

THE DAILY EXAMINER. AUGUST 3, 1881.

A few more comments.

SOMEWHAT similar to his treatment of the flour duty matter, was Mr. Blake's reference to the diminution of the export of manufactured articles. After admitting that employment had been given by the N. P. to some 14,000 additional operatives, he would lead us to infer that the production of manufactured articles had so far decreased as to cause a falling off of about one million dollars in our export trade. Surely if the fact establishes any one thing it is that the N. P. has realised the expectations of its promoters and has given our manufacturers the home market, which is taxing their producing capacity to the fullest extent. We know, as a fact, that manufacturers have doubled, and in many instances, quadrupled the number of their employees; and yet are unable to meet the demand.

Even if Mr. Blake and his party should return to power, of which there is little prospect for many years to come, there is no guarantee that the principles he lays down, are those of a majority of his party. We know that, a few months back, he formulated a platform for his party, consisting of the federation of the empire, representation of minorities, and other fancy schemes, altogether outside the range of practical statesmanship. This platform was scoffed at by the Globe, cold-shouldered by the St. John Telegraph, Halifax Chronicle, and the other organs of the party, and fell still-born; while its author was depicted by Grip as sailing away up in the clouds above the heads of Mackenzie and his followers, who were trying to haul him down to mother earth and practical politics.

On the other hand, we know that the men from whom his cabinet would be formed—Cortwright, Mills, Burpee, Jones, and others, are hastening to take advantage of the very policy which it is his mission to denounce. They are investing their money in sugar refineries, cotton mills and other enterprises; and we are asked to believe that these men are so loyal to Mr. Blake, and the principles enunciated by him, as to commit financial suicide to carry them out!

What might be expected under such circumstances would be that such enterprise as these men are engaged in would be left alone, and those tampered with in which they have no interest, causing a withdrawal of capital from manufacturing concerns, destruction of public confidence, reduction in labor employed, and a financial crisis.

We do not think Canadians are willing to pay such a penalty for the sake of electing so unpractical a politician as Mr. Blake to be Premier of this Dominion.

Some Good Accomplished.

THE visit of Mr. Blake and his fellow missionaries has certainly done some good, when we find the Patriot giving credit to Liberal-Conservatives for knowing how to behave themselves. Last evening the Patriot said:—"We are proud to record the fact that there were many who have hitherto voted and worked with the Liberal-Conservative party in the audience. These gentlemen gave Messrs. Blake, Anglin, Huntington and Davies as good a hearing as they could desire. It is to the credit of our Conservative fellow-townsmen, that they contributed very much, to make the meeting last night the perfect success that it was."

A STRANGE SIGHT.—Three men standing at the corner of Regent street, Fredericton, Friday afternoon, were looking skyward intently. They pointed apparently at some strange object. Others joined them. Yes, they saw it, too! People rushed in all directions to see the strange sight. It was undoubtedly a small patch of blue sky! The news spread throughout the town rapidly, and excited the interest that such a sight would naturally create in a community that had not seen sunshine for a fortnight.—Globe

It is probable that twelve rafts of square timber, representing over $250,000, will be stuck in the Ottawa River and its tributaries this summer owing to low water.

A company, strong in capital, and composed of leading citizens of Edinburgh, Dundee, and Montreal has been formed to promote the settlement of some 400,000 acres of land bought from the Canada Pacific R. R. Syndicate.

There have been incessant heavy rains in the Northwest in the vicinity of Battleford and Edmonton, which accounts for the flooding of many localities.

There is now visible in Australia a comet which is believed to be identical with that of 1811.

NOTES OF THE PAST MONTH.

By an Observer.

UNITED STATES.

A month of intense anxiety for the nation, and of heavy suffering for its chief, has dragged along. That the President has held his own so long is most encouraging; but his case is still critical and full of danger. But each day that passes without worse symptoms is a gain, and gives new hope for his recovery. There is not the slightest ground for supposing that any political party, or any individual, had any complicity in Guitan's crime. And yet there is a sense in which it is true that there are many, very many, who have an indirect responsibility for an act which they now view with the most genuine abhorrence. The fierce, unmeasured violence of the language with which in America (not in the United States alone) political battles are fought, causes evils that those who use it never desire, but about which when they view, they are not blameless. The madman who scatters fire-brands and says "am I not in sport" is not guiltless when the conflagration his sparks have kindled is raging. The party orators who denounce their opponents as every thing vile and dishonest, and as utterly ruining the country, and who step down from the platform and laughingly say that politicians don't mean half they say, are not guiltless when some half-mad fanatic or some unprincipled miscreant takes them at their word.

