Claim Mobilization Planning Situation Not Entirely Black

By DAVE MCINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP) - Responsible officials here readily admit that government manpower and mobilization planning for possible war is inadequate but contend that the picture is not as black as they say.
Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds has painted a gloomy picture of the situation. The retired chief of the Canadian Army general staff has been saying in recent speeches that until the question of manpower organization is faced Canada can't have a sound defence policy.
If Canadian manpower were properly organized, he has said, everyone would carry a card telling him what he was expected to do in a national emergency.
Competent authorities argue this would mean reorganization which would be impossible to carry out in peacetime in Canada unless the government decided national selective service was necessary. They added that there has not been as much as a hint in government circles which he predicted would become a very important part of the tourist industry.
He made brief mention of the proposed causeway across Northumberland Strait, which he foresaw as a great boon to the fishing, agriculture and tourist industries.

LABOR
Mr. MacIsaac stated that there have been cries of unjust legislation and rumours of unfair wage rates from the ranks of labor. He welcomed the establishment of a Labor Department in the Government, visualizing it as an arbitrator and stabilizer between labor and management. He expressed the hope that the Labor Department will endeavour to seek new harmony in the variety of points.

AGRICULTURE
"The successful and complete development of any industry must at all times comply with the modern demands made upon it," continued Mr. MacIsaac. This applies to Agriculture as well as to any other. In the producing and development of the finest crops and stocks, and certainly we have made our world mark in this regard, the assistance given by an anxious and willing government for increased production is not sufficient. There is after all only part and not enough to insure a continued success. Modern living, shifts in population and the world industrial boom have changed the mode of living for the bulk of our population and that means changes in end production.
"It is not enough to produce alone," he said. "It is equally as important to market. The days of bulk selling are fast passing."

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY
Mr. MacIsaac referred to the geological survey which he said was being conducted on the Island for the past two and a half years. "The impression was held at one time that Prince Edward Island was composed of land, too new geologically speaking to contain mineral wealth." At this point the speaker exhibited a sample of Island fossil which geologists state is 250-300 million years old.
He said that many samples have been taken but these have been merely surface takings. No certainties exist that mineral wealth will be discovered, all that has been proven to date is that the present findings warrant a continuation of this survey.
Among the minerals found were tracings of high quality manganese oxide. A piece of the mineral displayed by the speaker was found in a surface crop of two and a half acres, he said. There are three such known out-crops, one in each county.
Mr. MacIsaac stated that one of the largest oil companies will be here this summer to do deep testing. He noted that there is interest and willingness to invest should prove the wisdom of this survey.

NEW LETTER
ernment all or part of their personal and corporation income tax fields and succession duties in return for flat annual payments.
Under the new system, the federal government would make equalization contributions to the provinces to bring provincial per capita revenues up to a common level. It would allow deductibility against federal taxes of 10 per cent of personal income tax, nine per cent of corporation income tax and 50 per cent of succession duties in provinces imposing these taxes.
A province could rent any or all of these fields to the federal government. The federal-provincial agreements would run five years starting from April 1, 1957, expiry date of the rental pacts.

WILL HELP COLLECTION
Among the modest federal concessions set out in Prime Minister St. Laurent's newest letter, the main one in financial terms is a change in the way provincial taxes on insurance company premiums would be treated under the federal-provincial corporation tax deductibility setup.
This was estimated unofficially to give the provinces an estimated $15,000,000 a year in tax potential above the present arrangement.

collection facilities available for gathering provincial personal and corporation income tax. It will, under conditions laid out by the federal government its staff would collect these provincial taxes, charging the provinces an "agency fee." The scale of fees has not been determined.
The insurance change would work this way:
Under the present tax rental agreement, a non-renting province-Quebec has its corporation taxpayers deduct from their federal tax liability the tax on premiums. In the renting provinces, this is included in the general corporation tax field leased to Ottawa.
Under the federally proposed new arrangement, this tax would be outside the field of nine-per-cent corporation tax deductibility, meaning a province would be free to tax premiums without that revenue being taken off what it might get from the federal government.

