Thus and That.

Cousin-marrying—that abominable thing—must be put a stop to. Go thou to R. R. station (vicinity) and know that God and nature do curse it with a curse.

Lobster-cannery managers should have a direct pecuniary interest in the business, to the end that it may prosper and may last, and that the law may be decently well observed. In that case many thousand of baby lobsters would not, as now, be bought and boxed. Such, though gotten for nothing, could not be canned to profit.

Rum advocates say it is absurd to permit the importation whilst forbidding the sale of intoxicants. Perhaps it is; here is the remedy. Let the people have by Act of Parliament the right on application to deal with the whole matter—importation, manufacture, sale—the people say of P. E. Island (not as now with the sale only) in one general plebiscite for the Island; let temperance workers labor for this, "only this and nothing more," and the right conceded and availed of, a consistent rum policy would obtain. P. E. Islanders would then put the evil thing far from them—in the legal sense at least. God help them to put and to keep it away in very deed—to do it now, henceforth and forever!

East Point has theme for poet and for novelist. An East Point man of eighty tells of there being visible there, when he was young, part of the hull of a ship stranded, nobody then or since knew when; of the finding of small cannon shot, etc., thereabouts, and, sad to say, that in the woods adjacent, numerous human skeletons were discovered from time to time in his early days, some with the rusty remnant of a musket beside each, another with a sword, another with a kettle—skeletons presumably of some of those who escaped from the green dragon of the sea to perish miserably upon the land. Now for another. About twenty-six years ago, the East Pointers made another, and more interesting discovery. Digging, they unearthed an Indian grave—a chief most likely, or all that remained of his mortal part, together with what remained of what had been buried with him, to wit—his head dress of feathers, (quite a bunch), his hair, his teeth, (his bones were bones no longer), his water flask, (earthen), the bowl of a pipe, some very small cakes of paint, (such, doubtless, as they used to beautify (?) the visage), a pouch containing some nuts, (hazel, it is believed), the hairy remnant of some animal's skin, a small role of woollen cloth, his gun and his tomahawk, (the last two represented by shapeless lumps and by particles of rust), and last, but not least, the birch-bark coffin that contained them all, and which was in a good state of preservation. The grave was just about where the East Point lobster factory of to-day is located, at what, by that time, had become the edge of the land facing the ocean. An end of the coffin was seen to protrude from the bank; curiosity led to investigation and discovery. Owing to the blowing away of the light overlying soil, and from other natural causes, the remains were almost at the surface at the time. What became of them? Well, sir, the coffin was left (it was only birch bark, you know) and the contents taken to a house in the neighborhood, put into an old tool chest and some days after thrown into the sea, put back just where they were got, or into some other hole, put out of sight and out of mind somewhere, anywhere, so the parties were rid of them, and the row they had kicked up in the tool chest and in and about the house. In a word, the precious, priceless relics are gone—have been destroyed. Ignorance, the brute and superstition born of ignorance, and dread offspring of superstition, have robbed the present and the future of those exhibits and mementoes of the past.

It must be in the recollection of certain Charlottetown gentlemen that they formed themselves into an Historical Society some time ago, for P. E. Island. If that Ripvan-Winkle association be not dead but sleepeth, possibly it might be shaken into consciousness enough to engage certain men or certain women, in certain localities, to serve as receivers of historical relics for transmission to head-quarters—to interview aged residents and generally to act con amore, in the interests of historical enquiry and research.

Farewell Address.

TO THE REV. J. A. DAFOE, CHAPLAIN AND DEPUTY OF HUNTER RIVER SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

REVEREND SIR AND BROTHER,—It is with deep regret we learn that you are about to remove from us to occupy a field of labor in the far West. In severing your connection from us we lose a strong advocate of temperance, and one who has done much to advance the interest of total abstinence, and prohibition in this Province.

The members of this Division feel that they are deeply indebted to you for the many pleasant and profitable hours spent together, as to you chiefly this Division owes its existence.

You will please accept this purse, containing twenty-five dollars, as a small token of our appreciation of your noble efforts to advance the cause of Temperance and the general well being of the community; and rest assured that your name will be long cherished and fondly remembered by the officers and members of Hunter River Division.

Signed on their behalf,

SIMON BROWN, W. P.

REPLY.

TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE Hunter River Division of the Sons of Temperance.

MY DEAR FRIENDS,—In reply to your very kindly, though flatteringly worded address, and in recognition of the valuable token just received at your hands, permit me to give you my sincere thanks. If the members of the Hunter River Division feel an indebtedness to me for my feeble efforts to do good in their community, I wish to acknowledge to a like feeling, not only for this parting act of kindness, which I so highly appreciate, but for many others, coming from the people of Hunter River quite generally and at different intervals during my stay among you. If the cause of temperance has advanced in your midst, it is not to be attributed to my personal efforts alone. I met with willing and able helpers among the members of the division; and because of the way you so nobly stood by me and the cause of right, a feeling of respect and attachment has been awakened in my heart towards you, that neither time nor distance can efface. I will long remember the many pleasant hours of association with you in the division; and will ever hope and pray for your continued peace and prosperity, both as individuals and as an organization laboring to free our country from the scourge of intemperance.

I remain yours in the principles of Love, Purity and Fidelity.

J. A. DAFOE.

Public Meetings in Ireland.

In a recent letter, His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland says that he has been compelled to review carefully the events connected with the various meetings which have been summoned in the North of Ireland, and the action of the Irish Government in dealing with them. It has been his desire to permit public meetings to be held in Ireland, and he has only exercised the power conferred upon him of stopping them when no other means was open of preserving law and order. It would appear, however, that the Orange body in the North of Ireland have now adopted the deliberate policy of calling a counter demonstration to be held at the same time and in the immediate neighborhood of every meeting to the objects and promoters of which they are opposed. This policy has led and must, in the opinion of His Excellency, always lead to the most serious risk to property and life, which cannot with certainty be protected, even by great bodies of military and police, when both meetings are allowed to go on. On the other hand, His Excellency cannot permit any direct or indirect interference with the discretion which he reserves to the Government of deciding whether a meeting shall or shall not be allowed to take place. His Excellency, therefore, cannot permit such action to be taken by the Orange party or any other party in the country. If His Excellency sees no reason to prohibit a meeting, he will not, as a rule, allow any counter demonstration to be held in the same neighborhood on the same day. The counter demonstration will not be interfered with, provided there is no objection to it on other grounds (if held at a time and place which will not bring hostile bodies into close proximity), and will itself be similarly prohibited. His Excellency was unwilling to adopt this course at Newry, as he thought that sufficient notice of the reasons for his proposed action should be given. But he now desires distinctly to give notice to the Orange body, represented by your lordship, and to the other bodies which may contemplate counter demonstrations to meetings which, if held alone, would not be interfered with by the government, that in the policy which he will pursue with the object of maintaining the right of public meeting and of preserving peace—objects which he ventures to hope that your lordship and those who act with you will agree with him in thinking of paramount importance to the people of this country.

The whirligig of time, says the Boston Advertiser, casts statesmen often into unaccustomed places.