But to the excitement caused by wild political harangues, there are to be added the evil consequences of the "Spoils System." When a very large number of men have a direct and great pecuniary interest in the results of a political struggle, a most dangerous element is introduced. The nation is just now in a sober, thoughtful mood. It has no lack of men of high purpose, of conscientious conviction, and of real force, and the great mass of the nation are at their back. It is to be hoped that these men will now come to the front, and speaking in behalf of the people, declare that the acerbity of political strife must be lessened, and the struggle for place must cease. We, in Canada, would do well to hear the same voices, and to follow what they say.

Those whose thoughts turn to the Western States as a favorable place to settle in, would do well to bear in mind, that nature has never pledged herself to verify all the assertions of land agents. Winter snow storms and spring floods, have been followed by a most destructive cyclone in Minnesota. Altogether, people would do well to be sure of what part of the West they are going to.

The Albany dead-lock is over, and Conkling made a mistake in his calculation; but so skillful a politician is not likely to have come yet to the end of his resources. As the Albany dead-lock succeeded the one at Washington, so it is being followed by a fresh one in Maine.

CANADA.

It is often most incorrectly assumed that a young country must be free from the social and economical difficulties that embarrass older ones. The metaphor of youth and age, when applied to countries, is in many ways misleading. It would be nearer the truth to say that the "age" itself manifests its own characteristics in countries with most diverse circumstances. Labor difficulties have caused as much trouble on this side of the Atlantic as on the other side; and the late strikes in Montreal, accompanied with violence suppressed happily without loss of life, though not without loss of blood, are a fresh proof that our "youth" will not save us from these disorders. When labourers or wage earners of any class, combine among themselves, and agree to work only on certain conditions, provided they break no unfulfilled engagements, they are quite within their rights. They may act injudiciously and imprudently; they may incur certain losses greater than probable or possible gains, but that is their own look out. But when they go further and endeavor to prevent others from using their liberty and from working for such wages as they are willing to accept, they go quite beyond any possible rights; and if there is to be any liberty in the country they must be put down. There is no doubt that trades' unions have done much to advance the interests of their members, and there is much that they can do by legitimate action. They would, however, earn a greater degree of general sympathy if they concerned themselves, as very well they might, with the training of workmen and the efficiency of work, as well as with the rate of wages. In old times, all trades were to a great extent close. No one could work at them until regularly admitted. Just as now, no man can practise as a lawyer or a physician until he has been admitted as a student, trained, examined and passed, so once, just the same sort of thing was required before a man could work as a carpenter or a blacksmith. It was thought a great advance when all these barriers were broken down in the case of trades, and every man allowed to do for himself. In conveniences are now found to arise from this; but it will be intolerable if the trade societies forming again insist upon every one of the craft belonging to some of them, merely that he may claim higher wages, while membership is to be no guarantee for training or good workmanship.

The official announcement of part of the census returns has been made, and are not unsatisfactory. There has been a total increase of the population of the Dominion of 865,000; but about a third of this is due to the acquisition of new territory. We shall probably observe with satisfaction that the rate of increase has been greater in P. E. Island than in any Province east of Ontario. The figures are: for Quebec an increase of 14 per cent.; Nova Scotia, 13%; New Brunswick, 12%; and P. E. Island, 14%. Further details of the census will be looked for with much interest.

The battle of telegraph amalgamation is being fought at Montreal. Unfortunately for us, cheap telegraphy is beyond our hopes. The making or unmaking of combinations affects us not at all. We are always in the hands of the monopolists, and must be so for many years to come. But we may sympathize with those more happily circumstanced than ourselves, and hope that the rest of Canada may continue to enjoy the advantages of competition between telegraph lines.

But competition goes at times beyond due limits. There is just now a war of railway rates, and a Grand Trunk ticket from Boston to Chicago costs only $5.

It is rather hard on the poor Grand Trunk shareholders, who certainly have never enjoyed any of the sweets of a monopoly.

OUR OWN PROVINCE.

