

SEVEN OF 10
BACK ROYALTY

LONDON (Reuters) — Seven out of 10 Britons are in favor of royalty, though the number of republicans in Britain is increasing, a survey published here disclosed.

The figures showed that 16 per cent of the population, six per cent more than in 1960, now would vote for a republic.

London businessman Leonard Harris, who commissioned the survey among 3,300 people for his book, Long to Reign Over us?, said the main reason given was that royalty was too expensive.

Among royalists was a strong opinion that the Royal Family must work and be seen "to earn their keep."

Prince Philip headed the personal popularity poll with 51 per cent of votes compared with the Queen's 28 per cent.

Prince Philip is praised for his dislike of fuss and ceremony.

Eskimo Men
In Labrador
Going Blind

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A three-year medical study by British physician Dr. Arnold Freedman has shown 90 per cent of Eskimo men in Labrador begin to go blind at the age of 40 because of a mysterious disease, the cause of which is unknown.

The medical post says Dr. Freedman, working under the sponsorship of the International Grenfell Association, the Newfoundland Health Department and the E. A. Baker Foundation, gathered his findings from headquarters set up in 1963 at Happy Valley, Labrador.

They show most Eskimo men contract the disease, except those who hold indoor jobs. It was first believed to be related to snowblindness, but this theory was later disproved.

Other ideas advanced in Dr. Freedman's report are that the intense cold of the north—50 degrees below zero at times—might be the cause, or that needle-like snow particles might be causing eye damage when driven against the eyes by high winds.

Known as Labrador keratopathy, the ailment causes a film to form at the edge of the eye and advance with age across the eye until the sufferer can only count the fingers on his hand by holding it up against a strong sun.

Nfld. Teachers
Discuss Salary

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The Newfoundland Teachers' Association, seeking wage increases in a brief to the provincial government, claims the janitor at one city school is making more money than 40 of the 55 teachers the school employs.

The NTA did not identify the school involved, but the 22-page brief in booklet form warns that "Unless the government adopts a policy on teachers salaries which is more than generous, the tremendous sums of money already spent on education will have been, in large measure, spent in vain."

Almost 70 per cent of the teachers in Newfoundland schools have less than two years training and, at the present rate, it will take 65 years for upgrading programs to put qualified personnel in all classrooms in the province.

Compared to an average across Canada, excluding Alberta, of $5,400 annually, Newfoundland teachers' salaries average little more than $3,000. The brief says there is a wide disparity between salaries for regular teachers and those paid instructors in trades schools, the newly-opened college of fishing, navigation, marine engineering and electronics, and Memorial University.

It says lack of financial incentive is causing a drop in the number of male education students and the province needs 300 new teachers a year to meet increased enrolment, expected to skyrocket in 1970.

RECONSIDER PROPOSAL

THE HAGUE (Reuters)—A government proposal in July to double the annual state income of Queen Juliana to 5,200,000 guilders ($1,400,000) is being reconsidered after criticism that it was untimely in view of The Netherlands' economy drive, press reports said Saturday. The proposal also included an increase in income for Queen Juliana's husband, Prince Bernhard, to 475,000 guilders ($143,000).
