Co-op Union Growth Celebrated Next Week

Co-op week in Canada will be held next week, starting Oct. 11 and running until Oct. 17, marking the development of Canada's Co-operative movement.

This co-op week is sponsored jointly by the Co-operative Union of Canada and Le Conseil de la Cooperation, the English and French counterparts for promotion and education in the co-op movement.

The growth of co-ops will be celebrated during this week in Canada by dinners, rallies, social and educational events, to be organized by local committees and aided by provincial organizations and the CUC.

BIGGEST YEAR

The biggest increase in the co-op business movement was in 1963 when total business volume rose to $1,650,000,000 from $655,000,000 in the previous year.

The foundation of the co-operative movement lies in its over 1½ million members in about 3,000 co-operative associations across the land.

Co-operative unions deal in consumer, insurance, credit and marketing of all types of goods, retailing and wholesaleing in various fields and other business areas, on a co-operative basis.

In a statement to the Co-operative Union of Canada, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson says "Over the years I have watched with great interest the growth of the co-operative movement in Canada. I have been particularly impressed with the way your great movement has been able to adapt itself to changing requirements and needs and diversify into various other activities."

He also commented on the co-operatives making available their knowledge and experience gained in the field to other growing and developing countries.

FRENCH-ENGLISH

President of the Prince Edward Island Co-operative Union, Kenneth M. MacLean of Lot 16, notes that the co-op week is significant in the fact that it will be celebrated jointly between the Co-operative Union of Canada and the Le Counsell Canadien de la Cooperative, the CUC counterpart in French Canada. Also he said, Credit Union Day will be Oct. 15, during Co-op week.

Mr. MacLean added "we should renew our interest in people beyond our own frontiers people who are less fortunate than we are in all parts of the world".

News Stories On Queen Set CNT Volume Record

Approximately 180,000 words describing Queen Elizabeth's visit to the province were filed by national and international newsmen through Canadan National Telecommunications in Charlottetown from Sunday to yesterday.

CNT office manager J.R. Davies said the wordage was a record for any Maritime Provinces news event.

News stories on the Royal Visit to Charlottetown were sent to "practially all Canadian newspapers, papers in the United States, the United Kingdom and Australia."

Wednesday, 66,000 words were sent through the telecommunications office and Mr. Davies believes this is also a Maritime record for one day's wordage on a news event.

Sunday, about 20,000 words were filed and yesterday, the day after Queen Elizabeth left the province, about 8,500 words were handled by the Charlottetown CNT office on the Royal Visit.

Extra staff of five operators, two technicians and supervisory personnel, was needed to handle the news coverage transmission.

Harry Life, superintendent of CN Telecommunications for the Maritimes area, praised the work of the operators, who worked in shifts around the clock. He noted that the wordage total of nearly 160,000 words was "tremendous" when compared to the total of 15,000 transmitted out of P.E.I. during the royal visit of 1951.

Police Deny Taxi Driver Broke Security

An RCMP spokesman said Wednesday his force and RCAF police were fully aware of the presence at Summerside RCAF base Monday of a taxi driver who entered the base without credentials for the Queen's arrival.

Inspector J.O. Gorman, RCMP royal-tour liaison officer, said "it is completely untrue" that the driver, Conn Murphy of Charlottetown, eluded supposedly air-tight security precautions.

With concern for Queen Elizabeth's safety uppermost, the incident arose when three British photographers hired a cab in Charlottetown to drive them to Summerside, 45 miles away, to cover the Queen's arrival. They procured an official press card for the taxi and were themselves accredited.

The London Evening Standard reported that Murphy, without accreditation, casually passed through the guards and stood a few feet from the Queen.

Inspector Gorman said that Murphy was checked by police and because he had no credentials was told to go to a certain spot on the air base with his taxi and remain there. This, he said, was done to assist the photographers and was not unusual.
