Nehru's Mantle Of Power May Be Handed To Shastri

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—With the failing health of Prime Minister Nehru, the heavy burden of guiding India's future may fall on the shoulders of a diminutive 59-year-old politician, Lal Bahadur Shastri.

Shastri has already emerged as the least controversial candidate to fill the leadership vacuum created by Nehru's sudden illness.

While the 74-year-old prime minister may recover from his present bout of high blood pressure and weakness of the left side, his failing health may still force him to fade from the Indian political scene, leaving most of his powers to Shastri.

Most observers here agree Shastri would find it difficult to step into the shoes of Nehru, who for nearly 50 years has been the dominant figure in Indian politics.

During his 16-year term as prime minister, Nehru has received the affectionate adulation of the public as no other Indian in recent history, except Mohandas-Gandhi.

RESPECT NEHRU

Nehru's standing in world capitals is in keeping with the importance of the country—the second most populous country in the world. His views are listened to with respect by leaders of both East and West.

Shastri has none of these advantages.

His assets are his humility, a remarkable ability to smooth frayed tempers and play the role of conciliator, and his reputation as a shrewd politician.

These qualities have, over the years, catapulted him into the front ranks of national leadership. He has fewer enemies today than most of his leading colleagues in the ruling Congress party.

And like Nehru, Shastri is considered a man of unimpeachable integrity.

He has more than 40 years of experience in politics.

His parliamentary experience began in 1937, and in 1952 he entered Nehru's cabinet as minister for transport and railways. Since then he has been a member of the central cabinet, except for a brief break seven years ago.

RESIGNED POST

Last year, he resigned his post as home minister to devote himself to full-time work for the Congress party.

Last week he returned to the cabinet as a minister without portfolio and de facto deputy premier, with special responsibilities for foreign affairs.

During his 10 years of close association with Nehru, Shastri gradually gained the confidence of the prime minister and respect of his cabinet colleagues.

Shastri is a short, unobtrusive man, mild - mannered, gentle and rarely ruffled. Unlike the handsome, aristocratic - looking Nehru. He favors a flexible approach to India's economic problems, including granting freedom to private industry to play a full role in national development.

In foreign affairs, he supports Nehru's policy of non-alignment with power blocs.

Should he eventually be entrusted with the responsibility of leading India in succession to Nehru, as most political observers here predict, there is unlikely to be any radical change of policy.

Booklet Gives Canadians Understanding Of Economics

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Economic Foundation has published a 48-page booklet in an attempt to give Canadians a better understanding of economics.

The booklet—How We Live in Canada—explains economic definitions and principles in simple language. It outlines the evolution of worker specialization, causes of unemployment, automation, patents and government's economic activities.

The book was first published in the United States in 1944 under the name How We Live. It was written by Fred G. Clark director, and Richard Stanton Rimanoczy of the American Economic Foundation.

CEF's director, George J. Rogers, edited and up-dated the book, inserting Canadian statistics supplied by the bureau of statistics and analysis in Canadian business and industry.

"The standards it sets are as practical as a 12-inch ruler," said Mr. Rogers. The contents were still as sound and applicable as when the book was first written.

TESTED IN INDUSTRY

The book's basic philosophy had been tested in Canadian and U.S. industry with convincing evidence of increased profits and productivity. Mr. Rogers said one Canadian plant applied the principles over the last 10 years in its labor-management relations and showed a documented production increase of more than 35 per cent.

The book aims directly at the foundation's goal—"to conduct research and inform the people of Canada generally of the proper relationships between government, business, industry and labor operating under a free-competitive-enterprise system."

CEF is a non-profit research institution, established in March, 1962. It is financed and supported by business and individual memberships. Board members are selected from industry and provincial sub-committees are being organized.

NEED UNDERLINED

At a launching press conference for How We Live in Canada, several speakers underlined the need for understanding economics.

"There is a terrific need for economic education in Canada. We have political parties who try to bribe the people with their own money," said J. A. Fuller, president of Shawinigan Chemicals Limited and a CEF director.

Eric Kierans, Quebec's revenue minister and former president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, said: "A good job of economic education must be done if this country is to get back on its feet and give a big boost to the Canadian economy."

Mr. Rogers says, "The subject matter in this book is of especial interest to all—teenagers and adults—who wish to improve their standard of living."

Erhard Guard Is Arrested

BONN (AP)—A member of West German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's bodyguard was arrested here on war crimes charges, a government spokesman said.

Other sources said the bodyguard, Ewald Peters, was with Erhard on his December visit to U.S. President Johnson in Texas.

Peters is suspected of having participated in mass slaughter of Jews in Russia during the Second World War, the government spokesman said. Details of the charges were not disclosed.

Whale Meat Shortage Hits Mink In Nfld.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A Prince Edward Island mink rancher said here a diminishing supply of whale meat, staple food for Newfoundland mink, is making the future of the province's mink ranching uncertain.

In a prepared statement released Thursday Lowell Hancock, who is also editor of the Maritime Fur Breeders magazine, said Newfoundland now has about 30 mink ranches which is more than Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick together. Nova Scotia has about 150 ranches.

He said that although Newfoundland ranching is on the decline, there is still room for expansion in the industry in Nova Scotia.

SO NEAR, SO FAR

Scarcely 250 miles from Lima, Peru, lies an area of the lofty Cordillera Vilcabamba, so rugged and inaccessible that it is still a geographical mystery.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♥	Pass	2♥
Pass	3♥	Pass	3NT
Pass	4♥

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

Let's say you're playing in four hearts and West leads the queen and another club, which you ruff. The problem is to find the right method of play to make the hand—and this is no easy assignment, even if you are permitted to see all four hands.

There are several assumptions you're entitled to make, even without seeing the East-West cards. One is that the hearts are divided 3-2, since you cannot expect to make the hand if they are divided 4-1. Another is that East has the ace of spades, since he is the player who opened the bidding.

It is easy enough to make the hand if West has three hearts and East two, since in that case you could draw two rounds of trumps and eventually ruff a spade in dummy after forcing out the ace. But the danger is that East has the three trumps, and if you played two rounds of trumps and then led a spade to the queen, East would take the ace, cash his high trump, and you would then have to lose another spade and go down one.

Actually, it is possible to play the hand so that the contract can be made regardless of which opponent has the three trumps. The way to do this is to cash the A-K of hearts, ending in dummy, and then play the seven of spades.

If East goes up with the ace, the hand is all over, since the only tricks lost would be a spade, a heart and a club.

So let's suppose that East ducks, in which case you win with the king. Now you play a diamond to the ten, ruff a club, and then play a diamond to the jack.

If East ruffs, the only trick you could then lose would be a spade, while if he discards you would ruff the last club and then keep on leading diamonds. Regardless of how East defends, you are sure of making four hearts.
