FO. AND MRS. RONALD W. LASSETER

Military Wedding Unites Couple At S'side Nuptials

The marriage of Bessie Aleah daughter of Mrs. Robert W. Wood and the late Mr. Wood to FO Ronald William Lasseter, son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Claude Lasseter of Huntsville, Ontario, was solemnized recently by a double ring ceremony at the Presbyterian Church, Summerside. Rev. Donald Mackay officiated. The organist, Mrs. Amos Hubley, accompanied Miss Catherine Rankin as she sang "O Perfect Love" prior to the ceremony and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register. Baskets of tulips and daffodils decorated the church, and the guest pews were marked with white satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Paul Fleming, wore a full length gown of white peau de soie. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a scooped neckline and bracelet length sleeves, trimmed with a delicate edging of lace. The bouffant skirt of softly draped pleats was accented with matching rosettes. The four tier, shoulder length veil of French illusion was caught in place with a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a semi-cascade of red Sweetheart roses and stephanotis entwined with ivy. Her jewelery included a single pearl drop with matching earrings, a gift of the groom.

Mrs. Paul Fleming, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Misses Judy Tuplin, Margaret Murray, and Dawna Tuplin. Sharon Fleming, niece of the bride, was flower girl. The matron of honor wore a street length sheath dress of shocking pink peau de soie, accented with a matching overskirt, shoes and headpiece. She carried a semi-cascade of white carnations. The bridesmaids were similiarly dressed in aqua peau de soie and carried semi-cascades of yellow and white shasta mums. The flower girl wore a full dress of shocking pink taffeta under white nylon and carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

The groom was attended by FO David Andrews. The ushers were FO John Murphy, FO Ronald Ladouceur and FO Bertrand Cliche.

The bride's mother wore a two piece sheath dress of pink English linen with matching hat and bone accessories. She wore a corsage of rose carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Royal Canadian Legion, Summerside, for 100 guests. Rev. Donald Mackay proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom. The best man proposed the toast to the bridesmaids and read the telegrams of congratulations. The guest book was circulated by Miss Arlene Schurman.

For a honeymoon trip to the United States and Ontario, the bride chose a pink three - piece suit with white accessories. She wore a corsage of rose carnations.

Out of town guests were: Miss Faye Gillis, Dartmouth, N.S.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fleming and daughter Sharon, Dartmouth, N.S.; Mr. William Ward, Wakefield, Mass., and Allan Elkhom, Dartmouth, N.S.

FO and Mrs. Lasseter will reside in Summerside.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID C. BARLOW

Floral Arrangements Adorn Summerside Baptist Church

Vera Jeanette Myers became the bride of David Coryle Barlow in a double ring ceremony performed by Rev. Keith Hobson at Summerside United Baptist Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heber Myers, Carleton, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Aylward G. Barlow, Summerside.

Mrs. Willard Leard sang "The Lord's Prayer" at the beginning of the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register. She was accompanied by Alden Leard.

The church was decorated with baskets of white and shaded pink dahlias, and pews were marked with white satin bows and lilies of the valley.

The bride, given in marriage, was lovely in a floor length gown of peau de sole. The fitted bodice featured a square neckline and long lilly point sleeves. The full skirt featured a chapel train and fell from the waist into large unpressed pleats. Shaded sequin designs accented the neckline and front panel. Her tulle illusion bouffant veil was held in place by a crown of brillants. She carried a cascade bouquet of white Shasta daisies and deep pink Sweetheart roses entwined with ivy and white satin streamers.

Mrs. Bonnie Coughlin was matron-of-honor for her sister in a street length gown simillar to that of the bride in a shade of Romance. She wore a headdress of pink peau de soie and carried a semi cascade bouquet of white Shasta daisies.

The bridesmaids, Miss Marjorie Linkletter and Miss Lillian Ann Hogg, wore street length gowns of smokey pink and champagne. Their headdresses were of pink peau de soie and they carried semi-cascade bouquets of white and shaded pink Shasta daisies.

The bride's mother wore a two piece turquoise crepe dress with matching accessories and a corsage of red Sweetheart roses.

The groom's mother was in a green and gold flowered silk dress with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's grandmother wore a blue flowered silk dress with matching accessories and pink carnations.

Best man was Verne Barlow, brother of the groom, and ushers were John Rankin and Gordon Myers, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Bedeque United Church Hall for 80 guests. The bride's table was centred with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. The toast to the bride was proposed by Roy Campbell, uncle of the bride, to which the groom responded.

The newlyweds have taken up residence in Summerside where they are both on the staff of the Island Telephone Co. Ltd.

Out-of-province guests included: Morris Weeks, Pieton, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Norman James and sons Laurence and Brian, Cohuset, Mass.; Miss Marjorie Linkletter, Toronto, Ont.; Rev. and Mrs. Ralph MacCuall and daughter Edith, Sheet Harbour, N.S. and Alden Leard, Sackville, N.B.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Fields Of Golden Stubble Accent Island's Tapestry

"There's not much sign yet of any combining today" James commented this morning, looking off over the fields... Scarved with a ribbon of fog, the fur ones were, and above, the sky was beclouded. The air was mild and still.

"It doesn't look too promising" the younger farmer agreed.

"What can we go at?" James questioned.