It has for some time been the custom in England for leading men of both political parties, during the parliamentary recess, to address various public meetings. In countries, such as this, where so much power rests with the people, anything that advances their political education is good. So it is pleasing to see this custom introduced among ourselves. The people of this Province have been learning from the lips of the ablest men of one of our political parties, the arguments for their side of the question. And it is expected that, under similar advantages, they may soon hear the other side. It is satisfactory to observe that our manners have been much improved since the time of some former meetings, as Mr. Blake and his friends received an attentive hearing from a large audience, not all of whom were in sympathy with them. It is to be wished that prominent writers in the press would observe the same courtesies towards their opponents as our public speakers generally observe. Most of our public speakers understand (and generally act up to their knowledge) that it is quite possible to make a vigorous attack upon a man's arguments without at all descending to abuse or petty personalities. But the press has a good deal to learn in this respect. The Toronto "Mail's" late criticism of Mr. Blake, was no doubt, put out with the hope of weakening the effects of his visit. Even if it can be allowed to have kept within the limits of legitimate criticism, it probably rather injured its own case by an over statement. But when the New Brunswick Government press took to commenting upon the contents of the side boards of Mr. Blake's hosts, it became very contemptible. That it could point to similar breaches of good taste on the other side is a poor excuse. That the "Globe" has often in its remarks about its opponents indulged to the lowest and most spiteful feelings of rabid and gossiping curiosity mongers, may be a very good reason for declining to take that paper as a political guide, but is a very poor one for following its bad example. On the whole our Island press has given the distinguished visitors a not uncourteous welcome. True, great differences of opinion are manifest about the numbers attending the meetings, the enthusiasm manifested, and the effect produced, the shrewd reader will probably strike an average between the two accounts and be not far from the mark.

The question will soon be practically solved—how far the Scott Act will do the work that its many supporters hope that it will do. If there is firmness on the part of those charged with the execution of the law, and a fair support is given to them by the law-abiding portion of the community, a good work can be done. To those who are at all of a pastoral turn of mind, the sight of our squares and of some of our streets, particularly in the mornings and evenings, will be very pleasing. The peaceful oases grace in undisturbed quiet, and the weary horse finds in the fresh verdure of our public pastures, a pleasant change of fodder, or at times tramps leisurely though noisily along the wooden sidewalks. The stringent regulations of harsher days are now relaxed, the deserted ground is the only place where the luxuriant grass is uncropped, the pensive policeman need not agitate himself in capturing stray cattle, and an arcaid simplicity everywhere prevails.

The Political Missionaries.

THEIR PROGRESS IN THE ISLAND—RECEPTION AND BANQUET.

MR. and MRS. BLAKE, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington, and Mr. Anglin, held a Reception at the Rink yesterday afternoon; and many ladies and gentlemen availed themselves of the opportunity of becoming better acquainted with the zealous missionaries who are making a hopeless effort to convert this Island to a belief in Gerrism.

In the evening, their followers gave a banquet in their honor at the Rankin House. Between sixty and seventy gentlemen partook of the feast of good things prepared by "Mine Host." The evening, through very warm, passed pleasantly away. Hon. John Longworth occupied the chair, and Mr. L. H. Davies acted the part of compier. The following is the bill of fare:—

- POTAGE. Meg Merilles, Fricassed Oysters. POISSON. Boiled Cod, Lobster Sauce. RELIEVES. Boiled Turkey, Egg Sauce, Tongue, South Down Mutton, C. per Sauce, Roast S. roin Beef, Peas, Larded Veal, Potatoes, Roast Turkey and Ham, Trout (soused.) Saratoga Potatoes. RETES. Pickled Lamb Tongues, Spring Chicken, Plover, Lobster Salad. ENTREMETES. Jelly Swiss Cream, Chocolate Cream, Topsy Parson Blanc Mange and Whip, Custard, Strawberry Tart, Marmalade Tart, Black Cherry Pie, Clouted Cream, Strawberries and Cream. GLACES. Compot of Peaches, Green Gage, Chinous Apricots, Water Melon. DESSERT. Oranges, Bananas, Tea and Coffee.

The toasts were as follow.—The Queen. The Governor-General. The Lieutenant Governor. The Senate and the House of Commons responded to by Senator Haythorpe and Hon. Mr. Anglin. Our distinguished guests—responded to by Messrs. Blake, Huntington and Anglin. Our Industries—responded to by Malcolm Fadyen, Esq., and Hon. Kenneth Henderson. The Bench and the Bar—responded to by A. B. Warburton. The Ladies—responded to by A. B. Warburton. The Press—responded to by Mr. Lawson, Mr. Houston and Mr. Bowers. The Chairman—responded by Hon. J. Longworth. The company dispersed at about half-past twelve.

OFF TO GEORGETOWN. At ten o'clock this forenoon, a special train having on board the Missionaries and some of their leading supporters in this City, left for Georgetown. They arrived safely; and opened their meeting about two p. m. Our advices state that only two or three hundred persons are present; and there is no enthusiasm.

West India Produce. 20 HHD of Choice Yellow Grocery Sugar, 50 lbs. Bright Barbadoes Molasses per Brig "Globe" direct from Barbadoes will be landing tomorrow. Customers will please send in the order, which will be filled at lowest market prices. HORACE HASZARD, Queen Street, Aug. 3—eod pat
