotics nor harmful drugs it is a safe medicine for women.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.
