WOULD BE A SISTER TO HIM.

But the Blue-Eyed Party Was Surprised When Taken at Her Word.

The average girl who has no scruples in keeping half a dozen admirers on the string at one time has many strange peculiarities. Conspicuous among them is her propensity for putting off a fellow month after month, until the thing gets to be monotonous. She hates to see him go, somehow, though she knows from the beginning she's not willing to go with him. A young man of Richmond, Va., a few days ago proved himself the victor in a rather unpleasant feature of the programme, says the Times. For some time he had been screwing up his courage to spring the all-important question. H thought he could see the way perfectly clear, for his Venus had been especially nice to him since the Lenten season. One evening he worked himself up to the point and determined to have some kind of an answer. The usual amount of eloquence having been exhausted, the romantic young man was in the act of appropriating one of the maiden's lily-white hands for a quiet, harmless little game of palmistry.

"No, no," said the blue-eyed girl, shrinking slightly from her admirer. Then she assumed a motherly kind of attitude, as though to give a wandering boy a bit of advice, and said:

"Now, George, you know I'm devoted to you in a way, and I'll always be your friend——"

"I don't like friends," broke in the young man.

"You don't?"

"No, they're too expensive."

"Then, I want it understood that hereafter I'm your sister."

"Agreed," said George, and they sealed the contract with a cordial grasp of the hand.

The next morning the young lady received a bulky-looking package. The address was in George's handwriting. "Bless his dear heart!" she said, opening the bundle. To her great surprise the usual box of roses was this time substituted by a different article. Half a dozen pairs of black socks, each with a little hole in the toe or heel, as if by way of ventilation, caused the girl to open her eyes in "holy horror." Inclosed in the bundle was the following note:

MY VERY DEAR SISTER—Won't you darn these indispensable articles for me? Am in no hurry for them, so take your time. Affectionately, your brother GEORGE.

JEFF DAVIS'S GOODNESS.

He Found That Some of His Slaves Were Masons and Set Them Free.

"I guess you never heard of how Jefferson Davis freed a lot of niggers long before the thought of freeing the blacks in this country was anything more than a chimerical dream in the minds of some New England Puritans, did you?" inquired Major L. H. Carson, of Nashville, Tenn., of a St. Louis reporter. "It may be a fairy tale, or it may not, but, anyhow, it will bear repeating:

"As I received the story direct from my grandfather, who claimed to know all the circumstances, it ran about this way: While a young man, and soon after moving from his native home in Kentucky to his plantation in Mississippi, Jeff Davis bought a cargo of blacks, just brought over from Africa by a slave-trader, who ran the blockade and landed them in New Orleans. While they were working in the cotton fields one day, Mr. Davis observed his new negroes making Masonic signs of distress to the overseer. That individual, not being a Mason, thought the negroes were only carrying on a system of signals preparatory to revolt, and was about to have them whipped.

Mr. Davis stopped this proceeding. He tested the negroes thoroughly, and, to his amazement, discovered that they were Third-Degree Masons, though brought from the very heart of Africa. Being a Mason himself, you can understand that he lost no time in giving them their freedom and the choice of either returning to Africa or remaining on his estate until he could provide for them in some other way. Most of them shipped to Africa at Davis's expense, though some of them remained with him until the end.

"Now, if this story is true—and I don't doubt it—how did Masonry find its way into the heart of Africa? I have often thought it strange that the Masons have never investigated this matter."

The Small Change of Life.

Did you ever have a five-dollar bill and no small change, and want to pay for a street car ride? Did you ever before realize how handy five-cent pieces are? Did you ever try to change your five-dollar bill at three or four little suburban shops and fail? If you did, you will never again neglect to keep yourself in small change. There is another kind of small change which one needs, the little courtesies, the small considerations, the trifling gentlenesses of life, which are such sweet and grateful currency. Sometimes I hear a five dollar bill philanthropist talking of great plans for the amelioration of mankind, and I wonder if he has any small change, a five cent kiss for his wife at morning and night, a two cent gratitude to the servant who brushes his clothes and ministers at his table, a few coppers' worth of sympathy in his son's ambitions and his daughter's dreams, a penn'orth of praise for his busy clerk or his attentive secretary. Perhaps he has, and perhaps he hasn't; perhaps he may some day want a lift along life's road and have no small change at all, and his feet may be weary and his heart sad even though he has still his large and unavailable philanthropy.—Lady Gay, in Saturday Night.

Animal Psychology.

An English scientist has devoted years of study to the development of the character of animals. The subject is an interesting one, no doubt, but Mr. Tarton seems to be gifted with an unusually vivid imagination. He took hens' eggs, for example, and had them hatched by crows, falcons, owls and magpies. He says from his observations that the male birds thus hatched partook of the qualities of their respective hatchers. A rooster hatched by a falcon is described as showing abnormal fierceness and daring, while another hatched by an owl was cowardly and shy, those hatched by the magpie being characterized as hopping about constantly, as if endowed with unnatural gaiety.

A Tall Sheep Story.

Some extraordinary but well-authenticated stories of the Bank of France are related. One day a sheep ate up a 100-franc note belonging to a butcher. The butcher ran into the house of a friend, seized a gun and shot the sheep. He had no sooner done this than the owner of the gun rushed up. "That was an expensive shot of yours for me," he said. "What do you mean?" asked the butcher. "Well," said the other, "I had 70 francs in bills hidden in the barrel of that gun!" The sheep's carcass was pretty thoroughly searched, and enough of the pieces of the notes recovered so that the bank redeemed them all.

Chester Looms was Crippled with Kidney Disease—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured him—They were Never Known to Fail.

NEWCOMB MILLS, June 18.—Chester Looms, a well known farmer living near here, has for years been afflicted with kidney disease, so badly that he could not sit in a buggy to drive to town. As he is 69 years old he despaired of a cure. He tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured him. He has not done any farm work for years, but he helped to put in this spring's crops, and anyone who goes to see him to-day will find him betwee the plough-handles instead of laid out on a bed or an easy chair as he used to be.

A lady will sometimes spend hours selecting dress goods. She is not desirous of giving trouble at all. But there are conflicting claims. There are considerations of durability, of texture, of draping Priestley's dress fabrics have reached a niche in the popular esteem when conflict ceases to vex. It is enough to get Priestley's black dress goods to feel confident that you have the best. They wear better than any other make.

The ladies of Charlottetown are asking for Priestley's dress materials for they are learning that no other black dress fabrics will give the same satisfaction. They drape with a softness and grace that gives perfect delight to a lady of taste and being made of silk and wool so artfully interwoven a garment of Priestley's dress goods has an air of refinement about it as long as there is anything left of it.
