Rural Project Being Planned

A multi-million rural development project is being planned by the provincial government, Premier Alex Campbell said yesterday at a press conference. It will be similar to one announced recently in New Brunswick.

Final details of the proposals are being drafted.

The premier said "I express confidence that in the next 10 years Islanders are going to prove to Canada we are not only progressing to a more than self-supporting economy, but also continuing as one of Canada's most favored and resourceful provinces."

An interim report on the project planning by Acres Research and Planning Ltd., is expected Oct. 15. The premier said he would then discuss the proposals with federal officials in Ottawa.

With the premier yesterday at a press conference was Robert V. Blakely, sociologist with Acres Research.

Professional Consultant Finds Position Interesting

By ANNE BOND

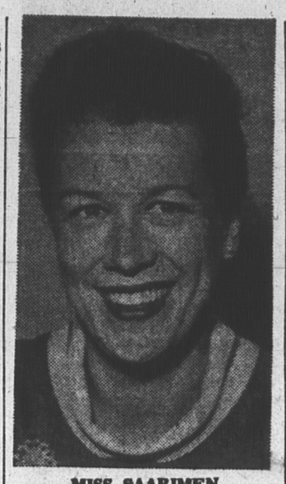
"Physiotherapy can be and is an interesting and rewarding career" according to Helen Saarimen, who is the professional consultant with the Canadian Physiotherapists Association.

Miss Saarimen said that in this type of work you are working with your own acquired skills using them the way in which you see fit and, she added, you're constantly working with people that both need and want your help. From a financial standpoint, she said, physiotherapy is relatively rewarding in comparison with other occupations for Women in Canada. "It's certainly much better than it was" she added and noted that salaries were continuing to improve.

Miss Saarimen's visit to Charlottetown and to the Rehabilitation Centre in the Provincial Sanatorium came as part of a tour of the eastern provinces to find out what is going on in the physiotherapy department in this area.

The national association is growing tremendously, Miss Saarimen said, "ten years ago the membership was approximately 650 now it's 2000, with 200 of these members men." The association is 46 years old, she said.

Miss Saarimen said that there was a definite need for more and more young women and men to take up physiotherapy as a career. The medical profession now realizes the part physiotherapy can play in the medical and surgical departments of general hospitals and while most of the country's major hospital's do have physio departments, many smaller hospitals contemplating setting up such departments find that they are unable to find staff.



MISS SAARIMEN

Physiotherapy in general hospitals can shorten hospital stays by a number of days, particularly in post operative cases.

Another advantage of a career in this field, she said, was that a woman could always return to it with a minimum of retraining, if any, after being away from it for years.

One of the chief functions of the Canadian Association, Miss Saarimen said, was to press for post graduate training facilities in Canada. At present, she noted, there were no facilities for post graduate work in physio in Canada; and girls wishing to do post graduate work were required to go to the U.S.A. or Great Britain for study. The Association is also trying to interest more people in taking up physio as a career.

Miss Saarimen said that there were now nine training schools for physiotherapists in Canada, all of which were associated with the major medical schools in the country. The closest such school to here is at Dalhousie University.

Physiotherapy is a three year course and bursaries for P.E.I. girls wishing to study it are available through the Prince Edward Island Department of Health.

Physiotherapy, Miss Saarimen said, used to be associated in the public's mind chiefly with the rehabilitation of polio victims, and since this problem has been reduced so considerably with the advent of the Salk vaccine, people now wonder what the physiotherapists are doing."

"We are as busy as we ever were" she said, "but now our work is with people who, when polio was a problem, would have been left to their own as far as rehabilitation was concerned. 'We're working now with people who have suffered strokes, with, as I've said, post-operative cases in the general hospitals; with persons injured in auto accidents; with people who have lost limbs, with cerebral palsey patients and many, many more. This work load will increase as more and more members of the medical profession realize the benefit of physio in the general hospital."

OFTEN CONFUSED

"People too," she said, "often get physio and occupational therapy confused. Both are closely connected but physiotherapy concerns itself mainly with getting muscles and joints that have stopped functioning, through accident or illness, working again and occupational therapy concerns itself with teaching people with physical handicaps how to work and live within the confines of their handicap."

Miss Saarimen said that there are some 23 branches of the Canadian Association of Physiotherapists in Canada, the newest of which is the P.E.I. branch which was organized last June with eight members. The president of the P.E.I. Branch of the Association is Miss Janet Rogers of the Physiotherapy department of the Rehabilitation Centre.

Fifty People Ink Statement On High Costs

Two statements were posted on a bulletin board of a public building in Charlottetown with regards to the high cost of food on the Island and all across Canada.

The statements which were worded in question form read as follows:

(1) Food costs must be reduced and we as consummers are willing to join the thousands across Canada who will not only express this fact in words but who will if necessary boycott stores to prove our point.

(2) When we go to the grocery store we want to buy food and not play games. Why should we have to pay more for food in order that stores may advertise games in which a very small minority of shoppers win any prize. We would prefer to get our food cheaper since the purpose of a grocery store is to sell food and not to provide recreation at our expence.

At the bottom of the statement was a space devoted for signatures and a YES and NO section where those who signed could indicate if they agreed or not. The fifty people who signed, a goodly number of those working in the building, checked the day morning, all charged with escaping the Prince County jail Wednesday night.

Gary Wayne MacKenna, Summerside, elected trial by magistrate, and entered a plea of not guilty. His case was adjourned for trial until Tuesday morning.

The four other young men elected trial by judge without a jury and preliminary hearing was set down for Tuesday morning. They are Roy Joseph Bernard, Wellington; Allan Joseph Cormier, St. Eleanor's; Albin Keith Williams, Springhill, and John Joseph Aubin Gallant, Howlan. All five were remanded in custody.

Earlier Friday, four of the five men — Bernard, Cormier, Williams and Gallant — appeared before stipendiary Magistrate R.S. Hinton, QC, on charges of break, enter, and theft into the Prince County Horsemen's Club Wednesday. A quantity of liquor and cigarettes, valued in excess of $100, was taken in the theft.

The four were remanded by Magistrate Hinton to October 11 without plea.
