GREAT NAVAL DISPLAY.

A Living Illustration of the Might of Great Britain.

RYDE, Isle of Wight, June 26.—The apotheosis of Great Britain has rightly culminated on the waters of the Solent. London witnessed the sumptuous outpouring of loyalty, the love of a proud people for their sovereign, an exhibition of national growth and domination, in the long train of princes and potentates which graced the queen's triumph. All of it put together, however, furnished no such living picture of the might of Britain—the might that has made right over and over again—as was afforded this morning by the great naval display in these waters. Nor has there been anything this week in that has gone before, to bring home so vividly the material changes of the queen's long reign. When Victoria ascended the throne the "walls of England" were wooden. There were no steel battleships, no iron cruisers, no triple engines, no steam in use in war vessels, no search lights, no electricity in the service of man, no great or quick firing guns, no torpedoes. The lamps aboard were still lit with flint and steel and were no more brilliant than whale's oil could be; the guns were still fired with a slow match, the three-decker was still the model of all that was worthy in naval architecture, and tonnage was reckoned within such modest light that a vessel of more than 2,000 tons was looked upon as a great wonder.

Never before had a sovereign seen such changes in the bulwarks of the empire as has fallen to the lot of Queen Victoria. At Spithead this morning was assembled the latest triumphs of the industrial resources under Victoria; triumphs of workers in iron and steel and metals; triumphs of inventors; triumphs of chemists and the giants of labor; triumphs of the ship-builder, the engineer and the artisan; triumphs of the genius of a great nation. This may be demonstrated better by figures. In 1857 the total number of ships in commission was 196. Omitting steam paddle tugs, not then considered vessels of war, and other small ones, such as cutters, receiving ships, yachts and packet brigs, the navy list comprised 129 ships. The navy list this year, including ships in and out of commission, but on the list, comprises 439 vessels, mounting 2,959 guns, with a tonnage of 1,463,319 and a horsepower of 1,337,595.

It is, perhaps, a pity, that in the seven lines of the British fleet at Spithead there was not anchored one old three-decker to emphasize this startling change. For the men-of-war that first saluted the Queen in the long ago were magnificent sights, their high decks and towering masts bearing billow on billow of swelling sail, riding the waves like great sea birds and realizing to the full all the wild witchery of the romance of the ocean. Far different were the great battle-ships this morning with their sallow steel sides and short masts, great guns, rams and torpedoes—everything that gave the sense of power, the brutality of force.

The total array of armed vessels was 166, manned by 45,000 men, and moored in lines of five miles each. The fourteen foreign warships formed the sixth line. The aggregate British tonnage was about 600,000 tons. The fleet was drawn up in seven lines on the south of the Solent, the head of the lines being off Brading, to the westward, almost to Cowes.

Five lines consisted of British men-of-war, from the Majestic to the Renown, the latest type of battleships, down to the smallest torpedo boats—in all 18 crafts. Two lines were made up exclusively of battleships and cruisers of the first and second class; one line of third-class cruisers, gun vessels and torpedo gunboats; one line of destroyers, gunboats and sailing training brigs; one line of torpedo boats. All the lines, except one, were approximately five miles in length.

Two things are to be noted after a tour of this tremendous aggregation of sea fighting power. The first is the fact that if need be, their number and fighting value can be duplicated as this fleet was only the Channel squadron and coast defence fleet slightly augmented by new and larger ships. The most noteworthy fact was the testimony to the growth and improvement of the fleet. Of the 21 battleships reviewed by the Prince of Wales this afternoon, four only took part in the Jubilee display of ten years ago, while of the 43 cruisers at anchor in the Solent not one existed in 1887. Needless to say the 30 torpedo boat destroyers are of a type which has only been introduced during the past five years. Further, the battleships built before 1877 were armed with muzzle loaders, which though extremely powerful and marvels of their day, have been entirely outclassed by breech loaders and wire guns. Then too, the later built vessels are armored by galvanized steel, which can scarcely be penetrated in actual warfare, whereas the guns of any of the ships of the Majestic class can send projectiles through the armor belts of any of the 1887 squadron.

Among the battleships nine types were represented, the first of these being the Majestic type, the latest and most powerful model of British battleships, carrying four 12-inch fifty ton guns.

pennants—a number which but for the size and importance of the vessels, would have seemed lost in the crush of attending steamers and yachts.

The Patriot remarks that, Rev. G. I. Foster, M. A., of Lockeport, N. S., but formerly of Charlottetown, where he has many friends, preached an eloquent sermon in St. Peter's Cathedral, yesterday morning, from the text taken from Jeremiah, "O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord." We bespeak a brilliant future for this young and talented minister of the Gospel.

MORE SUCCESSFUL STUDENTS.

In addition to those mentioned yesterday the following Island students attending the faculty of medicine at McGill have been successful in their examinations. The proportion of successful students this year is far greater than in any previous year since the establishment of the faculty, notwithstanding that the examinations were much stiffer than those of previous years. This favorable condition of things is partly to be attributed to the lengthening of the annual course from six to nine months, which allows the student more time for his studies. The following are the results by years:

FIRST YEAR.

Passed in all the subjects of the year:—A. J. Donnelly, B. A. Sturgeon, P. F. Duffy, Charlottetown; R. E. Hughes, formerly of Emerald, now of Ottawa.

A. J. Donnelly also won honors in Physiology, Histology and Practical Chemistry; and R. E. Hughes in Botany, Histology and Practical Chemistry.

Joseph D. Coffin, Charlottetown, passed in all the subjects and took honors in Histology.

John Jardine, Freetown, passed in all the subjects and took honors in the aggregate. His name appears in the honor list in Physiology, Histology, Chemistry, Practical Chemistry and Zoology.

LECTURE IN ST. PAUL'S SCHOOLROOM.

Notwithstanding the downpour of rain last evening, quite a large gathering of people were in St. Paul's Schoolroom to listen to Mrs. E. M. Tilley, the Dominion Secretary of the King's Daughters and Sons. The chair was taken by Rev. T. B. Reagh, and on the platform seated beside the Dominion Secretary were the local Presidents and Secretaries. Mrs. Tilley spoke for nearly an hour and a half in a most interesting way of the Order and gave many true and pathetic instances of its great work throughout the Dominion.

Her explanation of how she became a member of the Mohawk tribe was beautifully told, and indeed her whole address was rendered in such excellent language and pleasing manner that it will ever be remembered by those whose pleasure it was to be present. Her invitation to any present who were not yet members of the order and who would like to be, was accepted by three young ladies who came forward and after a short but very impressive service by Mrs. Tilley were admitted as King's Daughters, in His name. A very pleasing incident at the close of Mrs. Tilley's address was the presentation by Master Arthur Bryan to her of a beautiful bouquet of flowers. This evening a reception will be given the Dominion Secretary by the members of both circles in St. Paul's Rectory from 8 to 10 o'clock.
