The Golden Rose.

The receipt by the queen regent of Spain of the Pope's golden rose has led some curious writer to put together the following particulars concerning the flower: The first of these roses were simply flowers of red enamel, representing the natural color of the rose. Later the color of the rose was left white and a large ruby was put into the center, the reflection from which gave the petals a red tint. Innocent XI. had a golden rose made, which weighed over eight pounds, was ornamented with several sapphires, and represented a value of over 10,000 francs. Alexander VII. ordered one rose at 6,000 francs and another at 4,000 francs. Lately the golden rose has been worth over 10,000 francs, and has taken the form of a branch with several flowers, a natural rose which has been blessed by the Pope, forming the centre. Of this kind is the rose which the queen regent of Spain has just received. It is planted in a magnificent silver gilded vase, which is a splendid example of Roman workmanship. The rose itself is said to be a symbol of the Creator; the splendor and richness of the metal represents the eternal light which surrounds the divine, and the perfumes and spices which are placed in the vase by the Pope, symbolize the glory and resurrection of Christ. The benediction of the rose is a solemn ceremony. The holy father, in his sacred robes, reads the formula of the benediction from a book which is held by a bishop. The other bishops, holding lighted candles, stand by his side. The high dignitaries of the papal court surround the pontiff holding the incense, the holy water, the spices and other perfumes. Another dignitary kneeling, presents the rose to the Pope, who reads the prayers, blesses the incense, the spices and the perfumes, which are in turn presented to him by a cardinal. After putting them into the vase which contains the rose, the golden rose is blessed, and the ceremony ends.

The First Razor.

The earliest reference to shaving is found in Genesis xii, 14, where we read that Joseph, on being summoned before the king, shaved himself. There are several directions as to shaving in Leviticus, and the practice is alluded to in many other parts of scripture. Egypt is the only country mentioned in the Bible where shaving was practised. In all other countries such an act would have been ignominious. Herodotus mentioned that the Egyptians allowed their beards to grow when in mourning. So particular were they as to shaving at other times that to have neglected it was a subject of reproach and ridicule, and whenever they intended to convey the idea of a man of low condition and slovenly habits the artists represented him with a beard. Unlike the Romans of a later age, the Egyptians did not confine the privilege of shaving to free citizen, but obliged their slaves to shave both beard and head. The priests also shaved the head. Shaving the head became customary among the Romans about 300 B. C. According to Pliny, Scipio Africanus was the first Roman who shaved daily. In France the custom of shaving arose when Louis XIII came to the throne young and beardless. The Anglo-Saxons wore their beards until, at the conquest, they were compelled to follow the example of the Normans who shaved. From the time of Edward III to Charles I beards were universally worn. In Charles II's reign the moustache and whiskers only were worn, and soon after this the practice of shaving became general throughout Europe. The revival of the custom of wearing the beards dated from the time of the Crimea, 1854-55.

Earthquake Pictures.

A Washington paper says: Last year Assistant Secretary of State Adee attempted to take a photograph of several buildings. His colors ran, and the result was his proofs presented a group of buildings falling in every direction. The walls of some were bulged out and others falling in. He had some blue prints made of the remarkable production, and one of them was passed around the departments. The print was passed off as taken from an instantaneous photograph of the earthquake at Charleston. It was stated that the first shock awakened the photographer and he got his traps together, rushed into the street, and got an excellent negative of the second shock. All of the officials and clerks believed the story. Some of them went into a scientific description of the blue print. They all endeavored to explain why the buildings on one side bulged out, and on the other appeared to be falling in. At last, one of the clerks, laughing at his befooled companions, called their attention to the fact that the earthquake occurred at night. The wag, finding himself caught, made a rapid exit, not a moment too soon to escape the vengeance of his victims.

Domestic Servant's Rights.

Moses Steros, of Philadelphia, is endeavoring to organize the women and girls of that city who are engaged in domestic employements. He thinks they should be permitted to receive their company in the parlor at least two evenings each week.