"It might be that shortly now, if the damp lifts, we can get the rest of that straw left in the field combined yesterday, bald."

"I reckon that's the best we can do with the day" James nodded.

So it was, that there was no actual harvesting done in the warm moist air of today.

"Tell me" Curiosity inquires from the couch, "have you had any word of Tabby's kittens' whereabouts?"

"None."

"Strange too" he offers, "that none of the children have caught some glimpse of them. Or James himself. They must be in the hay or straw-loft in a soft bed."

"But the lofts aren't the soft places for kit-cats they once were. Not these times with stiff bales stored there. It's just a question whether or not a hen would steal away her nest there now!"

"Isn't that the truth!" Curiosity nods.

Now that baling has become general on Island farms, lads like Peter will never know the thrill of putting down loose hay or straw from a loft to have a mound of it to play in, like boys of the farms once did. With the memory returns, a dog, who would scale the barn-ladder with them, and jump in his turn before or after them to the soft mass below.

"Oh-h-h" Curiosity yawns sleepily, "this is one of our quiet nights, isn't it? I miss James" he says.

James is away. Gone with the younger farmer on a matter of business of the farm, off into a night that is starless, leaving this house lone in his absence.

Now the autumn hues strengthen in woodland and hedgerow, in grove and lawn tree; pastures have their tawny shades, haylands their greens, grainlands their gold, stubbles their amber, all combining to make a tapestry lovely to see.

"Did you see what I saw, or hear what I heard this morning"? Gage inquired this afternoon, with a happy grin. "Guess!"

"Couldn't!" we said.

"A skein of wild geese! Would you say that means an early winter? Hockey and all that" he added, smiling at the thought.

"It could mean they like to glean on Island stubbles— to rest and gain energy before they start the trip south, couldn't it?" we queried.

A quiet day this has been at Alderlea. Children went out to their schools. Farmers and farmwives to this and that work of their hands. All in all, a good day. Given at a bantam's crow, taken now by Scampie's bark, hailing the little truck now homing in the lane.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.

MARY HAWORTH

Phone Message Reveals Her Husand's Infidelity

Dear Mary Haworth: I am 36; my husband is 44. We had lived together for 17 years before we married a year ago, six months after he finally was divorced from his first wife.

They were already separated when he and I met. We were young and so much in love that we decided to live together while awaiting his divorce—which was a mistake, as I lived to learn.

I still love him deeply, though I am very doubtful of his love for me, lately. There were times in the past when I started to leave him but felt I couldn't. His trouble was whiskey.

At times I thought he loved drink more than me. He would come home loaded, occasionally in a fighting mood. I would manage to get him to bed. Next morning he would wake up sorrowful, vowing it wouldn't happen again. But it did, again and again and again.

Recently he has been drinking less. But not long ago a woman telephoned one morning, asking to speak to Rex. I said he wasn't in and asked if I could take a message. She said to tell him to meet her at the usual place.

When I asked her name, she said she was his girl friend, had been for 17 months. She asked who I was and I said "His sister." Then she spoke freely, saying how sweet he is, etc.

Rex swears he has been true to me and doesn't know who she is. But a friend of ours has seen them together. She didn't tell me but told others and it got back to me. There is much that points to another woman: I won't go into it all.

But there is the matter of money. He refuses me money for anything. He will say, "You are working; what do you do with your money?" (It goes for small household expenses). We end up fussing, with me saying he gives money to this woman. Am I wrong? Am I driving him away by my jealousy and distrust?

How does one accept the fact that one's husband is running around, when we've been married barely a year? Please answer soon, as the question is driving me crazy.—L.C.

Dear L.C.: To paraphrase a famous love poem Tex has been faithful to you after his fashion. I think you need have no fear of losing him to another woman (certainly not to this one), even though he may be playing around from time to time, just to assure himself that he can, especially since he married again.

Proof of how much you mean to him, how securely you are the center of his universe, is given in the fact that he stayed with you during 17 years when he wasn't legally tied. And that he did marry you fairly soon after being divorced.

He'd had a mighty long time to think things over, in circumstances that were to your disadvantage. Yet despite that built-in handicap, you won, hands down, in his estimation, when he was free to choose for or against making you an honest woman, as the phrase is.

As for the significance of the woman's telephone call, it has all the earmarks of cunning deliberate trouble-making. It suggests that she knows Rex has a wife, to whom he is deeply attached, and figures that he, only chance, if any, of latchin on to him for keeps is to break up the marriage by causing an outbreak of furious bad feelings between you and him.

I would guess she placed her call with some such purpose in mind. She may feel she is losing out with him. Indeed her message may have been double-talk aimed at him. As if to say: "Do not give me the runaround; you had better meet me at the usual place or you'll have hell to pay." She may have been striking at him through you.

A husband who vehemently denies infidelity is a man who wants to keep his wife and wants to maintain her faith in him, as a support in trying again to measure up, if he has failed her.

SO my advice is, put your trust in God in this instance and pray His help in steadying your husband to be as good as he ought to be and hopes to become.

Ignore the other woman's interference; and ignore the gossip. Deep in his heart your husband is frightened of marriage, it seems; and having married again, he is unconsciously in flight from it, in playing around. Some expert Family Service counselling might help him settle down.—M.H.