FEELS NEEDS RECOGNIZED

Some other changes set out in Mr. Harris' memorandum:
1. The provinces altogether would get about $600,000 a year from a revision in the way tax revenue from non-residents of Canada is handled.
2. The provinces could get a fairly substantial amount from a provision changing the basis for dealing with private companies taken over by a provincial administration.

In his letter to the premiers, Mr. St. Laurent took issue with claims of the premiers of Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick that the January offer did not give enough weight to the fiscal needs of individual provinces. He said the cabinet feels "very substantial recognition" was given to this principle.
"We believe we should all have some experience in the practical application of these proposals before going on to consider other concepts of fiscal need," Mr. St. Laurent said.

ERIC NEWTON
To Lecture
Eric Newton, president of the British Section of the International Association of Art Critics, who is now on his third lecture tour in the U. S. A. under the auspices of the National Concert and Artists Corporation, will give a lecture open to the public in the auditorium of Prince of Wales College on Feb. 29.

Last year Mr. Newton was on a coast-to-coast Canadian tour at the invitation of the National Gallery of Canada, but unfortunately was unable to visit Charlottetown at that time. Overtures made by the Maritime Art Association in co-operation with the Art Society of P. E. Island through Mrs. Elizabeth Davies, president, has resulted in arrangements being made for the appearance of the noted Art Critic and lecturer here.

News media he said, are not much better because of their often salacious secretary and their ceaseless search after sensations that will increase circulation.
Mr. Berry praised the CBC "in its efforts to build up rather than destroy, the best in Canadian culture."
People in the prairies were criticized by Rev. Homer Lane of Saskatoon, for their gambling habits. He said people who sponsor such charity games as "king-bingo, rinko and halo" are often leading church members but do not heed the Counsels of their church. He said games violate the Criminal Code.

Sin is on the increase in Vancouver, said Rev. Robert S. Christie, assistant secretary for Vancouver. He said there has been more drug trafficking and addiction, more alcoholism, irregularities in the police force and more juvenile delinquency.

NEGROES HELD FOR BOYCOTT OF BUS LINE
By REX THOMAS
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Negro religious and political leaders, including 10 ministers, were arrested on boycotting charges Wednesday in a wholesale roundup of defendants indicted by a grand jury for their mass protest against bus segregation.
The grand jury returned indictments Tuesday against 115 defendants accused of taking an active part in the 11-week-long racial boycott against Montgomery City Lines buses.
Dates for their trials will be taken up Friday at their arraignment.
Thousands of Negroes have refused to ride the buses since Dec. 5, the day a member of their race, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was fined $14 for refusing to move to the colored section of a bus. City and state laws require segregation.

UNITED CHURCH EVANGELISM AND SOCIAL SERVICE BOARD MEETS
TORONTO (CP) - The United Church of Canada's board of evangelism and social service met Tuesday for its annual meeting and discussed a wide range of topics from automation to church giving.
Board members had something to say on television, advertising, news media, the CBC, prairies gambling working mothers, bachelors male and female and Vancouver sin besides automation and church giving.
Rev. J. R. Mutchmore, board secretary, chose automation, working mothers, television and bachelors.
He attacked automation and television because he said, one creates robots and the other weak minds and empty heads. He said working mothers should stay home and look after their children and check school to do something to help the "lonesome and lost" bachelors of both sexes in our larger cities to feel they have some part in our community.
Rev. W. G. Barry, the board's associate secretary, said advertising news, media, the CBC, prairies gambling working mothers, bachelors male and female and Vancouver sin besides automation and church giving.
Mr. Berry praised the CBC "in its efforts to build up rather than destroy, the best in Canadian culture."
People in the prairies were criticized by Rev. Homer Lane of Saskatoon, for their gambling habits. He said people who sponsor such charity games as "king-bingo, rinko and halo" are often leading church members but do not heed the Counsels of their church. He
